commodities at the time of transportation. This suggestion, however, simply invites us, under the assumption that Congress had a particular intention in enacting the clause, to so construe the clause as to cause it to be essential to decide the grave constitutional questions which we have hitherto pointed out. On the contrary, as the prohibitions concerning ownership in whole or in part, and interest, direct or indirect, are susceptible only of the construction that the dissociation of the carrier with the products which it transports was contemplated, our duty is, if possible, to treat the other and apparently conflicting prohibitions as embracing a like purpose, and thus harmonize the provisions of the clause and prevent the necessity of approaching and passing upon the grave constitutional questions which would necessarily arise from pursuing the contrary course. This, it is urged, cannot be done, since to do so would be in effect to expunge the prohibitions against manufacturing, mining, and production from the clause, as ownership in whole or in part or interest, direct or indirect, would embrace everything which could possibly have been intended to be expressed by the terms manufacturing, mining, and production, if the proposed reconciliation of the conflict between the prohibitions be brought about. We think, however, that a brief reference to a ruling of this court concerning the effect of the interstate commerce law prior to its amendment by the Hepburn act, will serve to make clear the unsoundness of the proposition. The case referred to is that of New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272. In that case, after much consideration, it was held that the prohibitions of the interstate commerce *act as to uniformity of rates and against rebates operated to prevent a carrier engaged in interstate commerce from buying and selling a commodity which it carried in such a way as to frustrate the provisions of the act, even if the effect of applying the act would be substantially to render buying and selling by an interstate carrier of a commodity which it transported practically impossible. In thus deciding, however, it became necessary (pp. 399, 400) to refer to rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission construing the act to regulate commerce, made not long after the enactment of the statute, in which it was held that where interstate commerce carriers were engaged in manufacturing, mining, producing, and carrying commodities in virtue of state charters authorizing them so to do, granted prior to the enactment of the act to regulate commerce, that act could not be applied without confiscation, except in so far as the requirement of reasonableness of rates was concerned. While referring to those administrative rulings, and declaring that, in view of their long standing, the construction which had been thus given to the act should not be departed from, "at least, until Congress has legislated on the subject" (p. 401), it was nevertheless plainly intimated that legislation which compelled a carrier, even although authorized by its charter before the passage of the act to regulate commerce to engage in the production as well as transportation of commodities, to dissociate itself before transportation from the products which it manufactured, mined, or produced, would not, when enforced by proper rules and regulations, amount to confiscation. When, therefore, the subject of ownership, in whole or in part, or the interest of a carrier, direct or indirect, in the product which it transported, came to be considered, and the duty to dissociate before transportation came to be legislatively imposed, it is quite natural, in view of the prior administrative rulings and the intimations of this court, conveyed in the opinion in the New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. Case, to assume that the provisions as to manufacturing, mining, and production, while they may be somewhat redundant, were nevertheless expressed *for the[412 purpose of leaving no possible room for the implication that it was not the intention to include ownership resulting from manufacture, mining, production, etc., even although the right to manufacture, mine, and produce was sanctioned by state charters prior to the enactment of the act to regulate commerce. Looking at the statute from another point of view the same result is compelled. Certain it is that we could not construe the statute literally without bringing about the irreconcilable conflict between its provisions which we had previously pointed out, and therefore some rule of construction is essential to be adopted in order that the statute may have a harmonious operation. Under these circumstances, in view of the far-reaching effect to arise from giving to the first two prohibitions a meaning wholly antagonistic to the remaining ones, we think our duty requires that we should treat the prohibitions as having a common purpose; that is, the dissociation of railroad companies, prior to transportation, from articles or commodities, whether the association resulted from manufacture, mining, production, or ownership, or interest, direct or indirect. In other words, in view of the ambiguity and confusion in the statute, we think the duty of interpreting should not be so exerted as to cause one portion of the statute which, as conceded by the government, is radical and far-reaching in its operation if literally construed, to extend and enlarge another portion of the statute which seems reasonable and free from doubt if also literally interpreted. Rather it seems to us our duty is to restrain the wider, and, as we think, doubtful prohibitions, so as make them accord with the narrow and more reasonable provisions, and thus harmonize the statute.

Nor is there force in the contention that because the going into effect of the clause was postponed for a period of nearly two years, therefore the far-reaching and radical effects which the government attributes to the clause must have been contemplated by Congress. We think, on the contrary, it is reasonable to infer, in view of the facts disclosed in the statement which we have previously excerpted, that the delay accorded 413] is entirely consistent with the assumption that it was so granted to afford the time essential to make the changes which would be required to conform to the commands of the clause as we have interpreted it, such as providing the facilities for dissociation by sale at the point of production before transportation or segregation by means of the organization of bona fide manufacturing, mining, or producing corporations.

It remains to determine the nature and character of the interest embraced in the words "in which it is interested, directly or indirectly." The contention of the government that the clause forbids a railroad company to transport any commodity manufactured, mined, or produced, or owned in whole or in part, etc., by a bona fide corporation in which the transporting carrier holds a stock interest, however small, is based upon the assumption that such prohibition is embraced in the words we are considering. The opposing contention, however, is that interest, direct or indirect, includes only commodities in which a carrier has a legal interest, and therefore does not exclude the right to carry commodities which have been manufactured, mined, produced or owned by a separate and distinct corporation, simply because the transporting carrier may be interested in the producing, etc., corporation as an owner of stock therein. If the words in question are to be taken as embracing only a legal or equitable interest in the commodities to which they refer, they cannot be held to include commodities manufactured, mined, produced, or owned, etc., by a distinct corporation merely because of a stock ownership of the carrier. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 588, 29 L. ed. 499, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728. And that this is well settled also in the law of Pennsylvania is not questioned. 53 L. ed.

It is unnecessary to pursue the subject in more detail, since it is conceded in the argument for the government that, if the clause embraces only a legal interest in an article or commodity, it cannot be held to include a prohibition against carrying a commodity simply because it had been manufactured, mined, or produced, or is owned by a corporation in *which the carrier is a stock-[414 holder. The contention of the government substantially rests upon the assumption that, unless the words be given the meaning contended for, they are without significance. That this is clearly not the case is well illustrated by the New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. Case, supra. In that case the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company it was shown at one time not only directly engaged in buying, selling, and transporting coal, but subsequently, when a statute was passed in West Virginia prohibiting such dealings, it resorted to indirect methods for the continuance of its previous practice. It may well be that the very object of the provision was to reach and render impossible the successful employment of methods of the character referred to. Certain it is, however, that, in the legislative progress of the clause in the Senate, where the clause originated, an amendment in specific terms, causing the clause to embrace stock ownership, was rejected, and immediately upon such rejection an amendment, expressly declaring that interest, direct or indirect, was intended, among other things, to embrace the prohibition of carrying a commodity manufactured, mined, produced, or owned by a corporation in which a railroad company was interested as a stockholder, was also rejected. 40 Cong. Rec. pt. 7, pp. 7012-7014. And the considerations just stated, we think, completely dispose of the contention that stock ownership must have been in the mind of Congress, and therefore must be treated as though embraced within the evil intended to be remedied, since it cannot in reason be assumed that there is a duty to extend the meaning of a statute beyond its legal sense, upon the theory that a provision which was expressly excluded was intended to be included. If it be that the mind of Congress was fixed on the transportation by a carrier of any commodity produced by a corporation in which the carrier held stock, then we think the failure to provide for such a contingency in express language gives rise to the implication that it was not the purpose to include it. At all events, in view of the far-reaching consequences of giving the statute such a construction as that contended for, as indicated by the *statement[415 taken from the answers and returns which we have previously inserted in the margin, and of the questions of constitutional power which would arise if that construction was adopted, we hold the contention of the government not well founded.

We then construe the statute as prohibiting a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce from transporting in such commerce articles or commodities under the following circumstances and conditions: (a) When the article or commodity has been manufactured, mined, or produced by a carrier or under its authority, and, at the time of transportation, the carrier has not, in good faith, before the act of transportation, dissociated itself from such article or commodity; (b) When the carrier owns the article or commodity to be transported, in whole or in part; (c) When the carrier, at the time of transportation, has an interest, direct or indirect, in a legal or equitable sense, in the article or commodity, not including, therefore, articles or commodities manufactured, mined, produced, or owned, etc., by a bona fide corporation in which the railroad company is a stockholder.

The question then arises whether, as thus construed, the statute was inherently within the power of Congress to enact as a regulation of commerce. That it was, we think is apparent; and if reference to authority to so demonstrate is necessary, it is afforded by a consideration of the ruling in the New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. Case, to which we have previously referred. We do not say this upon the assumption that, by the grant of power to regulate commerce, the authority of the government of the United States has been unduly limited, on the one hand, and inordinately extended, on the other, nor do we rest it upon the hypothesis that the power conferred embraces the right to absolutely prohibit the movement between the states of lawful commodities, or to destroy the governmental power of the states as to subjects within their jurisdiction, however remotely and indirectly the exercise of such powers may touch interstate commerce. On the contrary, putting these considerations entirely ⁴¹⁶out of mind, the conclusion just previously stated rests upon what we deem to be the obvious result of the statute as we have interpreted it; that it merely and unequivocally is confined to a regulation which Congress had the power to adopt and to which all pre-existing rights of the railroad companies were subordinated. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

We think it unnecessary to consider at length the contentions based upon the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. In form of statement those contentions apparently rest upon the ruinous consequences which it is assumed would be operated upon the property rights of the carriers by the enforcement of the clause, interpreted as the government construed it. For the purpose of our consideration of the subject it may be conceded, as insisted on behalf of the United States, that these contentions proceed upon the mistaken and baleful conception that inconvenience, not power, is the criterion by which to test the constitutionality of legislation. When, however, mere forms of statement are put aside and the real scope of the argument at bar is grasped, we think it becomes clear that, in substance and effect, the argument really asserts that the clause, as construed by the government, is not a regulation of commerce, since it transcends the limits of regulation and embraces absolute prohibitions, which, it is insisted, could not be exerted in virtue of the authority to regulate. The whole support upon which the propositions and the arguments rest hence disappears as a result of the construction which we have given the statute. Through abundance of caution we repeat that our ruling here made is confined to the question before us. Because, therefore, in pointing out and applying to the statute the true rule of construction, we have indicated the grave constitutional questions which would be presented if we departed from that rule, we must not be considered as having decided those questions. We have not entered into their consideration, as it was unnecessary for us to do so.

Without elaborating, we hold the contention that the clause *under considera-^[417]tion is void because of the exception as to timber, and the manufactured products thereof, is without merit. Deciding, as we do, that the clause, as construed was a lawful exercise by Congress of the power to regulate commerce, we know of no constitutional limitation requiring that such a regulation, when adopted, should be applied to all commodities alike. It follows that even if we gave heed to the many reasons of expedience which have been suggested in argument against the exception, and the injustice and favoritism which it is asserted will be operated thereby, that fact can have no weight in passing upon the question of power. And the same reasons also dispose of the contention that the clause is void as a discrimination between carriers.

With reference to the contention that the commodities clause is void because of the nature and character of the penalties which it imposes for violations of its provisions, within the ruling in Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, we think it also suffices to say that even if the delay which the clause provided should elapse between its enactment and the going into effect of the same does not absolutely exclude the clause from the ruling in Ex parte Young,—a question which we do not feel called upon to decide,—nevertheless the proposition is without merit, because (a) no penalties are sought to be recovered in these cases, and (b) the question of the constitutionality of the clause relating to penalties is wholly separable from the remainder of the clause, and, therefore, may be left to be determined should an effort to enforce such penalties be made.

There is a contention as to one of the defendants, the Delaware & Hudson Company, to which we, at the outset, referred, which requires to be particularly noticed. Under the charters granted to the company by the states of New York and Pennsylvania, it was authorized to secure coal lands and mine coal, and, without going into detail, was originally authorized to construct a canal, and, ultimately, a railroad for the purpose of transporting, for its own account, the products of its mines; and, undoubtedly, vast sums of money have been invested [418]*in carrying out these purposes. It is true also that the company is the owner of stock in various coal corporations. The claim now to be disposed of is that, by the true construction of its charters, the Delaware & Hudson Company is not a railroad company within the meaning of the term as used in the commodities clause, but is really a coal company. The contention, we think, is without merit. The facts stated in the excerpts from the answer and returns of the company, which we have previously placed in the margin, leave no doubt that the corporation was engaged as a common carrier by rail in the transportation of coal in the channels of interstate commerce, and as such we think it was a railroad company within the purview of the clause, and subject to the regulations which are embodied therein, as we have interpreted them.

As the court below held the statute wholly void for repugnancy to the Constitution, it follows from the views which we have expressed that the judgments and the decrees entered below must be reversed. As, however, it was conceded in the discussion at bar that, in view of the public and private interests which were concerned, the United States did not seek to enforce the penalties of the statute, but commenced these proceedings with the object and purpose of settling the differences between it and the defendants, concerning the meaning of the commodities clause and the power of Congress to enact it, as correctly interpreted, and upon this view the proceedings were heard below by submission upon the pleadings, we are of opinion that the ends of justice will be subserved not by reversing and remanding with particular directions as to each of the defendants, but by reversing and remanding with directions for such further proceedings as may be necessary to apply and enforce the statute as we have interpreted it.

And it is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

As these cases have been determined wholly on the construction of those parts of the Hepburn act [34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 892] which are here in question, *and as [419 Congress if it sees fit, may meet that construction by additional legislation, I deem it unnecessary to enter upon an extended discussion of the various questions arising upon the record, and will content myself simply with an expression of my nonconcurrence in the view taken by the court as to the meaning and scope of certain provisions of the act. In my judgment the act, reasonably and properly construed, according to its language, includes within its prohibitions a railroad company transporting coal, if, at the time, it is the owner, legally or equitably, of stock—certainly, if it owns a majority or all the stock—in the company which mined, manufactured, or produced, and then owns, the coal which is being transported by such railroad company. Any other view of the act will enable the transporting railroad company, by one device or another, to defeat altogether the purpose which Congress had in view, which was to divorce, in a real, substantial sense, production and transportation, and thereby to prevent the transporting company from doing injustice to other owners of coal.

ELEANOR ERICA STRONG and Richard P. Strong, Her Husband, Plffs. in Err. and Appts.,

v.

FRANCISCO GUTIERREZ REPIDE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 419-435.)

Appcal and error — review of facts.

1. The facts, when the courts below differ, will be reviewed by the Federal Su-

NOTE.—On concealment as fraud—see note to Cleaveland v. Smith, 33 L. ed. U. S. 384.

Fraud in purchase of stock by corporate officer or director.

A sharp conflict exists over the question whether the relations between a director or officer of a corporation, on the one hand, and shareholders, on the other, are not of such a fiduciary relation as to make it the duty of the former to disclose the knowl-preme Court under the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), § 10, on appeal from or writ of error to the judgment of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4889-4891, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Fraud — concealment — purchase of stock by director.

2. A purchase of stock in a corporation by a director and owner of three fourths of the entire capital stock, who was also administrator general of the company, and engaged in the negotiations which finally led to the sale of the company's lands to the Philippine Islands government at a price which greatly enhanced the value of the stock, was fraudulent as procured by "insidious machinations" inducing the execution of the contract of sale, within the edge which he possesses affecting the value of the stock before he purchases such stock from a shareholder.

The pioneer case on this precise question is Tippecanoe County v. Reynolds, 44 Ind. 509, where it was held that a director and officer of a corporation is not a trustee of the shareholders with respect to their stock, so as to make it his duty, when purchasing such stock, to pay an adequate and fair price for it, to take no advantage of the relation which he bears to the company or the knowledge acquired thereby, and to disclose to the shareholder all the material facts within his knowledge not known to such shareholder, which affect the value of the stock.

Other cases are to the same effect. Thus, it has been held that an officer of a corporation does not sustain a relation to a shareholder as requires him, when purchasing the latter's stock, to disclose its value. O'Neil v. Ternes, 32 Wash. 528, 73 Pac. 692.

So, in Haarstick v. Fox, 9 Utah, 110, 33 Pac. 251, it is held that there is no confidential relation between the president of a corporation and a stockholder, so far as a purchase of stock by the former from the latter is concerned; and so long as such officer remains silent, and does not actively mislead the stockholder, the transaction cannot be set aside.

And, in Walsh v. Goulden, 130 Mich. 531, 90 N. W. 406, the court said that, while directors stand in a fiduciary relation to the corporation itself, they do not stand in that relation when dealing with other stockholders for the purchase or sale of stock. In such transactions there must be some actual misrepresentation to constitute fraud. Mere silence is not sufficient.

So, in Hooker v. Midland Steel Co. 215 Ill. 444, 106 Am. St. Rep. 170, 74 N. E. 445, it was held that a director does not sustain a fiduciary relation to an individual stockholder with respect to his stock, and that a purchase of the latter's stock will not be set aside for the mere failure on the part of the director to disclose any information he may have, affecting the value of such stock, meaning of P. I. Code, art. 1269, defining deceit, where he employed an agent to make the purchase, concealing both his own identity as the purchaser, and his knowledge of the state of the negotiations and their probable successful result.

[For other cases, see Fraud and Deceit, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Fraud — concealment — purchase of stock.

3. The purchaser of corporate stock cannot escape liability for his fraud in concealing facts affecting its value which he was in good faith bound to disclose, on the theory that, because of the insistence of the seller that her agent was not authorized to make the sale, there had never been any consent on her part, obtained by fraud or otherwise, where the court finds that the agent's authority was sufficient, since,

And, so, officers and directors of a corporation have been held free to purchase stock from a shareholder on the same terms as others, and to avail themselves, in making such purchase, of their superior knowledge of the real value of the stock, or of their superior foresight as to its future value. Deaderick v. Wilson, 8 Baxt. 108.

In Krumbhaar v. Griffiths, 151 Pa. 223, 25 Atl. 64, the view of the master that no confidential relations exist between an officer of the corporation and one from whom such officer purchases stock is apparently approved, although the decision is actually based upon the master's finding that the director had no knowledge, at the time of the purchase, of any facts which would enhance the value of the stock.

And in Fisher v. Budlong, 10 R. I. 525, the court said that if an officer of a corporation goes to the shareholder, and, without making any representations, makes an offer of a certain sum, which the shareholder accepts, there is no ground for complaint. The very fact that a corporate officer, presumed to be acquainted fully with the condition of the corporation, offers a certain sum, should, though this court, put the seller on his guard, and lead him reasonably to suppose that he might obtain a better price.

The contrary view apparently first found expression in Oliver v. Oliver, 118 Ga. 362, 45 S. E. 232, where the relation of a director to a shareholder was held to be such that, in making a purchase of the latter's stock, the former is bound to make a full disclosure of any fact within his knowledge and unknown to the shareholder, which is of a character calculated to affect the selling price, and can, without detriment to the interests of the corporation, be imparted to the shareholder, the sources of information not being equally accessible to both parties. And this principle was applied to invalidate a purchase of shares by a director at $110 per share, where he concealed the fact that a sale of the entire plant was contemplated at a price which made the stock worth from $140 to $185 per share, in legal effect, her consent will be deemed induced by the fraud.

[For other cases, see Fraud and Deceit, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 110.]

Argued March 10, 11, 1909. Decided May 3, 1909.

IN ERROR to and APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the Court of First Instance of the City of Manila, dismissed the complaint in an action to recover certain shares of corporate stock from the purchaser on the ground that such shares were sold by plaintiff's agent without authority,

"To say," declared Lamar, J., in the case last cited, "that a director who has been placed where he himself may raise or depress the value of the stock, or in a position where he first knows of facts which may produce that result, may take advantage thereof, and buy from or sell to one whom he is directly representing, without making a full disclosure, and putting the stockholder on an equality of knowledge as to these facts, would offer a premium for faithless silence, and give a reward for the suppression of truth."

This view has also found its supporters, and it has been held that a director or managing officer of a corporation, having knowledge of the condition of the affairs of such corporation, because of the trust relation and the superior opportunities afforded for acquiring information, must inform a shareholder not actively engaged in the corporate management, of the true condition of the affairs of the corporation, before he can rightfully purchase the stock of such shareholder. Stewart v. Harris, 69 Kan. 498, 66 L.R.A. 261, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 77 Pac. 277, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 873.

And the law is said to make it the duty of an officer or director of a company, who is seeking to purchase from a shareholder the latter's holdings of stock, to disclose to the latter facts which have come to his knowledge by virtue of his relations to the company, and which are not known to the stockholder, and to disclose such plans and purposes as the corporation may have for the future which have a bearing upon the value of the stock. Steinfeld v. Nielson (Ariz.) 100 Pac. 1094.

In Carpenter v. Danforth, 19 Abb. Pr. 225, the court said that, although probably the relation of trustee and cestui que trust did not strictly exist between a trustee of a national bank and the administrator of a deceased cotrustee, yet, the relationship was such that where the former desired to buy the stock, he was bound to disclose to the administrator all the material facts within his knowledge which tended to enhance the value of the stock.

In another New York case the act of an and that the purchaser had fraudulently concealed facts affecting the value of such stock. Reversed. The judgment of the Court of First Instance affirmed.

See same case below, 6 Philippine, 680.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This action was commenced on the 12th day of January, 1904, in the court of first instance of the city of Manila, Philippine Islands, by the plaintiffs in error, Eleanor Erica Strong and Richard P. Strong her husband, against the defendant in error. It was brought by the plaintiff Mrs. Strong, as the owner of 800 shares of the capital stock of the Philippine Sugar Estates Development Company, Limited (the other plaintiff being added as her husband), to recover such officer of a corporation in procuring a transfer of stock to himself for a nominal consideration by stating that it was worthless, when in fact it was valuable, was held not to be, as a matter of law, a breach of any fiduciary relation, and of itself not a ground for avoiding the sale. Stark v. Soule, 9 N. Y. S. R. 555. The court, however, qualified its statement that there was no legal embarrassment in the way of the purchase, by a director, of stock from a shareholder, by adding that, in view of the superior means of knowledge of its value, slight circumstances showing a purchase, and which have the effect, to mislead the seller, resulting in a purchase much below its real value, might afford occasion for redress.

The rule which forbids a director or officer of a corporation from taking advantage of the knowledge which comes to him by virtue of his position when making a purchase of stock from a shareholder applies to a person who, though not an officer or director, controls the affairs of the corporation as a majority stockholder, through the board of directors. Steinfeld v. Nielson, supra.

There can, of course, be no room for the application of this rule where the sources of information are equally accessible to both parties.

To defeat a sale by a shareholder to an officer or director of a corporation on this ground, the misrepresentation must be of some fact not within the knowledge of the shareholder, or readily ascertainable by him, which will reasonably have the effect to bring about the sale or the nondisclosure must be of some fact not known to the shareholder, or presumptively not readily ascertainable by him, which he is entitled to know, and the nondisclosure of which may have put him at a disadvantage in his dealing. Steinfeld v. Nielson, supra.

A shareholder who was himself a director and president of the corporation cannot rescind a sale of his stock to codirectors for fraudulently inducing him to part with the stock at a low figure, where he was as well acquainted with the affairs of the corporation as they, and dealt with them in the be-shares from defendant (who was already the owner of 30,400 of the 42,030 shares issued by the company), on the ground that the shares had been sold and delivered by plaintiff's agent to the agent of defendant without authority from plaintiff; and also on the ground that defendant fraudulently concealed from plaintiff's agent, one F. Stuart Jones, facts affecting the value of the stock so sold and delivered. The stock was of the par value of $100 per share, Mexican currency.

The plaintiff never had any negotiations for the sale of the stock herself, and was ignorant that it was sold until some time after the sale, the negotiations for which took place between an agent of the plaintiff and an agent of defendant, the name of the defendant being undisclosed.

In addition to his ownership of almost three fourths of the shares of the stock of the company, the defendant was one of the five directors of the company, and was elected by the board the agent and administrator general of such company, "with exclusive intervention in the management" of its general business.

The defendant put in issue the lack of authority of the agent of the plaintiff, denied all fraud, and alleged that the purchase of the stock from plaintiff's agent (which stock was payable to bearer and transferable by delivery) was made by one Albert

Kauffman, who afterwards sold and conveyed the same to the *defendant, and that[422 the defendant, prior to the commencement of the suit, and prior to any demand made upon him by the plaintiff in error herein, had sold, transferred, and delivered the stock to Luis Gutierrez, a citizen and resident of Spain. (He was a brother of the defendant.)

In April, 1904, the case came on for trial in the court of first instance, which, on the 29th of that month, duly decided it and stated certain facts in the cause upon which it based its opinion and judgment, among which were the facts that the agent of the plaintiff had no authority to sell or transfer the shares of stock in question, and also that the transaction resulting in the delivery of the stock to the agent of the defendant was fraudulent, because the defendant concealed from the plaintiff's agent facts affecting the value of the stock which the defendant was in good faith bound to reveal, by reason of which the sale of the stock to defendant was made for the total sum of $16,000, Mexican currency, while within two months and a half the shares were worth $76,256, United States currency. Upon the findings the court directed that the plaintiff recover from the defendant the sum found to be due by the court, which (after deducting the $16,000, Mexican currency) amounted to $138,352.71, Philippine currency, and the costs of suit, and it was ordered that the lief that they were trying to force him to surrender his stock. Perry v. Pearson, 135 Ill. 218, 25 N. E. 636.

The secretary of a corporation, who was also a stockholder, cannot maintain an action against the others officers for fraudulent representations upon which he acted, and which were alleged to have been made to induce him to dispose of his stock to them at a loss where they amount merely to representations that the corporation was going down, that one had bought the other's shares, and was going to run the business as a family affair, and would depose the secretary, and that this was the last chance for him to get his money out; and the fact that he was not permitted to keep the books down to date, so that he did not know the actual state of the business, is immaterial. Boulden v. Stilwell, 100 Md. 543, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 258, 60 Atl. 609.

Financial distress of the shareholder does not make a purchase of his stock by a director or officer at an inadequate price a fraudulent one. Steinfeld v. Nielson, supra.

A sale of stock to a director is not so tainted with fraud as to be voidable because induced by an assessment upon the shareholder's subscription and threatened future assessments which may not be necessary for corporate purposes, and may not be enforced if the directors succeed in their efforts to purchase all the outstanding stock. Grant v. Attrill, 11 Fed. 469.

Concealing the purchaser's identity may, as in STRONG v. REPIDE, materially influence the court's decision.

A president of a corporation, who professes to aid a shareholder in selling his stock, and effects a sale thereof at a certain price, causing the transfer to be made to a third person whom the shareholder supposed to be the purchaser, but who really took it for the president, and afterwards transferred it to him, is liable to the shareholder for the difference between the real value of the stock and the price for which it was sold. Fisher v. Budlong, 10 R. I. 525.

So, a purchase of the stock of a corporation which was in process of voluntary dissolution and liquidation, by a former officer, who was also one of the trustees in the dissolution proceedings, and who was acting in such purchase through a third person, and as agent of his wife, was fraudulent, where he concealed the fact that, as such trustee, he had in his possession a dividend which had been declared upon such stock, and misrepresented the value of the corporate assets, and procured for $1,200 property worth $15,000. Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 29 L. ed. 467, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

No attempt has here been made to include cases where the question of fraud was considered entirely independently of the peculiar relation between officer and shareholder.

judgment might be satisfied by the delivery to the plaintiff, Mrs. Strong, of her 800 shares of stock within the time mentioned in the decree, in which event the plaintiff was to pay the defendant $16,000, Mexican currency, or its equivalent in Philippine currency. Other particulars were stated in the decree.

On May 3, 1904, a motion was made by defendant for a new trial, which, on May 9, 1904 was overruled.

A bill of exceptions was then made and appeal filed. Subsequently and on January 18, 1906, the same was duly argued in the supreme court of the Philippine Islands and, on April 28, 1906, a decision was rendered by the court, holding that the agent of the plaintiff had no power to sell or deliver her stock, and it affirmed the decree of the court 423]of first instance *on that ground, but not on the second ground taken by that court, that the sale of the stock through the plaintiff's agent had been procured by fraud on the part of the defendant.

Subsequently to the affirmance of the judgment, the defendant, through his counsel, made a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly-discovered evidence, which consisted of a power of attorney (that had been mislaid and after the trial had been found) from Mrs. Strong to Mr. F. Stuart Jones and Mr. Robert H. Wood, which authorized both, or either of them, to sell or otherwise dispose of the property of the plaintiff as they or he might choose. After opposition this motion was granted and leave given to the parties to submit new evidence as to the nature of the authority delegated by the plaintiff in error to her agent Jones, and under that permission the newly-discovered power of attorney was put in evidence. Upon that piece of evidence the court held that the authority of the agent Jones was sufficient, and that the paper became absolutely decisive of the issues in the case, and the order affirming the judgment of the court below was therefore set aside, the judgment of the court of first instance reversed, and the action dismissed upon its merits. From that decree of reversal and dismissal the plaintiffs seek to bring the case here for review, and have sued out a writ of error and taken an appeal.

The facts out of which the controversy arises are in substance these:

In 1902 it was thought important for the government of the United States to secure title, if reasonably possible, to what were called the friar lands in the Philippine Islands. To that end various inquiries were made on the part of the government, from time to time, as to the possibility of obtaining title to all those lands, and what would be the probable expense. The lands were not owned by the same people, but were divided among different and separate owners. The Philippine Sugar Estates Development Company, Limited, owned of these lands what are more particularly described as the Dominican lands, *and they were re-424 garded as nearly one half the value of all the friar lands.

On July 5, 1903, the governor of the Philippine Islands, on behalf of the Philippine government, made an offer of purchase for the total sum of $6,043,219.47 in gold for all the friar lands, though owned by different owners. This offer, so far as concerned that portion of the lands owned by defendant's company, was rejected by defendant in his capacity as majority shareholder, without any consultation with the other shareholders. The representatives of all the different owners of all the lands, including defendant's company, in answer to the above offer, then fixed their selling price at $13,700,000 for all such lands. During the negotiations consequent upon these different offers, which lasted for some time after the first offer was made, an offer was finally, and towards the end of October, 1903, made by the governor of $7,535,000. All the owners of all these friar lands, with the exception of the defendant, who represented his company, were willing and anxious to accept this offer and to convey the lands to the government at that price. He alone held out for a better offer while all the other owners were endeavoring to persuade him to accept the offer of the government. The defendant continued his refusal to accept until the other owners consented to pay to his company $335,000 of the purchase price for their land, and until the government consented that a thousand hectares should be excluded from the sale to it of the land of defendant's company. This being agreed to, the contract for the sale was finally signed by the defendant as attorney in fact for his company, December 21, 1903. The defendant, of course, as the negotiations progressed, knew that the decision of the question lay with him, and that if he should decide to accept the last offer of the government, his decision would be the decision of his company, as he owned three fourths of its shares, and the negotiations would then go through as all the owners of the balance of the land desired it. If the sale should not be consummated, and things should remain as they were, the defendant also knew that the *value of the lands and 425 of the shares in the company would be almost nothing. He himself says, in speaking of these lands owned by his company, that had the government "given the haciendas the protection which they ought to have received, they would have been worth $6,000,000 gold; but, considering the abnormal condition in which they were on account of the failure of the government to protect these haciendas, it is impossible to fix any value; they were worth nothing; they were a charge." Also, the company had paid no dividends, and only lived on its credit, and could not even pay taxes. The company had no other property of any substantial value than these lands. They were its one valuable asset.

While this state of things existed, and before the final offer had been made by the governor, the defendant, although still holding out for a higher price for the lands, took steps, about the middle or latter part of September, 1903, to purchase the 800 shares of stock in his company owned by Mrs. Strong, which he knew were in the possession of F. Stuart Jones, as her agent. The defendant, having decided to obtain these shares, instead of seeing Jones, who had an office next door, employed one Kauffman, a connection of his by marriage, and Kauffman employed a Mr. Sloan, a broker, who had an office some distance away, to purchase the stock for him, and told Sloan that the stock was for a member of his wife's family. Sloan communicated with the husband of Mrs. Strong, and asked if she desired to sell her stock. The husband referred him to Mr. Jones for consultation, who had the stock in his possession. Sloan did not know who wanted to buy the shares, nor did Jones when he was spoken to. Jones would not have sold at the price he did had he known it was the defendant who was purchasing, because, as he said, it would show increased value, as the defendant would not be likely to purchase more stock unless the price was going up. As the articles of incorporation, by subdivision 20, required a resolution of the general meeting of stockholders for the purpose of selling more than one hacienda, and as no such general meeting had been 426]called at *the time of the sale of the stock, Mr. Jones might well have supposed there was no immediate prospect of a sale of the lands being made, while, at the same time, defendant had knowledge of the probabilities thereof, which he had acquired by his conduct of the negotiations for their sale, as agent of all the shareholders, and while acting specially for them and himself.

The result of the negotiations was that Jones, on or about October 10, 1903, assuming that he had the power, and without consulting Mrs. Strong, sold the 800 shares of stock for $16,000, Mexican currency, delivering the stock to Kauffman in Sloan's office, who paid for it with the check of Rueda Hermanos for $18,000, the surplus $2,000 being arranged for, and Kauffman being paid $1,800 by defendant for his services. The defendant thus obtained the 800 shares for about one tenth of the amount they became worth by the sale of the lands between two and three months thereafter. In all the negotiations in regard to the purchase of the stock from Mrs. Strong, through her agent Jones, not one word of the facts affecting the value of this stock was made known to plaintiff's agent by defendant, but, on the contrary, perfect silence was kept. The real state of the negotiations with the government was not mentioned, nor was the fact stated that it rested chiefly with the defendant to complete the sale. The probable value of the shares in the very near future was thus unknown to anyone but defendant, while the agent of the plaintiff had no knowledge or suspicion that defendant was the one seeking to purchase the shares. The agent sold because, as he testified, he wanted to invest the money in some kind of property that would pay dividends, and he was expecting nothing from this company, as negotiations for the sale of the lands had gone on so long, and there appeared no prospect of any sale being made; at any rate, not for a very long time.

It is undeniable that, during all this time, the subject of the sale of the friar lands was frequently mooted and its probabilities publicly discussed in a general way. Such discussion was founded upon rumors and gossip as to the condition of the *negotia- 427 tions. The public press referred to it not infrequently, but the actual state of the negotiations, the actual probabilities of the sale being consummated, and the particular position of power and influence which the defendant occupied in such negotiations, prior to the time of the purchase of plaintiff's stock, were not accurately known by plaintiff's agent or by anyone else outside those interested in the matter as negotiators.

Mr. Henry E. Davis argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error and appellants:

The court below erred in not finding that, upon all the evidence, the defendant was guilty of the fraud alleged.

8 Manresa, p. 623; Oliver v. Oliver, 118 Ga. 362, 45 S. E. 232; Stewart v. Harris, 69 Kan. 498, 66 L.R.A. 261, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 77 Pac. 277, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 873; Miner v. Belle Isle Ice Co. 93 Mich. 97, 17 L.R.A. 412, 53 N. W. 218; Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 23 Blatchf. 517, 27 Fed. 631; Wheeler v. Abilene Nat. Bank Bldg. Co. 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 892, 89 C. C. A. 477, 159 Fed. 391; Sidell v. Missouri P. R. Co. 24 C. C. A. 216, 51 U. S. App. 1, 78 Fed. 724; Ritchie v. McMullen, 25 C. C. A. 50, 47 U. S. App. 470, 79 Fed. 522; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. New York & N. R. Co. 150 N. Y. 410, 34 L.R.A. 76, 55 Am. St. Rep. 689, 44 N. E. 1043; Hunter v. Hunter, 50 Mo. 449; Stone v. Moody, 41 Wash. 680,

5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 799, 84 Pac. 617, 85 Pac. 346; 1 Bigelow, Fr. pp. 231, 297, 312; 1 Domat, Civil Law, p. 574, No. 1457, p. 584, No. 1490, p. 510, Nos. 1259, 1260, p. 511, No. 1262.

Under the Spanish law, fraud is cheating. The essential element is deceit, and the fraud is the injury accomplished by means of the deceit.

Escriche, Fr.

Mr. George E. Hamilton argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John W. Yerkes, M. J. Colbert, and John J. Hamilton, filed a brief for defendant in error and appellee:

From the nature of the cause of action, the character of the pleadings and relief prayed for, the fact that the proof was taken and the hearing had before the court without the intervention of a jury, it would seem that it is, in all essential qualities, and even in form, a suit in equity; and therefore could come to this court only by appeal, and not by writ of error.

Walker v. Drevelle, 12 Wall. 440, 20 L. ed. 429; Sarchet v. United States, 12 Pet. 143, 9 L. ed. 1033; Wiscart v. Dauchy, 3 Dall. 321, 1 L. ed. 619.

The extreme rule that a director and stockholder must disclose his intention to another stockholder before buying stock from him has no application, even if that rule were the correct rule under the authorities controlling the question in this country; but it is submitted that such a rule is not supported by the current of American authority.

Hooker v. Midland Steel Co. 117 Ill. App. 441; Haarstick v. Fox, 9 Utah, 110, 33 Pac. 251; Walsh v. Goulden, 130 Mich. 531, 90 N. W. 406; Cook, Corp. 4th ed. § 320, p. 622; Taylor, Priv. Corp. 5th ed. § 698; Beach, Priv. Corp. § 614.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The court of first instance at Manila gave judgment in favor of the plaintiffs on two grounds discussed in the opinion, one ground being that the agent of plaintiff, by whom the sale was concluded, had no authority to make it, and hence the delivery of the stock by him to defendant's agent was illegal; the other ground was that the defendant had been guilty of fraud in concealing certain facts from the seller affecting the value of the stock at the time when its sale was concluded.

Upon appeal to the supreme court of the islands, the judgment was affirmed by a divided court, upon the ground of the "lack of authority of the plaintiff's agent to make the sale, but not upon the ground of the alleged fraud on the part of the defendant."

53 L. ed.

Two of the judges dissented, on the ground that there was authority to make the sale, although they agreed with the majority that there was no fraud.

One of the majority held not only that there was no authority to sell, but that there was fraud, and therefore only concurred in the result in affirming the judgment for the plaintiff.

When the motion for a new trial was subsequently granted on account of newly-discovered evidence, the majority of the court, on the authority of the second power of attorney (which was the newly-discovered evidence then received), held that it was sufficient to authorize the plaintiff's agent to make the sale he did in her behalf, and, as the majority held there was no fraud in the case, the judgment for plaintiff was reversed and the complaint was dismissed.

Mr. Justice Johnson dissented, and filed a dissenting opinion in favor of the affirmance of the judgment of the court of first instance on both the grounds taken by it.

We are now called upon to review the judgment of the supreme court dismissing the complaint of the plaintiff. If the purchase of the stock by the defendant was obtained by reason of his fraud or deceit, it is not material to inquire whether the agent of the plaintiff had power to sell the stock. If fraud or deceit existed, the sale cannot stand. We shall therefore determine the question whether or not there was evidence of such fraud or deceit as would avoid the sale.

Although there is no technical finding of facts by the court of first instance, yet, in its opinion, that court does state facts upon which it bases its judgment, and which may be referred to for the purpose of determining what the facts are. On appeal or writ of error from the judgment of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands the facts (when the courts below differ) will be reviewed by this court under the 10th section of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369). De la Rama v. De la Rama, 201 U. S. 303, 309, 50 L. ed. 765, 767, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

*A careful perusal of the evidence[430 brings us to the conclusion that it was ample to sustain the judgment of the court of first instance, considered with reference to the law applicable to the Philippine Islands.

The Civil Code of that jurisdiction, after providing by article 1261 for the requisites of a contract, among which is the "consent of the contracting parties," says in article 1265 as follows: "Consent given by error, under violence, by intimidation or deceit, shall be void." Articles 1266 to 1268, inclusive, explain the meaning of the words as used in article 1265, and describe what may be error, under violence, or by intimidation. It is then provided by article 1269 that "there is deceit when, by words or insidious machinations on the part of one of the contracting parties, the other is induced to execute a contract which, without them, he would not have made." The meaning of the words "insidious machinations" may be said to be a deceitful scheme or plot with an evil design, or, in other words, with a fraudulent purpose. Thus, the deceit which avoids the contract need not be by means of misrepresentations in words. It exists where the party who obtains the consent does so by means of concealing or omitting to state material facts, with intent to deceive, by reason of which omission or concealment the other party was induced to give a consent which he would not otherwise have given. Article 1269. This is the rule of the common law also; but, in both cases, it is based upon the proposition that, under all the circumstances of the case, it was the duty of the party who obtained the consent, acting in good faith, to have disclosed the facts which he concealed. Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Rancho Co. 128 U. S. 383, 388, 32 L. ed. 439, 441, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101. This was the Spanish law before the adoption of the Code. Partidas 5, Titulo 5, Ley 57; Partidas 7, Titulo 16, Ley 1. See also Scaevola, Codigo Civil, articles 1269, 1270. In such cases concealment is equivalent to misrepresentation.

The question in this case, therefore, is whether, under the circumstances above set forth, it was the duty of the defendant, acting in good faith, to disclose to the agent of 431] the plaintiff *the facts bearing upon or which might affect the value of the stock.

If it were conceded, for the purpose of the argument, that the ordinary relations between directors and shareholders in a business corporation are not of such a fiduciary nature as to make it the duty of a director to disclose to a shareholder the general knowledge which he may possess regarding the value of the shares of the company before he purchases any from a shareholder, yet there are cases where, by reason of the special facts, such duty exists. The supreme courts of Kansas and of Georgia have held the relationship existed in the cases before those courts because of the special facts which took them out of the general rule, and that, under those facts, the director could not purchase from the shareholder his shares without informing him of the facts which affected their value. Stewart v. Harris, 69 Kan. 498, 66 L.R.A. 261, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 77 Pac. 277, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 873; Oliver v. Oliver, 118 Ga. 362, 45 S. E. 232. The case before us is of the same general character. On the other hand, there is the case of Tippecanoe County v. Reynolds, 44 Ind. 509-515, 15 Am. Rep. 245, where it was held (after referring to cases) that no relationship of a fiduciary nature exists between a director and a shareholder in a business corporation. Other cases are cited to that effect by counsel for defendant in error. These cases involved only the bare relationship between director and shareholder. It is here sought to make defendant responsible for his actions, not alone and simply in his character as a director, but because, in consideration of all the existing circumstances above detailed, it became the duty of the defendant, acting in good faith, to state the facts before making the purchase. That the defendant was a director of the corporation is but one of the facts upon which the liability is asserted, the existence of all the others in addition making such a combination as rendered it the plain duty of the defendant to speak. He was not only a director, but he owned three fourths of the shares of its stock, and was, at the time of the purchase of the stock, administrator general of the company, with large *pow-[432] ers, and engaged in the negotiations which finally led to the sale of the company's lands (together with all the other friar lands) to the government at a price which very greatly enhanced the value of the stock. He was the chief negotiator for the sale of all the lands, and was acting substantially as the agent of the shareholders of his company by reason of his ownership of the shares of stock in the corporation and by the acquiescence of all the other shareholders, and the negotiations were for the sale of the whole of the property of the company. By reason of such ownership and agency, and his participation as such owner and agent in the negotiations then going on, no one knew as well as he the exact condition of such negotiations. No one knew as well as he the probability of the sale of the lands to the government. No one knew as well as he the probable price that might be obtained on such sale. The lands were the only valuable asset owned by the company. Under these circumstances, and before the negotiations for the sale were completed, the defendant employs an agent to purchase the stock, and conceals from the plaintiff's agent his own identity and his knowledge of the state of the negotiations and their probable result, with which he was familiar as the agent of the shareholders, and much of which knowledge he obtained while acting as such agent, and by reason thereof. The inference is inevitable that, at this time, he had concluded to press the negotiations for a sale of the lands to a successful conclusion; else, why would he desire to purchase more shares which, if no sale went through, were, in his opinion, worthless because of the failure of the government to properly protect the lands in the hands of their then owners? The agent of the plaintiff was ignorant in regard to the state of the negotiations for the sale of the land, which negotiations and their probable result were a most material fact affecting the value of the shares of stock of the company, and he would not have sold them at the price he did had he known the actual state of the negotiations as to the lands, and that it was the defendant who was seeking to purchase the stock. 433] Concealing his identity when *procuring the purchase of the stock, by his agent, was in itself strong evidence of fraud on the part of the defendant. Why did he not ask Jones, who occupied an adjoining office, if he would sell? But, by concealing his identity, he could, by such means, the more easily avoid any questions relative to the negotiations for the sale of the lands and their probable result, and could also avoid any actual misrepresentations on that subject, which he evidently thought were necessary in his case to constitute a fraud. He kept up the concealment as long as he could, by giving the check of a third person for the purchase money. Evidence that he did so was objected to on the ground that it could not possibly even tend to prove that the prior consent to sell had been procured by the subsequent check given in payment. That was not its purpose. Of course, the giving of the check could not have induced the prior consent, but it was proper evidence as tending to show that the concealment of identity was not a mere inadvertent omission, an omission without any fraudulent or deceitful intent, but was a studied and intentional omission, to be characterized as part of the deceitful machinations to obtain the purchase without giving any information whatever as to the state and probable result of the negotiations, to the vendor of the stock, and to, in that way, obtain the same at a lower price. After the purchase of the stock he continued his negotiations for the sale of the lands, and finally, he says, as administrator general of the company, under the special authority of the shareholders, and as attorney in fact, he entered into the contract of sale December 21, 1903. The whole transaction gives conclusive evidence of the overwhelming influence defendant had in the course of the negotiations as owner of a majority of the stock and as agent for the other owners, and it is clear that the final consummation was in his hands at all times. If, under all these facts, he purchased the stock from the plaintiff, the law would indeed be impotent if the sale could not be set aside or the defendant cast in damages for his fraud.

The supreme court of the islands, in holding that there was *no fraud in the [434 purchase, said that the responsibility of the directors of a corporation to the individual stockholders did not extend beyond the corporate property actually under the control of the directors; that they did not owe any duty to the members in respect to their individual stock, which would prevent them from purchasing the same in the usual manner. While this may, in general, be true, we think it is not an accurate statement of the case, regard being had to the facts above mentioned.

It is said that, by the Code of Commerce of the Philippine Islands the directors are declared to be mandatories of the society, and that, by article 1459 of the Spanish Civil Code, they are prohibited from acquiring by purchase, even at public or judicial auction, the property the administration or sale of which may have been intrusted to them, and that this is the extent of the prohibition. This provision has no reference to the purchase for himself, under such facts as existed here, by an officer of a corporation, or stock in the corporation owned by another. The case before us seems a plain one for holding that, under the circumstances detailed, there was a legal obligation on the part of the defendant to make these disclosures.

It is further objected, however, that the plaintiff, Mrs. Strong, denied that she had ever authorized her agent to sell this stock, and therefore, by her own evidence, there had never been any consent by her, obtained by fraud or otherwise, because there had never been any consent at all. There is nothing in this objection. Mrs. Strong contended that such authority as she had given never authorized her agent to sell this stock. That had nothing to do with the obligation of the defendant to make the disclosure of the facts already adverted to before the purchase of the stock from plaintiff's agent, and if, by reason of such failure, the defendant was guilty of a fraud in procuring the purchase from the plaintiff's agent, it was a fraud for which he became liable to the plaintiff, even though the plaintiff maintained that her agent was not authorized to sell. The court held that he was authorized, and therefore, if he sold by *reason of [435 the fraud committed by defendant, the plaintiff was thereby injured and the defendant became liable. In legal effect her consent was obtained by the fraud.

We have not overlooked the objections made in regard to the form of the judgment in the court of first instance, but are of opinion that such objections are not of a material nature, and we are disposed to follow the course pursued by that court in this case.

Other objections made by the defendant's counsel we have examined, but do not regard them as important. We therefore reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court, dismissing the complaint, and affirm that of the Court of First Instance, and it is so ordered.

DELAWARE & HUDSON COMPANY
v.
ALBANY & SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 435-453.)

Corporations — action by stockholders — effort to procure corporate action.

Effort to secure action by a corporation, its directors or shareholders, need not be made and set forth with the particularity required by equity rule 94, in order to sustain a bill filed by shareholders against the corporation and its corporate lessee to obtain an accounting for unpaid rentals, where a majority of the directorate of the former corporation, to whose interest it was to assert the right to payment and demand it, were, and had been for many years, officers, directors, and employees of the other company, to whose interest it was to deny indebtedness and resist payment, and the latter company and its directors and officers controlled a working majority of the stock vote of the other corporation.

[For other cases, see Corporations, 518-529, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 416.]

Argued February 23, 24, 1909. Decided May 3, 1909.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting questions as to the necessity of attempting to secure action by a corporation, its directors and stockholders, in order to sustain a bill filed by stockholders of such corporation against it and its corporate lessee to compel an accounting for unpaid rents. Answered in the negative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James M. Beck argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alfred Opdyke, filed a brief for the Delaware & Hudson Company:

Before a shareholder is permitted in his own name to institute and conduct a litigation which usually belongs to the corporation, he should show to the satisfaction of the court that he has exhausted all the means within his reach to obtain within the corporation itself the redress of his grievances or action in conformity to his wishes. He must make an earnest, not a simulated, effort with the managing body of the corporation to induce remedial action on their part, and this must be made apparent to the court.

Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Foss v. Harbottle, 2 Hare, 461; Macdougall v. Gardiner, L. R. 1 Ch. Div. 13.

The stockholder of a corporation cannot, on his individual responsibility, commence an action for the benefit of the corporation against another corporation, without first applying to the managing body of his corporation to do so; and the fact that a majority of such managing body are also officers, directors, or employees of the corporation against which the suit is sought to be brought will not, in the absence of fraud, excuse the failure of the stockholder to make such application.

Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. ed. 256, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Dimpfell v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 110 U. S. 209, 28 L. ed. 121, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Taylor v. Holmes, 127 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 179, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192; Wolf v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 Pa. 95, 45 Atl. 936; Siegman v. Maloney, 65 N. J. Eq. 372, 54 Atl. 405; Brewer v. Boston Theater, 104 Mass. 378; Dunphy v. Traveller Newspaper Asso. 146 Mass. 495, 16 N. E. 426; O'Connor v. Virginia Pass. & Power Co. 184 N. Y. 53, 76 N. E. 1082.

A consideration of the few cases in which stockholders' bills have been sustained will show even more strikingly the rule as above stated.

Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 49 L. ed. 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Chicago v. Mills, 204 U. S. 321, 51 L. ed. 504, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 143, 52 L. ed. 714, 722, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

Rule 94 itself assumes, in the language of this court, that the directors are presumed to act honestly and according to their best judgment for the interests of all; and this presumption cannot be overcome by the mere assertion of futility, or by the pleader's license in the use of adjectives or adverbs. The fraud charged and proven must be actual, and not constructive. Epithets do not make out fraud.

Kent v. Lake Superior Ship Canal R. & Iron Co. 144 U. S. 91, 36 L. ed. 358, 12

Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 127, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

If the complainants were excused, under the facts certified, from making any preliminary demand upon the directors, they nevertheless must show, in order to maintain their suit, that they could not have secured corporate action by an appeal to the stockholders of the Susquehanna Company.

Hawes v. Oakland and Foss v. Harbottle, supra; Huntington v. Palmer, 104 U. S. 482, 26 L. ed. 833; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co. 114 Fed. 232.

Mr. E. Parmelee Prentice argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George Welwood Murray and Charles P. Howland, filed a brief for the Albany & Susquehanna Railroad Company et al.

The present case is not within the purpose of equity rule 94. The purpose of the rule is to prevent the maintenance of suits in Federal courts by collusion between complainants and the defendant corporation whose rights they assert.

Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co. 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 47, 51 L. ed. 703, 704, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 588, 49 L. ed. 606, 610, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Chicago v. Mills, 204 U. S. 321, 51 L. ed. 504, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Young v. Alhambra Min. Co. 71 Fed. 810; Eldred v. American Palace Car Co. 99 Fed. 168.

The present case is not within the requirements of equity rule 94 as to demand upon directors. The bill shows, under oath, that the directors were hostile; that demand upon them would be "idle and nugatory;" that this is not a collusive suit, etc. Equity will not permit double directors, by contracts made with themselves in other capacities, to bind shareholders or the corporation.

Wardell v. Union P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 651, 26 L. ed. 509; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 328.

A court will not entertain litigation in which both sides are controlled by one dominus litis.

South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. v. Amador Medean Gold Min. Co. 145 U. S. 300, 36 L. ed. 712, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 654, 40 L. ed. 293, 294, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Teleg. Co. 125 U. S. 695, 31 L. ed. 853, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1391.

No decree entered under those circumstances should be permitted to stand.

Hatfield v. King, 184 U. S. 162, 46 L. ed. 481, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.
53 L. ed.

And parties who bring such litigation without disclosing the relationship of parties are guilty of punishable contempt of court.

Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L. ed. 1067; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 557, 33 L. ed. 1016, 1020, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Hatfield v. King, 184 U. S. 162, 46 L. ed. 481, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

When directors are under adverse control, stockholders may sue without demand for relief from a hostile board.

Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 51 L. ed. 703, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 49 L. ed. 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. ed. 256, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Heath v. Erie R. Co. 8 Blatchf. 409, Fed. Cas. No. 6,306; Bill v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 16 Fed. 19; Columbia Nat. Sand Dredging Co. v. Washed Bar Sand Dredging Co. 136 Fed. 710; Bigelow v. Calumet & H. Min. Co. 155 Fed. 869; Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co. 114 Fed. 232; Eldred v. American Palace Car Co. 99 Fed. 168; Berwind v. Canadian P. R. Co. 98 Fed. 158; Ball v. Rutland R. Co. 93 Fed. 513; Weir v. Bay State Gas Co. 91 Fed. 940; Rogers v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 33 C. C. A. 517, 62 U. S. App. 49, 697, 91 Fed. 299; De Neufville v. New York & N. R. Co. 26 C. C. A. 306, 51 U. S. App. 374, 81 Fed. 10.

Demand on stockholders was not necessary in this case, because, under the Susquehanna charter, stockholders could not grant relief.

Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Alling, 99 U. S. 463, 472, 25 L. ed. 438, 442; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587, 29 L. ed. 499, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Beveridge v. New York Elev. R. Co. 112 N. Y. 21, 2 L.R.A. 648, 19 N. E. 489; Robinson v. Smith, 3 Paige, 222, 24 Am. Dec. 212; McCullough v. Moss, 5 Denio, 567; Conro v. Port Henry Iron Co. 12 Barb. 27; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. §§ 283, 510; Cook, Corp. 5th ed. §§ 684, 750.

• Even if stockholders could, by resolution, require directors to institute litigation against the Delaware Company, they could not oust directors from office before expiration of their terms.

And no court would entertain a suit against the Delaware Company conducted by the Delaware administration of the Susquehanna Company.

South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. v. Amador Medean Gold Min. Co. supra; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Teleg. Co. supra.

Suits are regularly maintained in Federal courts without demand upon stockholders for a resolution directing litigation.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 183 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 111, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Schultz v. Highland Gold Mines Co. 158 Fed. 337; Perkins v. Northern P. R. Co. 155 Fed. 445; Monmouth Invest Co. v. Means, 80 C. C. A. 527, 151 Fed. 159; Weir v. Bay State Gas Co. 91 Fed. 940; Ball v. Rutland R. Co. 93 Fed. 513; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 92 Fed. 714.

The facts of this case show neither (a) anything which could be submitted to stockholders for ratification; nor (b) anything stockholders could ratify.

(a) There was nothing to submit to stockholders. When a stockholders' vote makes a voidable act valid or void, it acts upon something which directors have done. In this case, directors have done nothing, and stockholders cannot control their course.

(b) Stockholders cannot, by anything short of a unanimous vote, authorize or ratify gifts of corporate property.

Brewer v. Boston Theater, 104 Mass. 378; Jackson v. Ludeling, 21 Wall. 616, 22 L. ed. 492; Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 23 Blatchf. 517, 27 Fed. 631; Mumford v. Ecuador Development Co. 111 Fed. 639; Menier v. Hooper's Teleg. Works, L. R. 9 Ch. 350; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. 123 N. Y. 91, 9 L.R.A. 527, 25 N. E. 201; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. New York & N. R. Co. 150 N. Y. 410, 34 L.R.A. 76, 55 Am. St. Rep. 689, 44 N. E. 1043.

The Delaware Company has, in respect to corporate rights of the Susquehanna Company, entered into privity of contract with every Susquehanna stockholder, concerning division of the entire rent.

Hawes v. Oakland, supra.

An action to divide corporate income among stockholders must be brought in equity; otherwise the lessee's right of offset would be defeated and unequal division of income made among stockholders.

Barr v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 96 N. Y. 444.

442] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The certificate of the court is as follows:

"This cause comes here upon appeal from a final decree of the circuit court, southern district of New York, which directs that the defendant, Delaware & Hudson Company (hereinafter called the Delaware Company) pay to the defendant the Albany & Susquehanna Railroad Company (hereinafter called the Susquehanna Company) the amount of $1,107,923.24.

"The case was fully argued and submitted on briefs. It thereupon developed that there was a question presented whether the bill could be maintained under the 94th equity rule. That question is a preliminary one, it has been held to be jurisdictional in character. Chicago v. Mills, 204 U. S. 321, 51 L. ed. 504, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 49 L. ed. 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355), and this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court for its proper decision.

Statement of facts.

"The facts upon which the question arises are as follows:

"The defendant corporations are both citizens of the state of New York; the complainants are citizens of the states of Connecticut and Rhode Island. The bill was brought to obtain an accounting for various sums of money which it was alleged became due at intervals during a series of years from the Delaware Company to the Susquehanna Company as rental or in the nature of rental under a lease made in 1870. For the convenience of all, a copy of the pleadings is hereto annexed, marked Exhibit 'A,' which may be referred to for a more detailed statement of the cause of action. The bill does not 'set forth with particularity the efforts of the plaintiffs to secure such action as they desire on the part of the managing directors or trustees.' Nor did the proofs show any such efforts. Nor does the bill set forth any efforts to secure 'such action on the part of the shareholders.' Nor did the proofs show any such efforts. Nor did the bill set forth, or the proof show, 'the *causes of their failure to obtain[443 such action' otherwise than is hereinafter disclosed.

"The complaint was filed on June 12, 1906. The Susquehanna Company was organized under the act of April 2, 1850, which provides that 'there shall be a board of thirteen directors . . . to manage its affairs,' and for many years before this suit was brought a majority of the board of directors of the Susquehanna Company consisted of persons who were officers, directors, or employees of the Delaware Company. At the time this suit was instituted the directors and officers of the Susquehanna Company the dates of their election as such, and their relations to the Delaware Company, with dates of election, were as shown on the following statement:

bill, controlled 6,688 shares. The entire 35,000 shares were held by 546 different Names of directors of Susquehanna Company and dates of election as directors and officers.

Position in Delaware & Hudson Company and dates.

Robert M. Olyphant, 1878.

Director since 1872.

President from 1884 to 1903.

Chairman of the board since 1903.

Director since 1901.

General counsel, 1894 to 1903.

Director since 1899.

President since 1903.

Director since 1886.

Director since 1902.

General counsel since 1903.

Director since 1905.

A vice president since 1903.

Treasurer, 1892.

Son of Robert M. Olyphant.

George I. Wilber, 1883.

David Wilcox, 1894 (vice president, May 9, 1906).

R. Suydam Grant, 1901.

Charles A. Peabody, 1902.

William S. Opdyke, 1903.

Abel I. Culver, 1903.

Charles A. Walker, 1892.

Robert Olyphant, 1887 (president since 1889).

William L. M. Phelps, 1873 (secretary since 1870).

Secretary of the Albany & Susquehanna Company, elected by the board of directors.

Nominees of the Delaware Company, as stated in the Delaware Company's answer.

Robert C. Pruyn, 1890.

James H. Manning, 1890.

444] *Of these, Robert M. Olyphant, R. Suydam Grant, Charles A. Peabody, William S. Opdyke, Abel I. Culver, and Robert C. Pruyn, at the time this suit was begun, did not own or hold, in their own right, any shares of stock in the Susquehanna Company, but shares of stock of that company owned by the Delaware Company were transferred to each of them on the books of the Susquehanna Company by the Delaware Company for the purpose of qualifying them as such directors. Charles A. Walker owned five shares of Susquehanna stock from 1901 to 1906; it does not appear that he owned any stock in the Susquehanna Company during the year 1906.

"So far as appears from anything shown in this record, none of the directors or officers of the Delaware Company ever, before or after the bringing of this suit, treated the claim therein set forth otherwise than as one of doubtful validity, the payment of which was to be resisted.

"On June 12, 1906, and for thirty years prior thereto, the capital stock of the Susquehanna Company had been fixed at and limited to 35,000 shares. Of this capital stock on June 12, 1906, the Delaware Company owned 4,500 shares and its directors or officers owned or controlled 4,340 shares; the complainants owned 1,312 shares, and a so-called 'protective committee' who, from and after December, 1905, had been opposing the administration of the Delaware Company upon the questions involved in this persons, of whom 423 owned 50 shares or less, and of whom 383 resided in the state of New York.

53 L. ed.

"An annual meeting of the Susquehanna Company was held subsequent to the beginning of this suit, on October 16, 1906. At that meeting the nominees of the protective committee were elected, receiving 15,501 ballots, the nominees of the former management receiving 15,441 ballots. About two weeks before such annual meeting the Susquehanna Company, being then controlled by the directorate above named, filed a demurrer to the bill, which is hereto annexed as Exhibit 'B.' Copies of *such[445 demurrer were sent by stockholders opposed to the existing control to all stockholders, and thereafter and before the meeting proxies for several thousand shares were received by the persons who voted for the nominees then elected.

Questions certified.

"Upon the facts above set forth, the questions of law concerning which this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court are:

"First. 'Does the fact that, before institution of this suit, complainants made no demand for relief upon the board of directors of the Susquehanna Company, prevent them from maintaining this bill?'

"Second. 'Does the fact that, before institution of this suit, complainants made no effort to obtain relief at a stockholders' meeting, prevent them from maintaining this bill?"

The questions in connection with the 94th equity rule present the issue in the case. The rule is as follows:

"94. Every bill brought by one or more stockholders in a corporation against the corporation and other parties, formed upon rights which may properly be asserted by the corporation, must be verified by oath, and must contain an allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time of the transaction of which he complains, or that his share had devolved on him since by operation of law, and that the suit is not a collusive one to confer on a court of the United States jurisdiction of a case of which it would not otherwise have cognizance. It must also set forth with particularity the efforts of the plaintiff to secure such action as he desires on the part of the managing directors or trustees, and, if necessary, of the shareholders, and the causes of his failure to obtain such action."

Do the facts show a compliance with the rule, or rather that part of it which we have expressed in italics? The other parts of it are not involved.

It is the contention of appellant that the averments in the bill, as exhibited in the certificate, do not satisfy either the language of the rule or its substance. The argument is that (1) a shareholder, as a condition of his suit, must show that he has exhausted all the means within his reach to obtain within the corporation itself the redress of his grievances; that his efforts must be earnest, not simulated, and this must be made apparent to the court; (2) his failure to apply to the managing body of the corporation will not, in the absence of fraud, be excused by the fact that such managing body are also officers, directors, or employees of the corporation against which the suit is brought; (3) if the facts of this case excused from a preliminary demand upon the directors, the complainants were required to show "that they could not have secured appropriate action by an appeal to the stockholders of the Susquehanna Company." The appellees counter these contentions by asserting that (1) the case is not within the requirements of rule 94. "The bill shows, under oath," it is said, "that the directors were hostile, and that demands upon them would be 'idle and nugatory.' . . ." (2) Complainants (appellees here) were not required to appeal to the stockholders of the Susquehanna Company because (a) the stockholders, under the charter of the company, could not grant relief; (b) even if such power existed, the stockholders "could not oust directors from office before expiration of their terms." And it is further contended that, at the time the suit was instituted, "the Delaware Company controlled the stock vote of the Susquehanna Company."

These opposing contentions present a not unusual case where the rule or principle of law is clear enough, but its application to a particular case is not so clear, and there is a contest of plausible constructions between which it is not always easy to decide. The purpose of rule No. 94 hardly needs explanation. It is intended to secure the Federal courts from imposition upon their jurisdiction, and recognizes the right of the corporate directory to corporate control; in other words, to make the corporation paramount, even when its rights are to be protected or sought through litigation. Cases in this court have indicated such right. But the directory may be derelict and the interests of stockholders put in peril, and a case hence arises in which the right of protecting the corporation accrues to them. Rule 94 expresses primarily the conditions which must precede the exercise of such right, but emergencies may arise in which the antagonism between the directory and the corporate interest may be unmistakable, and the requirements of the rule may be dispensed with; or, it is more accurate to say, do not apply. There are cases which illustrate these contingencies. As a typical case of the first kind, that is, which enforces the doctrine that the rights of the corporation must be asserted through the corporation. Hawes v. Oakland (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827, is cited. In that case Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401, was declared to be the leading case on the subject in this country, and, examining the latter case, it was said that it did not establish, nor was it intended to establish, a doctrine different in any material respect from that found in the other American cases and the English cases. And the doctrine was said to be that, to enable a stockholder in a corporation to sustain in a court of equity a suit founded on a right of action existing in the corporation itself, and in which the corporation itself is the appropriate plaintiff, there must exist as a foundation for the suit some action or threatened action of the managing board of directors which is beyond their authority; a fraudulent transaction, completed or contemplated, which will result in serious injury to the corporation or stockholders; where the board of directors, or a majority of them, are acting for their own interest in a manner destructive of the corporation itself or of the rights of other stockholders; or where a majority of the stockholders themselves are oppressively and illegally pursuing a course inimical to the corporation or to the rights of the other stockholders. The court expressed the possibility that other cases might arise, but said "the foregoing may be regarded as an outline of the principles which govern this class of cases."

Determined by the principles enumerated, the court affirmed a decree sustaining a demurrer to a bill by a stockholder of the 448]Contra Costa Waterworks Company*, filed in behalf of himself and other stockholders against the company, its directors, and the city of Oakland, to enjoin the city from taking, and the directors from permitting it to take, water from the works of the company without compensation. The bill alleged a request of the directors to take proceedings, and that they declined to do so. The bill also alleged injury to the corporation, diminution of dividends of the complainant and other stockholders, and a decrease of the value of their stock. Appellant adduces, as repeating and illustrating the doctrine of Hawes v. Oakland, the following cases: Dimpfell v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 110 U. S. 209, 28 L. ed. 121, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Taylor v. Holmes, 127 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 179, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. ed. 256, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. The latter case is quoted by appellant as putting unmistakable emphasis on rule 94, and that the facts of the case at bar do not satisfy its requirements. The object of the suit was to enjoin the board of directors of the corporation from paying a license tax levied upon the corporation under the provisions of an act of Congress. Corbus, the complainant in the suit, was a stockholder of the corporation, and alleged, as the reason of the suit by him, that he was unable to request the directors of the company to refuse to pay the tax or apply for the license required by reason of their great distance from him; but that he had made such request of the officers of the company residing in Alaska, and that they had refused to comply with the request. Of this allegation the court said that it showed no compliance with rule 94, and that complainant simply relied on the distance of the directors from where he resided as an excuse for not applying to them. "We are of opinion," it was said, "that the excuse is not sufficient. He should, at least, have shown some effort. If he had made an effort and obtained no satisfactory result, either by reason of the distance of the directors or by their dilatoriness or unwillingness to act, a different case would have been presented; but to do nothing is not sufficient."

A case sustaining the second proposition 449]*which we have *mentioned, to wit, 53 L. ed.

where the circumstances take the cases out of the rule, is Doctor v. Harrington, 196 U. S. 579, 49 L. ed. 606, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355. The suit was brought by Doctor and others as stockholders of a corporation called the Sal Sayles Company to set aside a judgment obtained by the Harringtons against that company. The bill alleged that the suit was not collusive; that complainants were unable to obtain redress from the company or "at the hands" of its stockholders. It further alleged that the board of directors of the corporation was "under the absolute control and domination of the defendant, John J. Harrington, and that said Harrington, by reason of having the possession of a majority of the capital stock of said corporation," likewise controlled "the action of the stockholders." It was further alleged that he refused to give any information with regard thereto, and declined to redress the wrongs of which complaint was made, or give complainants any opportunity to lay before the board of directors or the stockholders of the company the facts set forth.

It will be observed, therefore, that there was no compliance with the requirements of rule 94, as expressed in its letter. The efforts that were made to secure the action of the managing directors or trustees were not "set forth with particularity." Nothing was alleged but the domination of John J. Harrington and his control of the directors. What he did, in what way he exerted control, was not alleged. In other words, the bill seemed to show a case, not of compliance with the requirements of rule 94, but circumstances which excused from such compliance.

Coming to consider the effect of those allegations, we said that rule 94 contemplates that there may be, and provides for, a suit by the stockholder in a corporation, founded on rights which may be properly asserted by the corporation. And we further said that "the ultimate interest of the corporation made defendant may be the same as that of the stockholder made plaintiff, but the corporation may be under a control antagonistic to him, and made to act in any way detrimental to his interest. In other words, his interests and the interests of the *corporation may be subservient[450 to some illegal purpose." And we decided that these principles were satisfied by the allegations of the bill, and that such antagonism existed between the complainants in the suit and the directors of the corporation that they would "suffer irremediable loss if not permitted to sue." In other words, the complainants were in such a situation by reason of the power which Harrington possessed over those who managed the corporation—directors and stockholders—that appeals to them for action would have been futile. Prior cases were considered, including Dodge v. Woolsey and Hawes v. Oakland, and the conclusion reached was pronounced to be in accordance with their doctrine.

Do the facts in the case at bar present the same situation that was passed on in Doctor v. Harrington? The certificate shows the following facts: The complaint was filed June 12, 1906. The suit was brought to obtain an accounting for various sums of money, which it was alleged became due at intervals during a series of years from the Delaware Company to the Susquehanna Company as rental, or in the nature of rental, under a lease made in 1870. The Susquehanna Company was organized in 1850, and, under the law, its board of directors consisted of thirteen members, a majority of whom for many years before this suit was brought were also "officers, directors, or employees of the Delaware Company." Indeed, they served as its president, vice president, treasurer, secretary, directors, and general counsel,—officers of dominating influence, it must be said. It appears that certain of the persons occupying those offices did not, at the time the suit was brought, own or hold, in their own right, any shares of stock in the Susquehanna Company, but shares of stock in that company owned by the Delaware Company were transferred to each of them on the books of the former company by the latter company for the purpose of qualifying them as directors. The number of shares of the capital stock of the Susquehanna Company, and how held or owned, and the attitude of the owners thereof to the Delaware Company, appear in the certificate and need not be repeated.

451] *The certificate recites the following: "So far as appears from anything shown in the record, none of the directors or officers of the Delaware Company ever, before or after the bringing of this suit, treated the claim therein set forth otherwise than as one of doubtful validity, the payment of which was to be resisted."

The situation was unique. The company whose interest it was to assert the right to payment and to demand it was under the control or could be influenced by the company whose interest it was to deny indebtedness and resist payment. And though there are allegations in the bill of contrary import, the good faith of the directors need not be questioned. They might, notwithstanding, be firm in their views,—firm to resist appeals against them. Their views seemed to persist through many years. At any rate, a situation was presented fully as formidable to the interest of stockholders in the Susquehanna Company as that presented in the Harrington Case. And it may be well doubted whether the directors of the Susquehanna Company, so being directors of the Delaware Company, and who, either from an apathy that endured through many years, could discern no right in that company to assert, or, through conviction of the absence of right, were the best agents to begin or conduct a litigation of such right. It was certainly natural enough that a stockholder should seek more earnest representatives, and consider that the directors "occupied," to use the language of Dodge v. Woolsey, "antagonistic grounds in respect to the controversy" as to him. The attitude of the directors need not be sinister. It may be sincere. It was so in Chicago v. Mills, 204 U. S. 321, 51 L. ed. 504, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286, and Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, and other cases. In this case it was certainly determined. It continued until after this suit was brought. Both the Delaware Company and the Susquehanna Company, then under "the administration of the Delaware Company," to quote from the circuit court of appeals, demurred to the bill.

But it is contended that efforts should have been made and alleged to move the corporation to action through a stockholders' *meeting. In this contention there is again similarity to the Harrington Case. It was there alleged that Harrington controlled the action of the stockholders "by reason of having possession of a majority" of the capital stock of the corporation. The control in the case at bar, therefore, may not have been as direct as in Doctor v. Harrington, but it was practically efficient. The stock of the Susquehanna Company consisted of 35,000 shares, of which the Delaware Company and its directors and officers held 8,840. The complainants and a so-called protective committee, a committee which, the certificate states, "from and after December, 1905, had been opposing the administration of the Delaware Company upon the questions involved in this bill," controlled 8,000 shares. The certificate also states that the "entire 35,000 shares were held by 546 different persons, of whom 423 owned 50 shares or less, and of whom 383 resided in New York." The proposition then is, that notwithstanding the power of 8,840 shares, held by the managers of both corporations, against 8,000 held by complainants and the protective committee, complainants were required by rule 94 to engage and organize all other stockholders, or enough of them to direct or change the corporate management; in other words, struggle for the control of the corporation with an adverse board of directors. And such struggle, appellant contends, "could not be regarded as presumptively futile," as there would be an appeal to "the self-interest of the remaining stockholders;" and, it is pointed out, that the certificate recites that control through the stockholders was subsequently obtained. But it was obtained after the suit was begun and the antagonism of the directors was more clearly exhibited. The circumstances of this case preclude, therefore, an acceptance of appellant's proposition. Rule 94 is intended to have practical operation, and to have that it must, as to its requirements, be given such play as to fit the conditions of different cases. Therefore, considering that this case, by reason of its facts, falls within the principle of Doctor v. Harrington, we do not review the cases cited by appellees, wherein, it is concluded, suits were *justified by demand on the directors alone, nor consider whether stockholders have the power to compel directors to institute suits to which the directors are opposed.

We answer both questions certified in the negative.

JOHN W. MANSON et al., Trustees of Estate of Henry Hudson, Appts.,
v.

JOHN S. WILLIAMS, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Estate of Hudson Clothing Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 453-457.)

Bankruptcy — conclusiveness of adjudication.

1. An adjudication in bankruptcy against two brothers as partners is not conclusive as to the existence of the partnership and the title to the assets as against the trustees in bankruptcy of one of the brothers, who were not heard on that question, although they had filed a denial and answer. [For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 86a-89, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings — partnership.

2. Concurrent findings of the two courts below that two brothers were partners, and that the stock in trade belonged to the firm, are not so clearly erroneous as to call for reversal, where there was evidence that one brother, with the original intention of forming a corporation, furnished the capital, and the other his personal services in disposing of it, and that the latter was interested in the profits, if any, and at the same time was not a debtor of the former, and there was some evidence that he also contributed to the assets.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4931-4944, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 169.]

Argued April 20, 21, 1909. Decided May 3, 1909.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the District of Maine, directing the trustees of a bankrupt to pay over to the trustee in bankruptcy of an alleged partnership the proceeds of the stock of goods alleged to have belonged to the firm. Affirmed.

See same case below, 82 C. C. A. 475, 153 Fed. 525.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John W. Manson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Harry R. Coolidge, filed a brief for appellants:

This is a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings under § 24a of the bankrupt act, and an appeal lies to this court by § 6 of the act of March 3, 1891.

Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 74 C. C. A. 186, 143 Fed. 32, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49, affirmed in 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 789; Mason v. Wolkowich, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 765, 80 C. C. A. 435, 150 Fed. 699; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Gazlay v. Williams, 210 U. S. 41, 52 L. ed. 950, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

The bankrupt act allows only the bankrupt or a creditor to plead. The trustees were neither, so their answers were properly disregarded.

Re Columbia Real Estate Co. 50 C. C. A. 406, 112 Fed. 643, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

The appellants were, therefore, not parties to the adjudication.

Bates v. Ruddick, 2 Iowa, 423, 65 Am. Dec. 774; Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 640, 36 L. ed. 574, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Though the same attorneys who acted for Henry and James also acted for appellants, this did not make appellants parties.

Pepperdine v. Bank of Seymour, 100 Mo. App. 387, 73 S. W. 890; Litchfield v. Goodnow (Litchfield v. Crane) 123 U. S. 549, 31 L. ed. 199, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

If the appellants had been allowed to become parties in opposition to the adjudication, they would not now be concluded.

Pepperdine v. Bank of Seymour, supra;

NOTE. — On the effect of adjudication of bankruptcy of partnership to subject the separate estates of the partners to administration in bankruptcy—see case note to Dickas v. Barnes, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 654, 53 L. ed.

Harmanson v. Bain, 1 Hughes, 188, Fed. Cas. No. 6,072.

The adjudication was not for the purpose of determining what the assets were, but rather to put the assets, if there were any, in control of the court for equal distribution among the creditors.

Whitney v. Wenman, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; Re Continental Corp. 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538.

A judgment, to be conclusive, even between the same parties, must be for the same purpose.

Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 498, 11 L. ed. 1059, 1074.

To allow an adjudication to change the title to property would amount to confiscation.

Silvey v. Tift, 123 Ga. 804, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 386, 51 S. E. 748.

The intention to form a corporation is of no effect to prove a partnership, and would have had no effect had it not slumbered.

Fay v. Noble, 7 Cush. 188; First Nat. Bank v. Almy, 117 Mass. 476; Ward v. Brigham, 127 Mass. 24.

The word "company," especially in combination with other words, and not preceded by the word "and," signifies a corporation rather than a partnership.

Goddard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 202 Ill. 362, 66 N. E. 1068; Mattox v. State, 115 Ga. 212, 41 S. E. 712; Com. v. Reinoehl, 163 Pa. 291, 25 L.R.A. 247, 29 Atl. 896; Broome v. Galena, D. D. & M. Packet Co. 9 Minn. 243, Gil. 225.

A holding out imposes a partnership liability only in favor of those creditors who have known of the holding out, and have been deceived thereby.

Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 529, 28 L. ed. 507, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689.

A holding out does not constitute a partnership in fact, and a partnership in fact must be shown.

Collier, Bankr. 6th ed. p. 75; Re Beckwith, 130 Fed. 475, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; Wood v. Pennell, 51 Me. 61; Case v. Beauregard, 99 U. S. 119, 25 L. ed. 370; Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 27 L. ed. 211, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Huiskamp v. Moline Wagon Co. 121 U. S. 310, 30 L. ed. 971, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899.

In order for the alleged partnership creditors to be entitled to the property as against the individual creditors of Henry, it must be proven that James had a joint interest in the property at the time of adjudication; or, in other words, that there was a partnership estate; and to prove this it must be shown that James and Henry were actual partners.

Glenn v. Gill, 2 Md. 1; Swann v. Sanborn, 4 Woods, 625, Fed. Cas. No. 13,675; Broadway Nat. Bank v. Wood, 165 Mass. 312, 43 N. E. 100; Bixler v. Kresge, 169 Pa. 405, 47 Am. St. Rep. 920, 32 Atl. 414; Deavitt v. Hooker, 73 Vt. 143, 50 Atl. 800; York County Bank's Appeal, 32 Pa. 446.

The basis of all partnerships is an agreement to share the profits.

1. Lindley, Partn. chap. 1; Frost v. Walker, 60 Me. 470; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 14; Brotherton v. Gilchrist, 144 Mich. 274, 115 Am. St. Rep. 397, 107 N. W. 890; Walker v. Tupper, 152 Pa. 1, 25 Atl. 172; Sikes v. Work, 6 Gray, 433.

Henry was a mere security holder throughout. He could, in no event, participate in the profits as a principal trader in the management of the business, which is essential to a partnership.

Fish v. Thompson, 68 Vt. 273, 35 Atl. 174; Hunt v. Oliver, 118 U. S. 211, 30 L. ed. 128, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1083.

Furthermore, there can be no partnership without an intention of the parties to become partners.

Shaeffer v. Blair, 149 U. S. 258, 37 L. ed. 725, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; London Assur. Co. v. Drennen, 116 U. S. 461, 29 L. ed. 688, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Case note to Clark v. Emery, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 503.

Mr. John S. Williams argued the cause, and, with Mr. Albert S. Woodman, filed a brief for appellee:

Appeal is not the proper process.

First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 198 U. S. 281, 49 L. ed. 1051, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

An adjudication in bankruptcy is in the nature of a decree in rem, so far as it fixes the status of the bankrupt. The adjudication determines the status of the bankrupt, and all persons are bound by the adjudication, even if they were not parties to the bankruptcy proceedings, and even if they had not actual notice of the proceeding. If the court rendering the decree had jurisdiction, such decree cannot be attacked collaterally, but only by direct proceeding in a competent court.

Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 L. ed. 1113, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 29 L. ed. 83, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. 91 U. S. 656, 23 L. ed. 336; Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 426, 22 L. ed. 525; Shawhan v. Wherritt, 7 How. 643, 12 L. ed. 854; Re Billing, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 1 How. 134, 11 L. ed. 75; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Mitchell v. First Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 458, 46

L. ed. 1247, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908; Foster v. Posson, 105 Wis. 99, 81 N. W. 123; Jeter v. Hewitt, 22 How. 352, 16 L. ed. 345; Trevivan v. Lawrence, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 7th ed. 622, note; Freeman, Judgm. 2d ed. § 606; Hampton v. McConnel, 3 Wheat. 234, 4 L. ed. 378; Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 312, 4 L. ed. 398; Slocum v. Mayberry, 2 Wheat. 10, 4 L. ed. 171; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 203, 16 L. ed. 631; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 166, 13 L. ed. 648; Webster v. Reid, 11 How. 437, 13 L. ed. 761.

It is well settled that one who openly defends a suit brought against another, or who assists in the defense of such suit, for the purpose of aiding his own interests, which would be directly affected by the judgment in the suit, is, in a later action involving the same issues, as much bound by the judgment in the first suit as he would be if he had been a party to the record. In such case the person so participating in the suit is a party.

Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 19, 18 L. ed. 134; Tilton v. Cofield, 93 U. S. 163, 23 L. ed. 858; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 18 L. ed. 427; Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 26 L. ed. 61; Hauke v. Cooper, 48 C. C. A. 144, 108 Fed. 925; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L.R.A. 120, 46 C. C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 41; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Theller v. Hershey, 89 Fed. 575; Carey v. Roosevelt, 83 Fed. 243; Sanders v. Peck, 30 C. C. A. 530, 59 U. S. App. 248, 87 Fed. 61; Bailey v. Sundberg, 1 C. C. A. 387, 1 U. S. App. 101, 49 Fed. 583; David Bradley Mfg. Co. v. Eagle Mfg. Co. 6 C. C. A. 661, 18 U. S. App. 349, 57 Fed. 980; 1 Herman, Estoppel & Res Judicata, §§ 156, 182, 186; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 737; Aurora v. West, 7 Wall. 102, 19 L. ed. 49; Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 26 L. ed. 327; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Oglesby v. Attrill, 20 Fed. 570.

When a second suit is upon a different cause of action from the first, the judgment in the former action operates as an estoppel in the latter as to every point and question which was raised and actually litigated and determined in the first action.

National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Campbell v. Rankin, 99 U. S. 261, 25 L. ed. 435; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Franklin County v. German Sav. Bank, 142 U. S. 93-100, 35 L. ed. 948-950, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 18 L. ed. 53 L. ed.

129; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 18 L. ed. 427; Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton County, 54 C. C. A. 468, 117 Fed. 82; Geer v. Ouray County, 38 C. C. A. 250, 97 Fed. 435; New Dunderberg Min. Co. v. Old, 38 C. C. A. 89, 97 Fed. 150; St. Joseph Union Depot Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 32 C. C. A. 284, 60 U. S. App. 675, 89 Fed. 648; O'Hara v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 75 Fed. 130; 1 Van Fleet, Former Adjudication, § 277; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 765; Sly v. Hunt, 159 Mass. 151, 21 L.R.A. 680, 38 Am. St. Rep. 403, 34 N. E. 187; Doglioni v. Crispin, L. R. 1 H. L. 311; Trafford v. Blanc, L. R. 36 Ch. Div. 600; Green v. Bogue, 158 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 1061, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975; Goodrich v. Chicago, 5 Wall. 566, 18 L. ed. 511.

The finding of the district court that the Hudson Clothing Company was a partnership, composed of James and Henry Hudson, was correct.

Berthold v. Goldsmith, 24 How. 536, 541, 16 L. ed. 762, 764; Frost v. Walker, 60 Me. 470; Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 32 L. ed. 800, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426; Seiffert v. Irving, 15 Ont. Rep. 173; Wigmore, Ev. § 1249; Earle v. Art Library Pub. Co. 95 Fed. 544; Claflin v. Bennett, 51 Fed. 693; 30 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 353; Dwinel v. Stone, 30 Me. 384; Porter v. Graves, 104 U. S. 171, 26 L. ed. 691; Blair v. Harrison, 6 C. C. A. 326, 18 U. S. App. 27, 57 Fed. 257; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 26; Woolworth v. McPherson, 55 Fed. 558; Bigelow v. Elliot, 1 Cliff. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 1,399; Paul v. Cullom, 132 U. S. 539, 550, 33 L. ed. 430, 432, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Blair v. Shaeffer, 33 Fed. 218; Bancroft v. Hambly, 36 C. C. A. 601, 94 Fed. 975; McMurtrie v. Guiler, 183 Mass. 454, 67 N. E. 358.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition by the appellee the trustee in bankruptcy of the Hudson Clothing Company, that the appellants, the trustees in bankruptcy of Henry Hudson, pay over to the appellee the proceeds of a stock of goods alleged to have belonged to the company. The referee in bankruptcy made an order as prayed, which was sustained on the principal matter by the district court, 148 Fed. 305; and the decree of that Court was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 82 C. C. A. 475, 153 Fed. 525. A further appeal has been taken to this court. Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

The facts to be gathered from the opinion of the circuit court of appeals and admitted are these: Henry Hudson became the owner of a stock of goods, and desired to sell them. He also wished to help his brother James, and therefore put him in to do the selling. In the beginning he contemplated forming a corporation, turning the goods over to it, and taking most of the stock as security, but letting James take the profits. This plan, however, was allowed to slumber, and the business was carried on by James for over two years. From an early moment James adopted the name of Hudson Clothing Company, using it as a sign and in advertisements and on billheads. This was known to Henry, and when he advanced money to the business, as he did, he charged it on his books to the company. The bank account was kept with James, the bank book having the name Hudson Clothing Company above. Some of the exhibits in evidence have, besides the name of the company, the words "Henry Hudson, Pres." and "James Hudson, Treas. and Mgr." There was no act of transfer on the part of Henry, but, when he took goods from the shop, he paid for them in the same way as 455]if he had bought *them elsewhere. Both the district court and the circuit court of appeals have found as a fact that the brothers were partners, and that the goods belonged to the firm. In such cases this court, as a rule, will not disturb the findings, but it has done so in some instances (Darlington v. Turner, 202 U. S. 195, 220, 50 L. ed. 992, 1003, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630); and in the case at bar the appellants contend that there really was no evidence to justify the result reached.

The appellee says that the question is concluded by the adjudication putting the company into bankruptcy, that being an adjudication against the two brothers. On the other hand, the record shows that the trustees of Henry, although they had filed a denial and answer, were not heard on that question. The principle of law is plain. The adjudication put the two brothers into bankruptcy for the purpose of administering whatever property there might be, as against all the world. But it did not establish the facts upon which it was founded, no matter how necessary the connection, except as against parties entitled to be heard. Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 43, 52, 52 L. ed. 95, 99, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. If the trustees of Henry were not entitled to be heard, it is because they had no concern with whether the alleged firm was wound up in bankruptcy or not, but only with the facts upon which creditors sought to wind it up,—that is to say, the existence of the partnership and the title to the partnership assets,—and these facts would remain open to dispute. As the trustees of Henry were not heard, it would come with bad grace from one who might have urged the foregoing considerations, to argue here that they are bound to admit anything except that Henry and his brother are in bankruptcy as partners. Furthermore, we gather from the opinion of the district judge that all parties requested him to examine the evidence, and that the defense of res judicata really was waived. But, as the partnership might have been a partnership in profits only, leaving the title to the capital in Henry alone, the adjudication, even if it established that there had been a partnership, could not conclude anything as to the title to the assets, the matter with which we now are concerned.

*We come back, then, to the question[456 whether the findings of the two courts below are so clearly unwarranted as to call upon us to reconsider the evidence and to reverse the decree. In the first place, we may lay on one side the fact that the parties began with the intent to form a corporation. They did not understand that they were acting as a corporation, nor did their dealings so far purport to be dealings of a corporation as to preclude the finding that was made. Now suppose that we take nothing more than the facts that one man furnishes capital and another his personal service in disposing of it, and that the latter is admitted to be interested in the profits, if any, and, at the same time, not to be a debtor of the former. We have a right to infer that, if a man furnishes capital, he expects some gain from it. But as, in the case supposed, he is not a creditor, and will not get interest, his gain must come from profits of the business. Some kind of joint interest, therefore, may be inferred, and the circuit court of appeals would have had some warrant from these facts alone for concluding that Henry would have had a right to share the profits equally with James.

We are aware that there is evidence looking the other way, but that is not the question. On the other hand, the inference is strengthened by the facts that we have mentioned. Henry Hudson knew the name under which the business was done, and is likely to have known that his name sometimes was exhibited as president. It is true that the terms suggest a corporation, but, under our usages, not necessarily, and he, at least, knew that there was no corporation. He paid for the goods he bought, as if other interests were concerned. We mention these facts as admissions by conduct. Apart from the findings of the two courts, it is unlikely that, if great profits had been realized, he would not have demanded a share. As to James, not only is it admitted that he was interested in profits, but there is some evidence that he contributed to the assets, as we shall explain.

If we take it as established that both 457]brothers were interested *in the business, it is not a difficult step to infer that the capital of the business was firm capital. Whether capital shall be attributed to the firm or to a partner is a matter that often escapes the attention of the members. For if there is a joint liability for debts, it does not matter very much to the party furnishing the capital whether he owns it or whether he charges it to the firm. In a case where two partners contributed capital and two partners contributed time, it was held that the capital belonged to the firm, and that those who contributed time were bound to make good their proportion of the loss. Whitcomb v. Converse, 119 Mass. 38, 20 Am. Rep. 311. Moreover, when James went into the business, a thousand dollars belonging to him were deposited in his name, undistinguished from the deposits on the business account. The money or a part of it was used to pay liabilities of Henry in connection with the stock in trade. It is true that ultimately more than that sum was used in paying James's outstanding debts, but the mingling of funds tends to show a common interest. The facts that we have mentioned seem to us to constitute some evidence that the relation between the brothers was a partnership by implied understanding until a corporation should be formed. It does not matter that it was not formally recognized, or that they may not have used the name to themselves, if that is the fair result of what they did understand and intend. We do not say that we necessarily should have come to this conclusion if the case had been tried before us in the first instance, but, upon a pure question of fact, the error, if there was one, is not so plain as to call upon us to depart from our usual rule.

Decree affirmed.

458] *RE FRANK D. WINN?

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 458-469.)

Removal of causes — showing jurisdictional facts — Federal question.

1. Allegations in the petition for the removal to a Federal circuit court of a suit against an interstate express company for damages resulting from negligent transportation, that the defendant was subject to the Federal laws to regulate commerce and, under those laws, had a defense to the cause of action, will not justify removal on the ground that the cause is one arising under the Federal Constitution and laws, where the cause of action itself is not based upon the interstate commerce act or any other Federal law.

NOTE. — On removal of causes where the Federal Constitution, statute, or treaty comes in question—see notes to Little York Gold Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 24 L. ed. U. S. 656; Ferguson v. Ross, 3 L.R.A. 322; Austin v. Gagan, 5 L.R.A. 476; Butler v. National Home, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528. 53 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, 323-334, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — to court — remanding case to state court.

2. Mandamus will lie to compel a Federal circuit court to remand a cause to the state court whence it was removed, where it is apparent as a matter of law from the record itself that the Federal court was without jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, 61-66, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — jurisdiction — acquiring by consent — removal case.

3. A general appearance by the plaintiff in a Federal circuit court after the cause has been removed from a state court does not waive an objection to the jurisdiction founded upon the total lack of any controversy of a Federal nature, since in such cases consent of both parties cannot confer jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c. 12, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 12, Original.]

Argued April 5, 1909. Decided May 3, 1909.

ORIGINAL application for a Writ of Mandamus to compel the District Judge of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division, acting as Circuit Judge, to remand the case to the State Court in which it was originally brought. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Guy A. Miller argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Bremner, filed a brief for petitioner:

Mandamus does not lie to control judicial discretion, except when that discretion has been abused; but it is a remedy when the case is outside of the exercise of this discretion, and outside the jurisdiction of the court or officer to which or to whom the writ is addressed. One of its peculiar and more common uses is to restrain inferior courts, and to keep them within their lawful bounds.

As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; McCluney v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 316, 25 L. ed. 668.

Where a circuit court has no jurisdiction over a cause removed by a defendant from a state court, and refuses to remand it upon proper motion, mandamus is plaintiff's remedy.

Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 264, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150.

The difference between the case at bar and Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, 52 L. ed. 876, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581, and Re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323, 51 L. ed. 1081, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729, is that, in the latter cases, the court was called upon to decide, in a judicial capacity, and to use his discretion therein, a question outside the jurisdictional one; to wit, whether or not there was a separable controversy between citizens wholly of different states, to the determination of which the state was or was not a necessary party. Had the matter to have been decided therein been upon the question of diverse citizenship, or whether or not the plaintiff's original petition presented a Federal question, then there had not been such a discretion as to have defeated the issuance of the writ. In other words the discretionary powers necessary to defeat the issuance of the writ of mandamus must be such discretionary powers exercised in connection with matters outside the record.

Want of jurisdiction from any cause, appearing on the face of the record, entitles plaintiff to a writ of mandamus, where the Federal court refuses to perform the duty to remand, as these cases are outside the discretion and jurisdiction of the court.

Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Virginia v. Rives, and Ex parte Wisner, supra.

An action commenced in the state court, by a citizen of another state, against a non-resident defendant, who is a citizen of a state other than that of plaintiff, cannot be removed by the defendant into the circuit court of the United States, on the ground of diverse citizenship; at least, where the plaintiff resists the removal.

Ex parte Wisner, supra.

A case cannot be removed to the circuit court of the United States from a state court, on the ground that it arises under the laws of the United States, unless that fact appears from the plaintiff's statement of his own claim; and if it does not so appear, the want cannot be supplied by any statement in the petition for removal or in any subsequent pleadings. Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Minnesota v. Northern Securi- ties Co. 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. ed. 870, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

The suggestion on the part of the defendant that he will set up a defense or claim under the laws of the United States does not make the suit one arising under those laws.

Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, supra; Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 47 L. ed. 626, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

The defendant has lost the distinction between a case that arises under the laws of the United States, and a case that the plaintiff has no right to maintain, by reason of some Federal law. Were the plaintiff to admit all the allegations in the petition for removal, relative to the act to regulate commerce, it would only show that the plaintiff was unable to recover, and not that this case arises under any law of the United States.

Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. ed. 144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

The settled interpretation of the words, "arising under the laws of the United States," is that a suit arises under such laws only when the plaintiff's statement of his own claim shows that it is based upon those laws. It is not enough that, in the progress of litigation, a question under those laws would arise, since that does not show that plaintiff's action derived its life from those laws.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, ante, 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42.

The question whether or not a shipper is entitled to recover more than the declared value of stock in a contract for interstate shipment does not present a Federal question.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

Mr. Nathaniel T. Guernsey argued the cause, and Messrs. Alonzo C. Parker and William E. Miller filed a brief for respondent:

The contention that the case is ruled by Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 264, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150, is unsound, because both parties waived any objection which might have been urged to the maintenance of the suit in the southern district of Iowa. The defendant did this by its petition for removal and otherwise. The plaintiff did it by a general appearance, by a stipulation for a cost bond and for time to plead, and by filing a cost bond in conformity to this stipulation.

Interior Constr. & Improv. Co. v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217-220, 40 L. ed. 401, 402, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Re Moore, 209 U. S.

490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706.

The character of a case is determined by the questions involved; and if it appears that the claim will be defeated by one construction of a law of the United States or sustained by the opposite construction, it is a case arising under the laws of the United States.

Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248-257, 29 L. ed. 388-390, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371-380, 48 L. ed. 484-488, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

The determination of the motion to remand involved an exercise of judicial judgment and discretion which must be reviewed, if at all, by appeal.

Re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 330, 51 L. ed. 1083, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, 52 L. ed. 876, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an application for a writ of mandamus to the district judge of the United States, acting as circuit judge for the southern district of Iowa, central division. The prayer of the petition was for a rule to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding the judge to remand the case to the state court in which it was originally brought. The rule was issued and cause was shown by a return. From the petition and the return the following state of facts appears: The petitioner as assignee of the right of action of a shipper, brought, in a state court of Iowa, an action at law against the American Express Company for the negligent transportation of a boar, whereby the animal was killed, to the damage, it was alleged, to the owner of $8,000. The transportation was under a written contract between the owner and the defendant, which was annexed to the declaration as an exhibit. The shipment was from a point in Iowa to a point in Nebraska. The citizenship of the plaintiff or his assignor was not alleged, but the defendant was alleged to be a citizen of New York. The defendant seasonably filed in the state court a petition for removal to the circuit court of the United States, with accompanying bond in proper form. The petition having been denied in the state court, the defendant duly filed a copy of the record in the circuit court of the United States, and it was there docketed, whereupon plaintiff moved to remand the case, and the motion was denied by the circuit judge. The plaintiff thereupon, without further action in the circuit court, began this proceeding.

*The petition for removal alleged[463 that the plaintiff was a citizen of Missouri and the defendant "a joint stock association organized under the laws of the state of New York," but contained no allegation of the citizenship of the members of the association. It was agreed at the argument that the defendant was not a corporation, but a joint stock association. Therefore the diversity of citizenship required to warrant a removal on that ground does not appear. The petition for removal, which is printed in the margin,† was not based upon diversity *of citizenship, but upon the[464 ground that the suit was one arising under the laws of the United States.

It is well settled that no cause can be removed from the state court to the circuit court of the United States unless it could originally have been brought in the latter court. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 640, 47 L. ed. 626, 632, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 264, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150.

The only ground of jurisdiction which is or can be suggested *is that the suit was[465 one arising under the Constitution and the laws of the United States. 25 Stat. at L. 433, 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 509. It is the settled interpretation of these words, as used in this statute conferring jurisdiction, that a suit arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States only when the plaintiff's statement of his own cause of action shows that it is based upon those laws or that Constitution. It is not enough, as the law now exists, that it appears that the defendant may find in the Constitution or laws of the United States some ground of defense. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, ante, 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42, and cases cited. If the defendant has any such defense to the plaintiff's claim, it may be set up in the state courts, and, if properly set up, and denied by the highest court of the state, may ultimately be brought to this court for decision.

†Your petitioner, the American Express Company, respectfully shows that it is the defendant in the above-entitled suit, and that the matter and amount in dispute in the said suit exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of two thousand dollars ($2,000).

That your said petitioner was, at the time of the bringing of this suit, and still is, a joint stock association, organized under the laws of the state of New York, in such cases made and provided, and that the plaintiff was then and still is a citizen of the state of Missouri.

Tested by these principles, the record, including the petition for removal, shows affirmatively that the case was not one arising under the laws of the United States. In substance, the allegations of the petition for removal are, that the defendant was subject to the Federal laws to regulate commerce, and that, under those laws, the defendant had a defense in whole or in part to the cause of action stated in the declaration. But the cause of action itself is not based upon the interstate commerce law or upon any other law of the United States. The case could not have been brought originally in the circuit court of the United States, and was therefore not removable thereto. In holding otherwise we think the learned judge of the circuit court erred.

It is, however, argued that mandamus is not the remedy for the correction of such an error as we have pointed out, and that the aggrieved party should be left to his writ of error,—a remedy which he undoubtedly has.

Authority to issue writs of mandamus to any courts appointed under the authority of the United States was given to this court by a provision in the original judiciary act, which now appears in § 688 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 565). A writ of mandamus issued under this provision is for the purpose of revising *and [466 correcting proceedings in a case already instituted in the courts, and is deemed a part of the appellate jurisdiction of this court, which is subject to such regulations as the Congress shall make. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 97, 19 L. ed. 332, 336; Re Green, 141 U. S. 325, 326, 35 L. ed. 765, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11.

In Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 190, 8 L. ed. 92, the court, of its own motion, considered and sustained its authority to issue mandamus to inferior courts, and in that case

Your petitioner further shows that the said suit is one of a civil nature, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover from the defendant the sum of eight thousand dollars ($8,000) as damages on account of an alleged failure on the part of the defendant to comply with its obligations as a common carrier in the shipment and transportation of a hog, which the assignor of plaintiff offered to the defendant and which the defendant received from the assignor of plaintiff on or about the 30th day of August, A. D. 1907, for transportation from the State Fair Grounds at Des Moines, in the state of Iowa, to the city of Lincoln, in the state of Nebraska.

That the defendant denies that it failed in any respect to perform its obligations with reference to the transportation of the said hog, and denies that it is liable upon the claim set up in the said suit, in any amount, and denies that, in any event, its liability could exceed the sum or value of fifty dollars ($50).

That the said suit is one arising under the laws of the United States. That your petitioner is, and was, at all the times mentioned in the petition in this suit, a common carrier engaged in trade and commerce between the several states of the United States, and between the territories thereof, and between the territories and the several states.

That, at the date of the shipment in question, your petitioner was, and ever since that time has been, subject to the provisions of the act of Congress entitled, "An Act to Regulate Commerce," approved February 4, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154], and of the acts of Congress amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and that the alleged cause of action set up in said suit is based upon, grows out of, and necessarily involves, the construction of said acts of Congress. That among the questions arising under said acts and necessarily involved in said suit are—

(a) Whether the contract on which said suit is based is legal and enforceable by the shipper or the plaintiff as his assignee, in view of the fact that it appears on the face of this contract that, if the claim made in the petition as to the value of the hog in question is true, the shipper, by means of its undervaluation, violated the penal provisions of the act to regulate commerce, as amended.

(b) Whether, under the act to regulate commerce, as amended, the plaintiff may assert a claim for damages in an amount in excess of the value declared by the shipper to be the true value, and, upon this declaration, made the basis of the rate for the interstate transportation in question.

(c) Whether, under the act to regulate commerce, as amended, the provisions of the contract in suit, limiting the liability of the defendant to the sum declared by the shipper in said contract to be the actual value of the animal in question, are valid and enforceable.

(d) Whether, under the act to regulate commerce, as amended, the plaintiff, as assignee of the shipper, is estopped to set up in this suit that the hog in question was a greater value than the value declared to be its true value in the contract sued upon.

(e) Whether the undervaluation of the hog in question by the shipper, in order to obtain a rate for its interstate transportation lower than the published established rate, constituted a violation by the shipper of the penal provisions of the act to regulate commerce, as amended.

(f) Whether, if said penal provisions were so violated, the plaintiff's suit is founded upon what in law is his own wrong, so as to preclude a recovery by him.

(g) Other questions arising under said act to regulate commerce, as amended.

directed by mandamus a judge of an inferior court to sign a bill of exceptions duly presented. Since that time writs of mandamus to inferior courts have been issued in all proper cases.

In Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 214, it was held that a mandamus from this court would lie to an inferior court of the United States, directing it to restore an attorney to the rolls, who had been disbarred, where the court was without jurisdiction in that regard. And it was said, page 377: "The ground of our decision . . . is, that the court below had no jurisdiction to disbar the relator. . . . No amount of judicial discretion of a court can supply a defect or want of jurisdiction in the case. The subject-matter is not before it; the proceeding is coram non jure and void."

A specific application of the general principle announced in Ex parte Bradley has been made to cases where circuit courts of the United States have, without authority, assumed jurisdiction of a case originally brought in a state court, and it has frequently been held that mandamus from this court would lie to compel a circuit court to remand a case to the state court where it is apparent from the record that the circuit court has no jurisdiction whatever of the case. Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Kentucky v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 633, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 692; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 264, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150. And see Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, ante, 558, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299. In such a situation the remedy by mandamus is available although the aggrieved party may also be entitled to a writ of error or an appeal. Mandamus, it is true, never lies where the party praying for it has another adequate remedy. The 467] writ of mandamus *was introduced to supplement the existing jurisdiction of the courts and to afford relief in extraordinary cases where the law presents no adequate remedy. High, Extr. Legal Rem. 3d ed. § 15. But where, without any right, a court of the United States has wrested from a state court the control of a suit pending in it, an appeal or writ of error, at the end of long proceedings, which must go for naught, is not an adequate remedy.

In Virginia v. Rives, supra, the state, after the cause had been removed to the circuit court, filed its petition in this court for mandamus, without having made a motion to remand in the circuit court; but, in the opinion, nothing turned on the absence of a motion to remand, and the remedy by mandamus was held to exist "when the case is outside of the exercise of . . . [judicial] discretion, and outside the jurisdiction of the court . . . to which . . . the writ is addressed. One of its peculiar and more common uses is to restrain inferior courts and to keep them within their lawful bounds." P. 323. Ex parte Bradley is then referred to and its discussion approved. Then followed Ex parte Hoard, 105 U. S. 578, 26 L. ed. 1176, where it is held that, if the circuit court had denied a motion to remand to the state court, the party aggrieved must resort to his writ of error, and that mandamus would be denied, without determining whether the case was properly removed or not. In the three following cases, however (Virginia v. Paul, Kentucky v. Powers, and Ex parte Wisner,—supra), the circuit court had denied motions to remand (the denial of the motion in Kentucky v. Powers appearing in the judgment of the court below, 139 Fed. 452) before the petition for mandamus was filed. Nevertheless, the writ of mandamus was issued upon the ground that it was plain as matter of law from the record itself that the circuit court was without jurisdiction. This must now be regarded as the settled law.

The respondent, however, insists that mandamus will not lie to control the judgment or judicial discretion of the court to which the writ is proposed to be directed. This is true *where the judgment or [468 judicial discretion is within the limits of jurisdiction, but not otherwise. Wherever the record, including the petition for removal, shows that there are questions of fact upon whose determination the right of removal depends, and upon which it is the duty of the circuit court to pass judicially, then there is jurisdiction to decide those questions. Their decision is the exercise of judicial discretion; and, if that discretion is erroneously exercised, it can be corrected only by a writ of error or appeal. In these cases writs of mandamus must not be permitted to usurp the functions of writs of error or appeals, or take their place where they offer an adequate remedy to the aggrieved party. It is only in cases where the record makes it clear, as matter of law, that the circuit court was without jurisdiction to take any action whatever that the writ of mandamus lies. This distinction has been acted on many times by this court, and it is enough to refer to two very recent cases. Thus, where the removability of a case turned upon the question whether there was a separable controversy, to the trial of which certain of the defendants were not indispensable or necessary parties, it was held that the circuit court had jurisdiction to determine the question of separability; that its decision in that respect was the exercise of judicial discretion, and could not be controlled by a writ of mandamus. Re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323, 51 L. ed. 1081, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. The same point was decided in Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, 52 L. ed. 876, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. In each of these cases a distinction was made between it and a case where, on the face of the record, absolutely no jurisdiction has attached, and the right to a writ of mandamus in the latter case was affirmed.

As we have shown, the want of jurisdiction of the circuit court appears clearly on the record in the case at bar, and does not, as in Re Pollitz and Ex parte Nebraska, depend upon findings of fact which the circuit court had jurisdiction to make. We think, therefore, it is clear that the writ of mandamus ought to issue.

A subordinate question must receive some attention. It is said that the petitioner in 469]this case appeared generally in the *circuit court after the removal of the case, and thereby waived his right to object to the jurisdiction, and Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706, is cited in support of the position. But that case simply held that where there was a diversity of citizenship, which gave jurisdiction to some circuit court, the objection that there was no jurisdiction in a particular district might be waived by appearing and pleading to the merits; and anything to the contrary said in Ex parte Wisner was overruled, though the Wisner Case was otherwise left untouched. See Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 210 U. S. 368, 369, 52 L. ed. 1101, 1102, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720. Here, however, is a case where, upon its face, no circuit court of the United States had jurisdiction of the controversy, originally or by removal. In such a case the consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, ante, 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42, and cases cited.

The rule is made absolute and the writ of mandamus awarded.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

“

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

Vol. 214.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
 DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
 OCTOBER TERM, 1908,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 214,

 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 214 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 214 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Compton v. Alabama	885	88-90	Woodwell v. United States	922
4	" "	885	90	" "	923
4-7	" "	886	91-92	Welch v. Swasey	923
7-8	" "	887	92-95	" "	924
9	Re Riggs	887	95	" "	925
12-13	" "	888	103	" "	926
13-15	" "	889	103-105	" "	929
15	Whitcomb v. White	889	106-108	" "	930
15-16	" "	890	108	" "	931
16-18	" "	891	108-110	Gray v. Noholoa	931
18-19	" "	892	110-111	" "	932
19-20	Smithsonian Institution v. St. John	892	111-113	" "	933
20-23	" "	893	113	{ Collins v. O'Neil
23	" "	894	114-116	{ Collins v. San Francisco	933
27-29	" "	897	116	" "	934
29-31	" "	898	120-122	" "	935
31-33	" "	899	122-124	" "	936
33	Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Unit- ed States		124	United States ex rel. Parish v. MacVeagh	936
38-40	" "	900	125-127	" "	937
40-42	" "	901	130-131	" "	938
42-44	" "	902	131-134	" "	939
44-47	" "	903	134-136	" "	940
47	" "	904	136-138	" "	941
47	J. M. Ceballos & Co. v. Unit- ed States	904	138	District of Columbia v. Brooke	941
48-51	" "	905	139-141	" "	942
51-54	" "	906	141-142	" "	943
54-55	" "	907	147-148	" "	944
55-58	" "	908	148-150	" "	945
58-60	" "	909	150-152	" "	946
60-62	" "	910	153	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin	946
62-65	" "	911	153-155	" "	947
65-67	" "	912	155-156	" "	948
67-69	" "	913	158	" "	949
69-70	" "	914	158-160	" "	950
71	Goodrich v. Ferris	914	161	Dupree v. Manser	950
74-76	" "	916	164-165	" "	951
76-79	" "	917	165-167	" "	952
79-81	" "	918	167	" "	953
81	" "	919	168-169	Ubarri y Yramategui v. La- borde	953
82	Woodwell v. United States	919	169-171	" "	954
82-85	" "	920	171-173	" "	955
85-87	" "	921	173	Laborde v. Ubarri	955

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 214 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 214 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
174-175	Laborde v. Ubarri	956	298-300	Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis
175	Leech v. Louisiana	956		Hay & Grain Co.	1005
177-178	" "	957	300-302	" "	1006
178	" "	958	302	United States v. National
179	Des Moines v. Des Moines City			Exch. Bank	1006
	R. Co.	958	303-305	" "	1007
183-184	" "	959	305	" "	1008
184	" "	960	309	" "	1008
185	Peck v. Tribune Co.	960	309-312	" "	1009
188-190	" "	962	312-314	" "	1010
190	" "	963	314-317	" "	1011
191-192	Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v.		317-319	" "	1012
	McDonald	963	319-320	" "	1013
192-194	" "	964	320	Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v.
194-196	" "	965		Stranahan	1013
196	Rogers v. Jones	965	329-331	" "	1018
196-198	" "	966	331-333	" "	1019
198-199	" "	967	333-336	" "	1020
203-204	" "	969	336-338	" "	1021
205	Washington v. Oregon	969	338-340	" "	1022
214-215	" "	970	340-343	" "	1023
215-218	" "	971	343	" "	1024
218	" "	972	344	{ International Mercantile
218-220	Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky	972		Marine Co. v. Stranahan
221-223	" "	973		International Mercantile
224-226	Cabrera v. American Colonial			Marine Co. v. Stranahan	1024
	Bank	974	345	Weems S. B. Co. v. People's
226-228	" "	975		S. B. Co.	1024
228-229	" "	976	345-347	" "	1025
229-232	" "	977	351-353	" "	1027
232-234	" "	978	353-355	" "	1028
234-235	" "	979	355-357	" "	1029
236	Bong v. Alfred S. Campbell		357-359	" "	1030
	Art Co.	979	359	English v. Arizona ex rel.
242-244	" "	982		Griffith	1030
244-247	" "	983	360	" "	1031
247-248	" "	984	360-362	" "	1032
249	Kreigh v. Westinghouse, C. K.		362-365	" "	1033
	& Co.	984	365	" "	1034
252-253	" "	986	366	{ Expanded Metal Co. v. Brad-
253-255	" "	987		ford
255-258	" "	988		General Fireproofing Co. v.
258-259	" "	989		Expanded Metal Co.	1034
260	Santiago v. Noguerras	989	373-375	" "	1036
263-265	" "	990	375-377	" "	1037
265-267	" "	991	377-379	" "	1038
267-268	" "	992	379-381	" "	1039
268-269	Tupifio v. La Compania Gen-		381-384	" "	1040
	eral De Tabacos De Fili-		384-386	" "	1041
	pinas	992	386	United States v. Shipp	1041
269-272	" "	993	403-404	" "	1042
272-274	" "	994	404-407	" "	1043
274	Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Chiles	994	407-409	" "	1044
275-277	" "	996	409-412	" "	1045
277-279	" "	997	412-414	" "	1046
279	Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry		414-417	" "	1047
	Goods Co.	997	417-419	" "	1048
280-281	" "	998	419-422	" "	1049
281-284	" "	999	422-425	" "	1050
284-286	" "	1000	425-427	" "	1051
289	" "	1001	427-430	" "	1052
289-291	" "	1002	430-432	" "	1053
291-292	" "	1003	432-435	" "	1054
292	Joseph Wild & Co. v. Provi-		435-437	" "	1055
	dent Life & Trust Co.	1003	437-438	" "	1056
296-297	" "	1004	485	Johnson v. Tennessee	1056
297-298	Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis		487-532	Memorandum Cases	1057-1071
	Hay & Grain Co.	1004

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

1] *J. D. COMPTON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF ALABAMA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-8.)

Extradition — necessity of indictment or affidavit.

1. The executive of a state upon whom demand is made for the arrest and extradition of a fugitive criminal has no power to issue his warrant of arrest for a crime committed in another state, so far as any authority has been conferred upon him by the Federal statutes, unless he is furnished with a copy of the indictment or affidavit required by the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597, governing interstate extradition. [For other cases, see Extradition, IV. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Extradition — affidavit — notary public as magistrate.

2. An affidavit made before a notary public who, under Ga. Code 1895, vol. 2, pp. 93, 982, is ex officio a justice of the peace, must be regarded as satisfying the requirement of the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, governing interstate extradition, that such affidavit be made before a magistrate, where the governor of Georgia has based his requisition upon such affidavit, and a warrant of arrest has been issued thereon by the governor of the state upon whom the demand for arrest and extradition was made.

[For other cases, see Extradition, IV. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 175.]

Submitted April 20, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

NOTE.—As to what papers are necessary to obtain the surrender of a fugitive from another state—see note to Ex parte Hart (C. C. App. 4th C.) 28 L.R.A. 801. 53 L. ed.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the City Court of Montgomery in that state, denying habeas corpus sought on behalf of a person arrested pursuant to an extradition requisition. Affirmed.

See same case below, 152 Ala. 68, 44 So. 685.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John M. Chilton submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Alexander M. Garber submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Thomas W. Martin was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By an affidavit, proper in form and substantially sufficient in its statement of facts, made before a notary public of Fulton county, Georgia, Compton, the plaintiff in error, was charged with having committed the offense of being a common cheat and swindler. The solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta officially notified the governor that the accused had been so charged and had fled to Alabama, and a requisition on the governor of Alabama was asked for the extradition of Compton, to the end that he might be brought back to Georgia, to be tried according to law for the offense charged.

The governor of Georgia thereupon made a requisition on the governor of Alabama, who, having received the requisition, issued his warrant for the arrest of Compton, if to be found in Alabama, and his delivery into the custody of the agent of Georgia. Having been arrested under that warrant by a sheriff, the accused sued out a writ of habeas corpus before the judge of the city court of Montgomery, Alabama, and sought discharge from custody upon the ground that he was illegally restrained of his liberty. The return by the sheriff to the writ justified the detention of Compton under the requisition of the governor of Georgia and the warrant of arrest issued by the governor of Alabama.

Upon the hearing of the case before the judge of the Montgomery city court, the accused demurred to the return, and the demurrer having been overruled, he was ordered into the custody of the agent of Georgia for extradition pursuant to law. From that order Compton prosecuted an appeal to the supreme court of Alabama, and that court affirmed the order of the Montgomery city court.

It is contended that the affidavit upon which the governor of Georgia based his requisition, although certified by him to *be authentic, was not in compliance with the Revised Statutes of the United States; that the proceedings in Georgia were not sufficient to authorize the governor of Alabama to issue his warrant of arrest; and that the proceedings on the hearing of the petition for habeas corpus did not show that there had been an indictment against Compton or such an affidavit before a magistrate of Georgia, charging the accused with crime, as is required by the statutes of the United States.

In our judgment the only material question not substantially covered by the former decisions of this court is that raised by the objection that the affidavit in Georgia on which the governor of that state based his requisition was made before a notary public, and not before a "magistrate," as required by the Revised Statutes of the United States, enacted in the execution of the constitutional provision relating to fugitives from justice. This specific objection was raised by the assignments of error for the supreme court of the state, but that court did not seem to have regarded it as of sufficient gravity to be specially noticed in its opinion. But, as the objection is covered by the assignment of errors for this court, and as it asserts a right under the laws of the United States, we deem it appropriate to meet and dispose of it.

The proceedings against Compton were had under § 5278 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597), as follows: "Whenever the executive authority of any state or territory demands any person, as a fugitive from justice, of the executive authority of any state or territory to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any state or territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state or territory from whence the person so charged has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the state or territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to *the agent of such authority appointed [6 to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear. If no such agent appears within six months from the time of the arrest, the prisoner may be discharged. All costs or expenses incurred in the apprehending, securing, and transmitting such fugitive to the state or territory making such demand, shall be paid by such state or territory."

Undoubtedly, the statute does not make it the duty of a governor to issue a warrant for the arrest of an alleged fugitive from justice unless the executive of the demanding state produces to him either a copy of an indictment against the accused in the demanding state, or an affidavit before a magistrate of such state, charging the fugitive with the commission of crime in the state making the demand. It is, we think, equally clear, that the executive of the state in which the fugitive is at the time may decline to honor the requisition of the governor of the demanding state if the latter fails to furnish a copy of an indictment against the accused, or of any affidavit before a magistrate. But, has the executive of the state upon whom the demand is made for the arrest and extradition of the fugitive, the power to issue his warrant of arrest for a crime committed in another state, unless he is furnished with a copy of the required indictment or affidavit? We are of opinion that he has not, so far as any authority in respect to fugitives from justice has been conferred upon him by the statute of the United States. The statute, we think, makes it essential to the right to arrest the alleged fugitive under a warrant of the executive of the state where the alleged fugitive is found that such executive be furnished, before issuing his warrant, with a copy of an indictment or an affidavit before a magistrate in the demanding state, and charging the fugitive with crime committed by him in such state. It is therefore material under this interpretation to inquire whether the affidavit made the basis in this case of the requisition by the governor of Georgia, and which is certified to be authentic, was such an affidavit as the Revised Statutes of the United States required (in the *absence of an indictment) to be produced to the governor of Alabama as the basis of any warrant of arrest that he might issue.

The record shows that the affidavit, a copy of which accompanied the requisition of the governor of Georgia, was made, as we have already said, before a notary public. Was that sufficient under § 5278 of the Revised Statutes, requiring an affidavit to be made before a "magistrate," that is, before one who could properly be deemed a magistrate within the meaning of the law of the state under whose authority he acts as notary public, and in which his duties are discharged? In a general sense a magistrate is a public civil officer, possessing such power—legislative, executive, or judicial—as the government appointing him may ordain. In a narrow sense, a magistrate is regarded—perhaps, commonly regarded—as an inferior judicial officer, such as a justice of the peace. 2 Bouvier's Law Dict. 92. But the appellation of magistrate "is not confined to justices of the peace, and other persons, ejusdem generis, who exercise general judicial powers; but it includes others whose duties are strictly executive." Anderson's Law Dict. 643, 644. In Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Sumn. 401, 405, Fed. Cas. No. 5,609, the question was whether an alderman of Philadelphia, who was invested by law with all the powers and authority of a justice of the peace, was not to be deemed, in the strictest sense, a magistrate, within the meaning of a statute relating to the acknowledgment of deeds "before a justice of the peace or magistrate." Mr. Justice Story said that the alderman was to be deemed a magistrate within the statute referred to; "for," said he, "I know of no other definition of the term 'magistrate' than that he is a person clothed with power as a public civil officer,"—citing 1 Bl. Com. 146.

Could a notary public be deemed a magistrate in Georgia? If so, § 5278 of the Revised Statutes was satisfied; for that statute must be held to mean that a person may be regarded as a magistrate, before whom the required affidavit can be made, if he is so regarded under the law of the state 8]where the *alleged crime was committed. Upon looking into the Code of Georgia we find that provision is made for the appointment of notaries public by the judges of the superior courts, on the recommendation of the grand juries of the several counties. Their term of office is four years, and they are commissioned by the governor, and are "ex officio justices of the peace, and shall be removable on condition for malpractice in office." Georgia Code, vol. 2, § 4052, p. 982. They are designated as commissioned notaries public. And it is further provided that "justices, and notaries public who are ex officio justices of the peace shall keep separate dockets of all civil and criminal causes disposed of by them," and "lay their dockets before the grand juries of their respective counties on the first day of each term of the superior court for inspection." Id. 1895, p. 93.

In view of these provisions of the Code of Georgia, we hold that the notary public before whom the affidavit in that state was made may be regarded as a magistrate within the meaning of § 5278 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Such, it must be assumed, was the view of the governor of Alabama when issuing his warrant of arrest under the authority of that statute. When it appears, as it does here, that the affidavit in question was regarded by the executive authority of the respective states concerned as a sufficient basis, in law, for their acting,—the one in making a requisition, the other in issuing a warrant for the arrest of the alleged fugitive,—the judiciary should not interfere, on habeas corpus, and discharge the accused upon technical grounds, and unless it be clear that what was done was in plain contravention of law.

No question other than the one herein disposed of is of such importance or difficulty as to require notice at our hands, and we adjudge that, as the Supreme Court of Alabama did not, by its final order, deny any right secured to the plaintiff in error by the Constitution or laws of the United States, its judgment must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

*RE MARY HATCH RIGGS. [9

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 9-15.)

Mandamus — to bankruptcy court — substitute for writ of error.

An adjudication of bankruptcy against a tunnel company on a petition alleging that such company was "engaged in the business of building and contracting" calls for a decision of a question of fact, or of mixed law and fact, as to whether the principal business of such company was that of manufacturing, and contracting for such manufacturing, so as to be within the purview of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 547, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3423), as amended by the act of NOTE.—As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; McCluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

On mandamus as substitute for appeal—see note to James v. Central Trust Co. 47 C. C. A. 376.

February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 1025), which decision cannot be reviewed by mandamus.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. c. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 11, Original.]

Argued April 12, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

APPPLICATION for mandamus to the Judges of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York and to the District Court of that District to review an adjudication of bankruptcy. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Benjamin S. Catchings argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

This proceeding is justified by the practice of this court.

Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 214; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Kentucky v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 633, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 692; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 264, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 109.

The writ will issue from this court to a subordinate court of the United States:

(a) When the lower court has jurisdiction of a case but refuses to hear and decide it (Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 853; Re Connaway, 178 U. S. 421, 44 L. ed. 1134, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951), unless its right to issue the writ in such a case has been expressly or impliedly taken away by statute (Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 34 L. ed. 738, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141).

(b) When the lower court, having heard the case, refuses to enter a judgment or decree, or refuses to perform some purely ministerial act, like signing a bill of exceptions (Life & Fire Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 949).

(c) When the lower court, after an appeal to this court, has, through misconstruction, mistake, or otherwise, failed to execute directions of this court according to what appears to this court to be the manifest meaning of such directions (Gaines v. Rugg [Gaines v. Caldwell] 148 U. S. 228, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520).

(d) When the lower court, on the face of the record, has no power to act (Ex parte Bradley; Virginia v. Rives; Virginia v. Paul; Kentucky v. Powers; and Ex parte Wisner,—supra).

The equities demand the relief prayed for. Anderson, Receivers, p. 414.

Mr. Charles K. Beckman argued the cause and filed a brief for respondents:

Mandamus will not lie where its purpose is to perform the office of appeal or writ of error, even if no appeal or writ of error is allowed by law.

American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 379, 37 L. ed. 486, 489, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Re Politz, 206 U. S. 323, 51 L. ed. 1081, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Ex parte Newman, 14 Wall. 152, 20 L. ed. 877; Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, 52 L. ed. 876, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Re Key, 189 U. S. 84, 47 L. ed. 720, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706; Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 210 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 1101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an application by the petitioner for mandamus against Judges Holt and Hough of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York and the *district court of that district, [13 commanding them and each of them to dismiss all proceedings in bankruptcy against the New York Tunnell Company, or, in the alternative, to reopen the adjudication in bankruptcy, and allow the petitioner or any party in interest to appear and be heard in opposition to the petition and adjudication thereof; or, in still further alternative, forbidding them from taking any further proceedings in the matter of the tunnel company, its property, assets, and effects.

The facts, briefly stated, are that the tunnel company was engaged in constructing a tunnel from New York to Brooklyn, to be used for the purpose of a railroad between the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn. On May 23, 1907, certain creditors of the tunnel company filed a petition in bankruptcy in the district court of the southern district of New York, upon which petition, on May 29, 1907, Judge Holt entered an order adjudicating it a bankrupt, and appointing a receiver. By direction of the bankruptcy court the receiver proceeded with the construction of the tunnel, and successfully completed the work. At the time of the petition in bankruptcy this applicant had an action pending in the state court to recover damages on account of the death of her husband, resulting, as charged, from the negligence of the tunnel company. On May 31, 1907, Judge Holt issued an order to show cause why that action should not be restrained, and proof of the claim be made before a special master. An order of restraint was granted upon this application, which was afterwards set aside by the court of appeals, and the applicant, on May 25, 1908, reduced her claim to judgment.

It is contended by the applicant that, although the petition in bankruptcy alleged that the tunnel company was "engaged in the business of building and contracting," it failed to show that the principal business of the company was "manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing, mining, or mercantile pursuits," that being the language of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 547, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3423], as amended. [32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 1025.]

14] *We have recently given full consideration to the circumstances under which mandamus will be issued by this court to restrain the action of inferior tribunals. Re Winn, 213 U. S. 458, ante, 873, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515. Hence we deem it unnecessary to go into other details of the proceedings in the bankruptcy or the state courts, nor to consider the many questions fully and elaborately presented in briefs and argued by counsel. Obviously, this application is largely in the nature of a writ of error to review the action of the district court of the southern district of New York and its judges, and a writ of mandamus is no proper substitute for a writ of error.

The allegation in the petition in bankruptcy is general in its terms, that the tunnel company is engaged in the business of building and contracting, but it fails to disclose the particular kind of work for which it is contracting, or which it is engaged in building. It might be inferred from the work which it was shown it was doing in this particular case, as well as from its name, that its principal business was that of contracting for the construction of tunnels; but that would be only an inference, and not conclusive. Its principal business may have been that of manufacturing, and contracting for such manufacturing, and this particular work only a small part of that which it was generally engaged in. What evidence was presented to the district court to sustain the application for an adjudication in bankruptcy is not disclosed. We may not assume that it was insufficient, or that it failed to make certain or probable that the principal business of the company was that of manufacturing, and contracting for such manufacturing. We do not deem it necessary to decide the question which is argued by counsel, whether the adjudication of the bankruptcy court can be challenged collaterally, or whether, indeed, this is only a collateral attack. Manson v. Williams, 213 U. S. 453, ante, 869, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515, 2d ed.

Ct. Rep. 519. We rest our conclusion upon the proposition that the district court, in adjudicating the tunnel company a bankrupt, was called upon to decide, and did decide, a question of fact or of mixed law and fact, and that such adjudication cannot be reviewed *by proceedings in mandamus. [15 Re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323, 331, 51 L. ed. 1081, 1083, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Re Winn, supra.]

The rule is discharged and the writ of mandamus denied.

JOHN B. WHITCOMB, Surviving Partner of the Firm of Moses P. Whitcomb and John B. Whitcomb, Copartners as Whitcomb Brothers, et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

JOHN E. WHITE and Roberta B. White.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 15-19.)

Courts—relation to Land Department — conclusiveness of departmental findings.

A finding of the Land Department in favor of a homestead entry in a contest with persons claiming to have been occupants of the premises as a town site, which rests, not solely upon the fact that the application for the homestead entry was filed a few hours before that of the trustee for the occupants of the town site, but rather chiefly on the priority of the homesteader's equitable rights, must be regarded as conclusive by the Federal Supreme Court,—especially where such finding is reinforced by the judgments of the state courts,—unless there is the clearest and most convincing evidence of mistake or injustice. [For other cases, see Courts, 260a-285, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 185.]

Argued April 28, 29, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho to review a judgment setting aside an award of damages by the District Court of the First Judicial District of that state in and for the County of Kootenai in an action to recover possession of real property, but affirming the judgment below in favor of plaintiffs for the recovery of possession. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Idaho, 490, 90 Pac. 1080.

NOTE.—On the conclusiveness and effect of the decisions of Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38; Carson City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 28 C. C. A. 344; and Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. v. Greede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. 57 C. C. A. 207.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was an action brought by John E. White and Roberta B. White, his wife, in the district court of the first judicial district of the state of Idaho, in and for the county of Kootenai, to recover the possession of the "northwest quarter of the southwest quarter and lots five (5), six (6), and seven (7), of section two (2), township fifty-five (55) north of range two (2) east, Boise meridian."

The defendants' answer was in the nature of a cross bill in equity, admitting that the legal title to the premises was in the plaintiffs, and seeking to charge them as holders of that title in trust for the use and benefit of the defendants. A trial before the court without a jury resulted in a judgment for the plaintiffs for the recovery of 16]possession, and damages *for the detention. On appeal to the supreme court of the state, the award of damages was set aside, but the judgment for the recovery of possession was affirmed. Thereupon the case was brought here on error.

The plaintiffs' title was a patent from the United States to plaintiff John E. White, based upon a homestead entry. The defendants claimed to have been occupants of the premises as a town site, and that therefore the land was not subject to entry as a homestead. The application for the homestead entry was formally made at the land office a few hours before that of the probate judge of the county, acting under the statutes as trustee for the occupants of the town site. A contest was had in the local land office, which resulted in a finding in favor of the plaintiff John E. White. This decision was sustained by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and affirmed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. Albert Allen argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The plaintiff is a trustee for the benefit of the occupants of the land occupied by the defendants.

Starr v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 419, 18 L. ed. 925, 930; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. 6, 15 L. ed. 801; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black, 554, 17 L. ed. 265; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 85, 20 L. ed. 485, 487; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 175, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018.

Mr. George H. Lamar argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. M. Stephens, filed a brief for defendants in error:

Findings of fact by the lower Federal courts are conclusive.

Saulet v. Shepherd, 4 Wall. 502, 18 L. ed. 442; Copelin v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 9 Wall. 461, 467, 19 L. ed. 739, 741; Mercantile

Mut. Ins. Co. v. Folsom, 18 Wall. 237, 249, 21 L. ed. 827, 833; United States v. Dawson, 101 U. S. 569, 25 L. ed. 791; Tyng v. Grinnell, 92 U. S. 467, 23 L. ed. 733; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 425, 26 L. ed. 800, 802.

The same rule obtains in actions at law on a writ of error to the state courts.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Re Buchanan, 158 U. S. 31, 39 L. ed. 884, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Lewis v. Campau, 3 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed. 211; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345, 348, 24 L. ed. 940, 941.

Also in equity cases, on writ of error from the Supreme Court, the prevailing practice of the higher court of the United States seems to be for that court to refuse to go into questions of fact.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Egan v. Hunt, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Ebaugh, 185 U. S. 114, 122, 46 L. ed. 830, 833, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 513, 48 L. ed. 769, 770, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

Findings of fact and mixed questions of fact and law by the Land Department are conclusive on the courts.

De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 122, 47 L. ed. 734, 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Potter v. Hall, 189 U. S. 292, 47 L. ed. 817, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Stewart v. McHarry, 159 U. S. 643, 40 L. ed. 290, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 647, 35 L. ed. 291, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463, 27 L. ed. 526, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 451, 27 L. ed. 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 423, 425, 426, 26 L. ed. 800-802; United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372, 374, 26 L. ed. 213, 214; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 476-478, 25 L. ed. 801, 802; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 519, 520, 25 L. ed. 929, 931; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 65, 66, 69, 25 L. ed. 93, 95, 96; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 171, 172, 23 L. ed. 813, 814; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 339, 340, 23 L. ed. 424, 427, 428.

It is not permissible to introduce evidence in the courts upon any question that was raised or could have been raised in the Interior Department.

Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 520, 25 L. ed. 931; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 37 C. C. A. 290, 95 Fed. 864; Wiseman v. Eastman, 21 Wash. 163, 57 Pac. 398; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 641, 26 L. ed. 876.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision of the Land Department was not rested solely upon the fact that White's formal application was filed a few hours before that of the trustee for the occupants of the town site, but rather chiefly upon the priority of the former's equitable rights. So far as such decision involves questions of fact, it is conclusive upon the courts. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 86, 20 L. ed. 485, 487; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 340, 23 L. ed. 424, 427; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 476, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 425, 426, 26 L. ed. 800, 802; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 120, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519.

And this rule is applied in cases where 17] there is a mixed *question of law and fact, unless the court is able to so separate the question as to see clearly what and where the mistake of law is. As said by Mr. Justice Miller in Marquez v. Frisbie, supra, p. 476:

"This means, and it is a sound principle, that where there is a mixed question of law and of fact, and the court cannot so separate it as to see clearly where the mistake of law is, the decision of the tribunal to which the law has confided the matter is conclusive." Quinby v. Conlan, supra, 426.

Further, the 38th and 39th findings of the trial court, which were not disturbed by the supreme court in its opinion, were:

"38. That the officers of the Interior Department did not exclude any testimony, and there was in said Land Office and said Department a full, fair, and complete hearing.

"39. That the officers of said Interior Department, of said Land Office, or any or either of them, were not guilty of any fraud or any unlawful conduct."

Clearly, the findings of the Land Department cannot be disregarded, especially since they are reinforced by the judgment of the state courts. This court ought not to reverse such judgment except upon the clearest and most convincing evidence of mistake or injustice.

These are among the matters shown by 53 L. ed.

the testimony and upon which the decisions of the Land Department and the state court were based: While the entire quarter section was public land, and before settlement by any individual, the Northern Pacific constructed its road, crossing Clark's fork of the Columbia river near the tract. At that time the public surveys had not been extended over this region; indeed, were not so extended until 1893, and the approved plat of the township was not filed in the local land office until November 27, 1895, the day the formal applications of these parties were made. Between 1884 and 1890 some four or five persons settled on the tract, who, with others, at the time of the application for the town site entry, in 1895, claimed to be then occupying *it for the purposes of [18 trade and business, and to have established a town, which they called Clark's Fork. The right of way of the Northern Pacific was 400 feet in width (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), and, at first, the houses were upon this right of way, the settlers believing that it was only 200 feet in width. The original occupants were not seeking to establish a town, but to enter the land as a homestead. The first attempt to obtain title to the tract in controversy under the town site laws was made on October 29, 1895, when a petition signed by ten persons was filed with the probate judge of the county, asking him to secure the tract as a town site. Melder v. White, 28 Land Dec. 412, 415. In 1890 the plaintiff White was the station agent of the Northern Pacific at that place, and in 1891 settled upon the land, making his home outside the right of way, and intending to enter it as a homestead. There was talk between him and some of the other occupants in reference to an apportionment of the quarter section between them, but no agreement was reached. In other words, the occupation at first was with no thought of a town, but by parties contemplating securing homes under the homestead law. After it had been ascertained that the railroad right of way was 400 feet in width, and in 1893, the settlers were notified by the railroad company of its title. Thereupon some leased from the company while others moved their houses off the company's ground. Under those circumstances questions of fact arose as to the first occupant, and for what purpose he occupied it. In deciding the contest, the Secretary of the Interior held (28 Land Dec. 412, 421):

"In the case at bar, at the time of the survey in the field, White was the only settler on this subdivision except Whitcomb, the other parties at that time being located on the right of way, and as to them White's right, as a prior settler, attached to the entire tract from such time. Any right Whitcomb may have had as a homestead settler by reason of his settlement before survey in the field is lost by his failure to assert the same under the homestead law.

"The evidence shows that, after the survey in the field, *White made claim to the entire tract, and exercised rights of ownership over the same. It was necessary for him to adjust his settlement claim to the lines of the public survey, and, in so doing, to include the legal subdivision on which his improvements were placed."

Notwithstanding some conflict in the testimony, there was abundant to support the findings of the Secretary of the Interior, and, as heretofore stated, such findings of facts are to be regarded as conclusive in any controversy in the courts.

There was no error in the decisions of the Supreme Court of Idaho, and its judgment is affirmed.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION and Melville W. Fuller, as Chancellor of said Smithsonian Institution, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

GAMALIEL C. ST. JOHN, as Executor and Trustee under the Last Will and Testament of Wallace C. Andrews, Deceased, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 19-33.)

Error to state court—Federal question—raising on rehearing.

1. An affidavit in support of a petition for rehearing in the highest state court, stating that, in the brief as well as upon oral argument, a specified Federal question had been presented and discussed, will not support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, where the state court denied the petition, with the statement that no Federal question had been raised in that court, which may be construed as denying

NOTE.—On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

On the review of decisions of state courts presenting the question of full faith and credit—see note to Allen v. Alleghany Co. 49 L. ed. U. S. 551.

that any such matter was brought to its attention, as stated in the affidavit, or as holding that it presented no Federal question.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1298-1310, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court—decision of Federal question—full faith and credit.

2. A decision of a state court sustaining the validity of a statute of another state, which is asserted to violate the Constitution of that state, does not necessarily involve a decision respecting the full faith and credit to be given such Constitution, so as to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, where the state court did not question the validity of the state Constitution, but, rightly or wrongly, held that the statute was not repugnant to it.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1423-1427, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 613.]

Argued April 5, 6, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for the County of New York to review a judgment entered pursuant to a judgment of the Court of Appeals of that state, which, with a slight modification, had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of that state, First Department, affirming a judgment of the Special Term of the Supreme Court of the County of New York, sustaining the validity of a charitable bequest. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, Appellate Division, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. Supp. 808; Court of Appeals, 191 N. Y. 254, 83 N. E. 981.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This is in effect a controversy between the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, District of Columbia, and the Andrews Institute for Girls, a corporation of the state of Ohio, concerning a will made by Wallace C. Andrews, a resident of the city, county, and state of New York, who died in that city on April 7, 1899. Both Mr. Andrews and his wife perished on that day in a fire in their dwelling house in New York city. Whether husband or wife died first is not known. She was twelve years younger than he. They had no children. The will was executed on November 12, 1891. After some special gifts, which need not be noticed, the will provides:

"Fourth: Upon the death of my said wife, I devise and bequeath to the corporation hereinafter directed to be formed, all the excess and residue of my estate over the sum of $500,000 specified in the third paragraph hereof.

"Fifth: I direct my executor and executrix as soon as practicable after my decease and during the lives of my said wife and her said brother or the life of the long-21]est liver of them, to *procure under the laws of the state of Ohio, an incorporation to be formed with proper powers, for the purpose of establishing an institution on the farm known as the Williams farm, formerly owned by me and now owned by my wife, fronting on Erie street, in the town of Willoughby, Lake county, Ohio, or if said farm be for any cause not available, then on other suitable premises in the said town of Willoughby, for the free education of girls and for their support in proper cases during education, with a special view toward rendering them self-supporting.

"Said institution shall contain, among others, a sewing department, cooking department, designing department and departments of phonography and typewriting and other useful work that would afford the pupils employment in life, including such new discoveries and inventions as may be made from time to time tending to enlarge the opportunities for useful and honorable employment for women, and such as will aid them in obtaining honorable and independent positions in life. Such school to be open only to girls between the ages of ten and sixteen, both inclusive.

"Not exceeding one tenth of the sum devoted to the said institution by the fourth paragraph hereof may be used for the erection of suitable buildings therefor on the said farm, or in the contingency above specified, for the purchase of suitable premises in said town and the erection of such buildings thereon, and the income of the remaining nine tenths shall be devoted to the support and maintenance of said institution.

"If, when the said sum shall be received by said corporation, the one tenth thereof shall not, in the judgment of the directors, be sufficient for such erection or such purchase and erection as the case may be, the whole sum may, in their discretion, be allowed to accumulate until the one tenth thereof with its accumulation shall be so sufficient, when such one tenth may be used therefor, while the income of the remaining nine tenths of said sum and accumulations shall be devoted to the support and maintenance of said institution.

22] * "The charter of the said corporation shall also provide, if and so far as may be consistent with law and practicable, for the management of the said corporation by a board of five directors, to consist of the governor for the time being of the state of Ohio, the member of Congress for the time being for the congressional district embracing said town of Willoughby, the treasurer for the time being of said county of Lake, the mayor for the time being of Willoughby, and the said Gamaliel C. St. John, and for the choice of a resident of Willoughby by the said governor as successor to the said St. John as often as the fifth place shall become or be vacant.

"Sixth: If my said wife shall die before me, then the dispositions provided for in the third and fourth paragraphs hereof shall take effect upon my death.

"Seventh: I direct my said executor and executrix as soon as they may deem advisable, but within two years after my decease, to sell all my real estate and invest the proceeds in interest-paying securities, and as to all my estate I give them and my trustees power to invest and re-invest the same or any part thereof, having regard both to income and safety.

"Eighth: In case my intention with respect to the said institution for girls shall because of illegality fail, or become impossible of realization, I then devise and bequeath the sum intended for it to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, District of Columbia, to be devoted to the purposes for which it was established.

"Ninth: I appoint my said wife executrix and my said brother-in-law executor of this my will, and neither as such nor as trustees shall they be required to give security. All the powers herein granted to them may be exercised by the survivor of them and unless limited to their lives, by their successor or successors in the administration of my estate."

Mrs. Andrews dying at the same time her husband did, his brother-in-law, Mr. St. John, duly qualified as executor and trustee under the will. Thereafter he commenced this suit in the supreme court of New York county, seeking a construction *of the [23 will and a determination of the rights of the Andrews Institute for Girls, the Smithsonian Institution, and the heirs at law and next of kin of the deceased. The Andrews Institute for Girls, the Smithsonian Institution, Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, as Chancellor thereof, the attorney general of the state of New York, and the heirs and next of kin of the deceased, were made parties defendant. At a hearing in a special term of the supreme court of the county of New York it was held that "the defendant the Andrews Institute for Girls is entitled to the residuary estate of the said Wallace C. Andrews, deceased, together with the income thereof which has accrued since the death of said deceased, after paying the expenses of administration," and also that the defendant the Smithsonian Institution has no interest in the estate of the said Wallace C. Andrews, deceased. This decision was sustained by the appellate division of the first department, and thereafter, with a slight modification, by the court of appeals of the state, which remitted the record of the supreme court of New York city, where the final judgment was entered. Thereupon that judgment was brought here on a writ of error by the Smithsonian Institution and its chancellor.

The defendants in error filed a motion to dismiss, which was postponed until the final hearing, and the case is now before us on such final hearing and motion to dismiss.

Messrs. Frank W. Hackett and Edmund Wetmore argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

That a state court holds that the Federal question was not raised is not conclusive. This court will look into the record and judge for itself what was the fact. It may find that the state court has ignored a claim of constitutional right. Such action is the equivalent of denying the Federal right.

Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 230, 48 L. ed. 418, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

This court must judge for itself of the true nature and effect of the order relied upon.

Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 335, 40 L. ed. 990, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

A right may be "specially set up and claimed," though not in terms stated to be a right claimed under the Constitution.

Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 51, 52 L. ed. 99, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Where the Federal question is raised for the first time in the supreme court of a state, and that court takes no notice of it, in its opinion, if this court sees that the question was in fact raised, it will take jurisdiction.

Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

The settled practice of this court is to look into the record in order to ascertain whether in fact there was presented to the state court a claim of a constitutional right.

McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 117, 43 L. ed. 387, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

The benefit of claiming the protection of the Constitution is not dependent upon an adherence to technical form. It is sufficient if it appear from the record that the right was specially set up or claimed in such manner as to bring it to the attention of the court.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 231, 41 L. ed. 982, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 534, 46 L. ed. 676, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446.

Mr. Virgil P. Kline argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry Wollman and Sheldon H. Tolles, filed a brief for defendant in error the Andrews Institute for Girls:

There is no Federal question in the record, and this court, therefore, has no jurisdiction.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, ante, 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

The claim of Federal right must be seasonably and specially made, and must appear plainly and openly upon the record. It cannot be introduced into the record by stealth or as an afterthought.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

It rests upon the litigant to make his claim and invoke the consideration of the court; but when no such ground has been presented to or considered by the courts of the state, it cannot be said that those courts have disregarded the Constitution of the United States, and this court has no jurisdiction.

Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 32, 36, 44 L. ed. 62, 63, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The first mention of the subject appears in the motion for reargument after the final decision, which motion was denied by the court of appeals, it finding that "no Federal question having been raised in this court."

Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 208 U. S. 570, 52 L. ed. 625, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; McCorquodale v. Texas, 211 U. S. 432, ante, 269, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146.

It is impossible, upon this record, to avoid the conclusion that it never occurred to the plaintiffs in error to raise a Federal question until after the case had been finally decided against them in the highest court of the state.

Scudder v. Comptroller, supra.

Effort is made in the affidavit filed with the motion for reargument to make it appear that the question was presented earlier. This court has held, in Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639, that Federal questions cannot be established by this process, but must appear on the record.

If a case is carried through the state courts upon arguments drawn from the state Constitution alone, the defeated party cannot try his chances here merely by suggesting for the first time, when he takes his writ of error, that the decision is wrong under the Constitution of the United States. Osborne v. Clarke, 204 U. S. 565, 51 L. ed. 619, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319.

Mr. James W. Hawes argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error St. John:

When, in the courts of a state, the validity of a statute of another state is not drawn in question, but only its construction, no Federal question arises.

Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 223, 32 L. ed. 908, 913, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 285, 34 L. ed. 700, 702, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 495, 496, 47 L. ed. 273-275, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

A real, and not a fictitious, question, is essential to the jurisdiction of this court over the judgments of state courts.

Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; New Orleans v. New Orleans Water Works Co. 142 U. S. 79, 87, 35 L. ed. 943, 946, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 532, 37 L. ed. 267, 268, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

Where the record discloses that, if a question has been raised and decided adversely to a party claiming the benefit of a provision of the Constitution or laws of the United States, another question, not Federal, has also been raised and decided against such party, and the decision of the latter question is sufficient, notwithstanding the Federal question, to sustain the judgment, this court will not review the judgment.

Jenkins v. Loewenthal, 110 U. S. 222, 28 L. ed. 129, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 156, 157, 30 L. ed. 614, 620, 621, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Hammond v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 150 U. S. 633, 37 L. ed. 1206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28

Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 52 L. ed. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Elder v. Wood, 208 U. S. 226, 233, 52 L. ed. 464, 466, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

This court has no jurisdiction to review a judgment of the highest court of a state unless a Federal question has been, either in express terms or by necessary effect, decided by that court against the plaintiffs in error.

Blount v. Walker, 134 U. S. 607, 33 L. ed. 1036, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 248, 46 L. ed. 171, 176, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Chappell v. Stewart, 169 U. S. 733, 42 L. ed. 1215, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Jones v. Vane, 200 U. S. 614, 50 L. ed. 621, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 209 U. S. 540, 52 L. ed. 917, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

The court of appeals will not consider a constitutional question unless it was raised in a proper manner in the courts below, it being held to be waived.

Dodge v. Cornelius, 168 N. Y. 244, 61 N. E. 244; Paul v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 175 N. Y. 478, 67 N. E. 1087; Re Andersen, 178 N. Y. 420, 70 N. E. 921; New York Bank Note Co. v. Hamilton Bank Note Engraving & Printing Co. 180 N. Y. 293, 73 N. E. 48; Purdy v. Erie R. Co. 162 N. Y. 50, 48 L.R.A. 669, 56 N. E. 508; Colby v. Day, 177 N. Y. 549, 69 N. E. 367.

Assuming that a Federal question was involved in this case, no Federal question was raised by plaintiffs in error prior to their motion for a reargument; and as the Federal question was not considered and acted upon by the court of appeals upon that motion, the raising of the Federal question came too late.

McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co. 197 U. S. 343, 49 L. ed. 784, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 208 U. S. 570, 52 L. ed. 625, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Paraíso v. United States, 207 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 249, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 84, 86, 87, 49 L. ed. 394-397, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

Inasmuch as plaintiffs in error relied in this case upon the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States, their claim must be "specially set up and claimed" by them.

Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 495, 47 L. ed. 273, 274, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 488, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Spies v. Illinois, 123

U. S. 131, 181, 31 L. ed. 80, 91, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22.

A mere claim which amounts to no more than a vague and inferential suggestion that a right under the Constitution of the United States has been denied, is not sufficient.

Thomas v. Iowa, 209 U. S. 258, 52 L. ed. 782, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Skaneateles Paper Co. v. Syracuse, 201 U. S. 642, 50 L. ed. 901, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 763; Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 62, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Welling, 181 U. S. 47, 45 L. ed. 739, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Stewart v. Louisiana, 207 U. S. 584, 52 L. ed. 351, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 653, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, supra; Osborne v. Clark, 204 U. S. 565, 568, 51 L. ed. 619, 626, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. New York, 186 U. S. 269, 273, 46 L. ed. 1158, 1160, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916.

Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972, is practically identical with the case at bar, and is conclusive that the writ of error herein should be dismissed.

Mr. Harold Nathan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error Norman C. Andrews:

Where the decision below was adverse to the plaintiffs in error upon two independent grounds, one of which is not a Federal question, the Supreme Court will dismiss the writ of error.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Seeberger v. McCormick, 175 U. S. 274, 44 L. ed. 161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45, ante, 81, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

Where it does not appear upon what ground the highest court of the state proceeded in affirming the judgment, and the case might properly have been determined upon a ground broad enough to support the judgment without resort to a Federal question, this court has no jurisdiction.

Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Skinner, 139 U. S. 293, 35 L. ed. 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528.

When the record discloses completely adequate grounds other than a Federal question, this court does not inquire whether the decision upon them was or was not correct, or reach a Federal question by determining that they ought not to have been held to warrant the result.

Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

If the court below rested its judgment upon principles of common law as it understood them, this court should not take jurisdiction, although the court below, whether rightly or wrongly, also upheld and relied upon the statute.

Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

It is too late to raise a Federal question reviewable by this court on a motion for rehearing in the state court unless that court entertained the motion and expressly passed upon the Federal question.

Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 208 U. S. 570, 52 L. ed. 625, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co. 197 U. S. 343, 347, 49 L. ed. 784, 787, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; French v. Taylor, 199 U. S. 274, 278, 50 L. ed. 189, 192, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 308, 47 L. ed. 480, 484, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

The mere construction by a state court of a statute of another state, without questioning its validity, does not deny to it the full faith and credit demanded by the statutes in order to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction.

Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

Whether a state statute is or is not in accordance with the requirement of the Constitution of such state is not a Federal question.

Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Murray v. Louisiana, 163 U. S. 101, 108, 41 L. ed. 87, 90, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 210 U. S. 187, 52 L. ed. 1016, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

The meaning of the Ohio Constitution was sought in the decisions of the Ohio courts, as well as confirmed by an independent construction; and in such case the Federal question is not presented.

Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. supra.

Mr. Henry M. Earle filed a brief for defendant in error Edith A. Logan.

Messrs. William S. Jackson and C. A. Dolson filed a brief on behalf of the state of New York.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

It is difficult to spell out from the record in this case the decision of any question arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States. Neither in the pleadings nor in the opinions is there a direct reference to any special provision of the Federal Constitution. It is true that, after the decision by the court of appeals, an affidavit was filed by one of the counsel for plaintiffs in error in support of a petition for a rehearing, stating that, in the brief, as well as upon the oral argument in that court, a Federal question (describing it) had been presented and discussed, which petition was denied by the court of appeals in these words:

"Ordered, that the said motion be and the same hereby is denied, with $10 costs, no Federal question having been raised in this court."

It is unnecessary to determine whether this of itself is sufficient to give jurisdiction to this court. The language of the court of appeals may be construed as denying that any such matter was brought to its attention as stated in the affidavit, or as holding that it presented no Federal question. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 51 L. ed. 566, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

Counsel further contend that there was necessarily involved in the decision of the case the determination of a question arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and that hence this court has jurisdiction of this writ of error, even if the question was not formally referred to by 28]counsel *or the state courts. Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540-548, 31 L. ed. 235-238, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 117, 43 L. ed. 382, 387, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 534, 46 L. ed. 673, 676, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Rogers v. Alabama, 192 U. S. 226, 230, 48 L. ed. 417, 418, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257, 258, in which last case it is said:

53 L. ed.

"It is a necessary and well-settled rule that the exercise of jurisdiction by this court to protect constitutional rights cannot be declined when it is plain that the fair result of a decision is to deny the rights. . . . There can be no doubt that, if full faith and credit were denied to a judgment rendered in another state upon a suggestion of want of jurisdiction, without evidence to warrant the finding, this court would enforce the constitutional requirement. See German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 48 L. ed. 373, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221."

The question upon which counsel rely arises upon article 4, § 1, of the Federal Constitution, which reads:

"Full faith and credit shall be given each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state; and the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof."

It is not pretended that any judgment of the state of Ohio was disregarded by the courts of New York, but it is contended that full force and effect was not given to the Constitution of the state of Ohio. This duty is as obligatory as the similar duty in respect to the judicial proceedings of that state. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, 268, 24 L. ed. 154, 157; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 622, 30 L. ed. 519, 522, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398, 401, in which Mr. Chief Justice Waite said:

"Without doubt the constitutional requirement, art. 4, § 1, that 'full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state,' implies that the public acts of every state shall be given the same effect by the courts of another state that they have by law and usage at home. This is clearly the logical result of the principles announced as early as 1813 in Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch, 481, 3 L. [29 ed. 411, and steadily adhered to ever since." Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 642, 44 L. ed. 619, 620, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

On the other hand, it is settled that the mere construction by a state court of the statute of another state, without questioning its validity, does not deny to it the full faith and credit demanded by the constitutional provision. Glenn v. Garth, 147 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 203, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L.

ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311.

In the light of these decisions we pass to consider the particular question presented. Sections 1 and 2 of article 13 of the Ohio Constitution read:

"Sec. 1. The general assembly shall pass no special act conferring corporate powers.

"Sec. 2. Corporations may be formed under general laws; but all such laws may, from time to time, be altered or repealed."

By § 3235, vol. 2, Bates's Anno. Stat. (Ohio) 6th ed. p. 1836; it is provided: "Corporations may be formed in the manner provided in this chapter for any purpose for which individuals may lawfully associate themselves, except for carrying on professional business;" and immediately following this section are those naming the conditions and methods of incorporation. After the death of the testator, and on March 19, 1902, the general assembly of the state of Ohio passed an act (Laws 1902, p. 61), the 1st section of which is as follows:

"Sec. 1. Whenever, by the last will and testament of any person which has heretofore been, or shall hereafter be, duly admitted to probate in this state or elsewhere, any decedent has devised or bequeathed, or may devise or bequeath, his or her property, or any portion thereof, for charitable uses within this state, or for the establishment and maintenance of any industrial or educational school or institution to be located at any place within this state; and when-30]ever, in any *such will and testament, it has been, or may be, provided that the executor or executors thereof shall organize a corporation under the laws of this state for the purpose of receiving the property so devised or bequeathed, and carrying out the charitable purposes in such will expressed, or establishing and maintaining the institution or school therein provided for, and such will further provides for the management of such corporation by a board of trustees or directors, consisting, in part, of officials of this state, of the county in which such charities are to be administered or such institution or school located, the officials of any municipal incorporation in said county, and the member of Congress for the district of which said county forms a part, or any of such officials, and names any other person or persons to be associated with said officials or any of them, and provides for the appointment of a successor or successors to the person or persons so appointed, to act with such officials in any manner specified in said will, such executor or executors, or his or their successors in office, and the persons hereinafter named, may constitute themselves a body corporate, with the general powers of benevolent incorporations."

The 2d section requires that a copy of the will or testament, for the carrying out of the provisions of which the corporation is organized, shall be set forth in the articles of incorporation. Thereafter the Andrews Institute for Girls was incorporated, containing, as required by § 2, the will of the testator. Now it is contended by counsel for the plaintiffs in error that this act was a special act, conferring corporate powers, and that therefore it and the incorporation made under it was in conflict with the Constitution of Ohio. It is not suggested that there has been any decision of the courts of Ohio in reference to the validity of the act or subsequent incorporation of the Andrews Institute, but it is insisted that it is so obvious that the act is a special act, conferring corporate powers, inasmuch as the terms of the will of an individual are the basis of the act and the incorporation, that the courts of *New[31 York could not have given force and effect to the prohibitions of the Constitution of Ohio. Nevertheless, whether rightly or wrongly, the New York courts held that there was no violation of the Constitution of Ohio, the court of appeals saying in its opinion:

"At the death of the testator the general statutes of Ohio provided that corporations might be formed for any purpose for which individuals might lawfully associate themselves, except for carrying on professional business. 2 Bates's Anno. Stat. (Ohio) 6th ed. p. 1836.

"Subsequent to the death of the testator, and in March, 1902, an act was passed by the general assembly of the state of Ohio entitled, 'An Act to Provide for the Administration of Charitable Trusts in Certain Cases.' If we assume that such act was passed to aid in the incorporation of the Andrews Institute for Girls, it is not necessarily unconstitutional for that reason. It is not an uncommon thing in any state for questions to arise making it desirable or perhaps necessary for further general legislation to enable persons interested to carry out desired and desirable measures. The fact that such further general statute is passed to aid a particular person for the time being does not make the act a special, as distinguished from a general, one. Whether an act, general in form, is a mere device to evade a wholesome constitutional provision, is largely dependent upon the special circumstances of each case. If the act relates to persons, places, and things as a class, and is neither local nor temporary, the mere fact that its practical effect is special and private does not necessarily prove that it violates constitutional provisions against special legislation. Re New York Elev. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 327-344; Re Church, 92 N. Y. 1; Re Henneberger, 155 N. Y. 420, 426, 42 L.R.A. 132, 50 N. E. 61; People v. Dunn, 157 N. Y. 528, 43 L.R.A. 247, 52 N. E. 572; Kittinger v. Buffalo Traction Co. 160 N. Y. 377, 54 N. E. 1081; People ex rel. Clauson v. Newburgh & S. Pl. Road Co. 86 N. Y. 1; Re New York & L. I. Bridge Co. 148 N. Y. 540, 42 N. E. 1088; Waterloo Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 128 N. Y. 345, 14 L.R.A. 481, 28 N. E. 358; Ferguson v. Ross, 126 N. Y. 32]459, 27 N. E. 954; Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. New York*, 152 N. Y. 257, 37 L.R.A. 788, 46 N. E. 499.

"The act so passed by the general assembly of the state of Ohio in 1902 would not seem to be a violation of the Constitution of that state. Platt v. Craig, 66 Ohio St. 75, 63 N. E. 594; State v. Spellmire, 67 Ohio St. 77, 65 N. E. 619; Gentsch v. State, 71 Ohio St. 151, 72 N. E. 900; Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Horstman, 72 Ohio St. 93, 73 N. E. 1075; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Sherman, 22 Ohio St. 411.

"Subsequent to the death of the testator, and on the 8th day of May, 1902, 'The Andrews Institute for Girls' was incorporated pursuant to the laws of the state of Ohio 'for the purpose of receiving the property devised and bequeathed in and by the wills of Wallace C. Andrews, and Margaret M. St. John Andrews, late of the city and state of New York, to the corporation therein directed to be formed, and for the purpose of carrying out the charitable purposes in such wills expressed, and of establishing and maintaining the institution therein provided for.'

"The articles of incorporation include a complete copy of the will of the testator, and also of the will and codicil of Margaret M. St. John Andrews. They also provide that the corporation shall be located in the town of Willoughby, Ohio, and name as members of the corporation the persons proposed in the will of said testator, together with two other persons in the state of Ohio, which persons so named constitute the board of directors for the administration and management of the property and trust or other funds of the corporation, and for the control and management of said institution. Said act of the general assembly of the state of Ohio among other things provides: 'The attorney general of the state of Ohio shall, in his official capacity, have power to bring proceedings in any court of record, and enforce any such devise or bequest, whenever he deems such action necessary for the protection and carrying out of the purposes named in said last will and testament, without waiting for the organization of such corporation.'"

*That there is some foundation for the[33 conclusion reached by the court of appeals is obvious from the opinions of the supreme court of Ohio, cited in the foregoing quotation. It is unnecessary to hold that there was no error in the ruling of the court of appeals. It is enough for the purposes of this case to hold that that court did not question the validity of any provision of the Constitution of the state of Ohio, and did not sustain any act or incorporation which it held to be in conflict with such provision. At most, there was simply a matter of error, and not a repudiation of the obligations of the Federal Constitution.

We do not see that any provision of the Federal Constitution has been violated, and the writ of error is dismissed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE did not hear the arguments and took no part in the decision of this case.

MERCHANTS NATIONAL BANK OF BALTIMORE, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 33-47.)

Internal revenue — taxation of national bank circulation.

A national bank whose outstanding circulating notes amount to less than 5 per cent of its capital is not exempted from the payment of the half-yearly duty imposed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5214, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3500, upon the average amount of its notes in circulation, by the provision of § 3411 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2248), that the outstanding circulation of any bank, association, corporation, company, or person shall be free from taxation when reduced to an amount not exceeding 5 per cent of its capital, although the latter section is, by § 3417 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2251), expressly made applicable to national banking associations, since it was so made applicable, as clearly appears from the legislation from which its provisions were drawn, in order to give national banks representing state banks the benefit of the presumption of loss or inability to retire the circulation of the state bank when 95 per cent thereof had been actually retired.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, 87-92, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 20.]

Argued March 12, 15, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

APPPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying the right of a national bank to be exempted from the statutory tax on its outstanding circulation where the amount of such circulation was less than 5 per cent of its capital. Affirmed.

See same case below, 42 Ct. Cl. 6.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. R. E. Marshall and James H. Hayden argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. Hanson Thomas, filed a brief for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson and Mr. Philip M. Ashford argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

38] Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Organized as a state bank in 1834, the appellant was converted, in June 1865, into a national banking association. For nearly thirty [sic] years after its organization as a national bank, that is, up to July 1, 1904, the bank was assessed for and paid the duty of one half of 1 per cent upon the average amount of its notes in circulation, in conformity with § 5214, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3500). Availing itself of the right conferred by § 5218, Rev. Stat., copied in the margin,[†] the bank made application to be refunded the sum of $4,713.01, on the ground that, in making certain of the half-yearly payments under § 5214, there had been a miscalculation, and besides, because of an error of law, some of the half-yearly payments had been exacted when the bank was exempt. We put aside so much of the claim as was based upon mere errors of calculation, as no contention on that subject is here presented.

The alleged error of law or asserted right to exemption rests upon the assumption that, by the operation of § 3411, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2248), the bank was not liable to pay the half-yearly duty on its outstanding circulation whenever the amount of its circulation fell below 5 per cent of its capital,—a contingency which, it was insisted, had arisen during certain of the half-yearly periods between January, 1888, and July, 1904. The request to be refunded having been rejected by the Treasurer of the United States, this suit was commenced, and this appeal was taken from a judgment in favor of the United States. 42 Ct. Cl. 6.

In the argument for the bank it is stated that all the errors relied upon are embraced in the following propositions:

*“1. The said court erred in holding[39 and deciding that the claimant, being a national bank, was not exempt from taxation on its notes in circulation during the half-yearly periods when the average amount of its said notes was less than 5 per centum of its chartered capital.

“2. The said court erred in holding and deciding that § 3411, Revised Statutes, relates solely to the taxation of the outstanding circulating notes of state banks which had ceased to exist, or had been converted into national banks, and did not limit the claimant's liability to taxation on its own outstanding circulation.”

Without presently determining whether the right to be refunded, even if otherwise well founded, was without merit because of the voluntary nature of the payments or the effect of the statute of limitations, we come to consider the merits of the contention. It depends upon whether § 5214, Rev. Stat., is limited and controlled by the provisions of § 3411, Rev. Stat. The two sections are as follows:

“Sec. 5214. In lieu of all existing taxes, every association shall pay to the Treasurer of the United States, in the months of January and July, a duty of one half of one per centum each half-year upon the average amount of its notes in circulation, and a duty of one quarter of one per centum each half-year upon the average amount of its deposits, and a duty of one quarter of one per centum each half-year on the average amount of its capital stock, beyond the amount invested in United States bonds.”

“Sec. 3411. Whenever the outstanding circulation of any bank, association, corporation, company, or person is reduced to an amount not exceeding five per centum of the chartered or declared capital existing at the time the same was issued, said circulation shall be free from taxation; and whenever any bank which has ceased to issue notes for circulation deposits in the Treasury of the United States, in lawful money, the amount of its outstanding circulation, to be redeemed at par, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall *prescribe, it shall be exempt[40 from any tax upon such circulation.”

It is insisted that the sections, considered as applicable to the same subject, are harmonious, and that giving effect to both, while leaving a national banking association liable to the duty imposed by § 5214, will yet entitle it to the exemption provided in § 3411 when the contingency stated in that section has come to pass. And as this result, it is argued, is clear and free from all doubt, considering the text of the two sections, recourse may not be had to legislation prior to the Revised Statutes, from which the provisions of the sections were drawn, in order to arrive at their correct meaning. Reference to such prior legislation, it is insisted, cannot be resorted to for the purpose of creating a doubt, but only to solve one otherwise arising from the text, citing Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 418, 44 L. ed. 220, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 36, 39 L. ed. 601, 611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508, and cases cited.

[†]Sec. 5218. In all cases where an association has paid or may pay in excess of what may be or has been found due from it, on account of the duty required to be paid to the Treasurer of the United States, the association may state an account therefor, which, on being certified by the Treasurer of the United States, and found correct by the First Comptroller of the Treasury, shall be refunded in the ordinary manner by warrant on the Treasury.

Accurately considering the text of the two sections and the context of the respective titles of the Revised Statutes in which they are found, we think the contention that the sections are free from ambiguity and may be harmoniously applied without the necessity of construction is without merit. It is conceded that for the more than thirty-five years since the enactment of the Revised Statutes, in the administration of the national-bank act, national banking associations have been required to and have, without question, paid the half-yearly duty on circulation, wholly irrespective of the exemption provided in § 3411,—a condition which clearly suffices, to say the least, to engender doubt as to the correctness of the belated contention now urged. Besides, the sections are in different titles of the Revised Statutes, the one (§ 3411) "Internal Revenue," the other (§ 5214) "National Banks." While § 5214 and the other sections contained in the title in which it is found leave no doubt that § 5214 was intended to deal with the outstanding circulation of national banks, not only the text of § 3411, but the other sections of the chapter, under the 41]general *title "Internal Revenue," in which it is found, cause it to be questionable whether that section is at all concerned with the subject of the circulating notes of a national banking association. As suggesting doubt and ambiguity concerning the contention that national banking associations are embraced within the enumeration of banks and bankers made in § 3411, whose outstanding circulation would become "free from taxation" in the specified contingency, it is to be observed that the enumeration conforms generally to that made in other sections of the chapter, which other enumerations clearly relate only to state banks and private bankers. Indeed, this is strengthened by the fact that, in the Revised Statutes, associations organized under the national bank act are distinctively characterized as national banking associations, and that their designation by that call is explicitly made use of in various sections of the chapter in which § 3411 appears. In view (a) of the distinct provisions as to the circulating notes of national banks, found in the appropriate title of the Revised Statutes (b) of the general subject to which the chapter in which § 3411 is contained relates, and (c) that in that chapter, when it was deemed essential to legislate concerning national banking associations, they were specially designated by that appellation, it would seem to result that it cannot possibly be said that § 3411 clearly has relation to the outstanding circulation of national banking associations. Moreover, the assumption that, considering the text of the two sections, and treating them as relating to the same subject, they are each susceptible of being fully enforced, is a mistaken one. The duty upon the outstanding circulation imposed by § 5214 is assessed half-yearly, not upon the amount outstanding at any particular time, but upon the average for the six months. Section 3411, however, provides that the outstanding circulation to which it refers "shall be free from taxation whenever such outstanding circulation is reduced to an amount not exceeding five per centum of the chartered or declared capital existing at the time the same was issued,"—a provision which clearly contemplates a positive and permanent *ex-[42]emption, to arise from the reduction to the limit specified, and wholly incompatible with the system of average provided in § 5214. This results because, by that system of average, even although the sum of the outstanding circulation of a national banking association might, on a particular day or days of a half-yearly period, fall below 5 per centum of its capital, yet the duty to be paid would attach wholly without reference to that condition, and be determined by the average for the six months. Besides, when there is taken into account the plain meaning of the concluding portion of § 3411, concerning a deposit with the Treasurer of the United States of money to meet outstanding circulation of the banks embraced within that section, it becomes manifest that the circulation referred to in § 3411 cannot be the circulation of a national banking association referred to in § 5214, since the method of deposit of money to secure the payment of outstanding circulation provided by § 3411 is absolutely in conflict with the methods provided for securing and redeeming outstanding circulation of national banking associations, as expressly provided in the sections of the Revised Statutes concerning national banking associations, which sections are cognate to and inseparably connected with the provisions of § 5214. And, beyond all this, it is apparent that, to treat the outstanding circulation referred to in § 3411 as embracing the outstanding circulation of national banking associations, contemplated by § 5214, would require it to be held that the very purpose intended to be accomplished by the national-bank act was frustrated by the exemption accorded by § 3411. It has long been settled that one of the public policies embodied in the national-bank act was to secure the public credit and encourage the issue of notes to circulate as currency, founded upon the security of the bonds of the United States,—a purpose which would be directly discouraged by exempting a national banking association which reduced its circulation below 5 per centum of its capital from the payment of a duty thereon, and yet enforcing the payment of such duty against a national bank which had not reduced its outstanding 43]*circulation to the limit stated. In addition, as the half-yearly duty provided by § 5214 was intended, among other things, at least, to create a general fund for paying the cost of engraving and printing the circulating notes of national banking associations (Twin City Nat. Bank v. Nebeker, 167 U. S. 196, 42 L. ed. 134, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766), § 3411 could not be construed as now claimed without giving rise to the assumption that it was without reason intended to exempt national banking associations which might choose to allow their circulation to fall below 5 per centum from a burden which, in the nature of things, was common to all such banks.

But, in effect, it is argued, conceding that all the ambiguities just stated arise from treating the two sections as relating to the same subject, and from seeking to harmoniously enforce them on that hypothesis, yet there is no warrant for considering the genesis of the provisions in order to dispel the apparent conflict between them, because of the express terms of § 3417, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2251), found in the same chapter which embraces § 3411. The section relied upon is in the margin.† It will be observed that it is expressly declared therein that the provisions of the chapter in which the section is contained shall “not apply to associations which are taxed under and by virtue of title ‘National Banks.’” This declaration, however, is limited by the words “except as contained in sections,” which are enumerated, one of them being § 3411. From this it is argued that, whatever may otherwise be the conflict between § 5214 and § 3411, construed together, as § 3417 causes § 3411 to be broadly applicable to national banking associations, that section must *be treated as limiting[44 and controlling the provisions of § 5214. But § 3417, unless it be treated as surplusage, implies that § 3411 might not, in and of itself, be broadly applicable to national banking associations. While there is no doubt that the result of § 3417 is to cause § 3411 to be applicable to national banks, the doubt and ambiguity which must arise from the attempt to make that provision broadly applicable, so as to cause it to be controlling upon § 5214, is in nowise removed by § 3417. In other words, giving full effect to § 3417 requires us yet to determine the nature and extent of the application of the provisions of § 3411 to national banking associations,—a determination, as we have seen, essential in order to reconcile the confusion and contradiction which otherwise would prevail from the coassociation of the provisions without limitation or interpretation.

A consideration of the origin of the provisions at once demonstrates the unsoundness of the contention relied upon, establishes the correctness of the administrative construction which has prevailed from the beginning, and dispels the confusion and contradiction which necessarily result from the interpretation contended for. We need not specifically trace and develop the origin of the provisions, since it is expressly conceded in the argument for the appellant that “the provisions of the acts of Congress . . . which are carried into the Revised Statutes as §§ 3407-3417, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2246-2251, did not, when and as originally passed, relate to national banks or to the circulation of national banks, but related to state and private banks. . . .” So, also, it is conceded that, wholly irrespective of the provisions of the national bank act of 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 99, chap. 106], there were imposed by acts of Congress relating to internal revenue burdens of taxation so heavy upon the circulation of the state banks and private bankers as, by their necessary operation, caused the retirement of such circulation as far as possible. Nor need we refer specially to the origin of § 3411, since it is conceded that the provision was enacted originally in order not to compel the payment by state banks of a tax on circulation when such 45]*circulation no longer existed, upon the assumption that, if 95 per cent had been retired, the remainder was no longer in existence, or, at all events, was not within the power of the bank to retire. It is also unquestioned that where a state bank had become converted into a national bank, or where a national bank had assumed the liabilities of a state bank, the national bank was liable, in addition to the duty on its own circulation, to the payment of the internal revenue tax upon the outstanding circulation of the state bank absorbed by it, or the liabilities of which had been assumed, and that, as to such circulation, national banks were given the benefit of the presumption of loss or destruction or possible retirement when all but 5 per cent of the circulation of the state bank had been actually retired. The concrete result of the provisions just stated and of the antecedent legislation is aptly portrayed in the reenactment in § 9 of the act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 146, 147, chap. 184, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2248, 2251), of previous provisions on the subject, said § 9 reading as follows:

†Sec. 3417. The provisions of this chapter relating to the tax on the deposits, capital, and circulation of banks, and to their returns except as contained in sections thirty-four hundred and ten, thirty-four hundred and eleven, thirty-four hundred and twelve [thirty-four hundred and thirteen], and thirty-four hundred and sixteen, and such parts of sections thirty-four hundred and fourteen and thirty-four hundred and fifteen as relate to the tax of ten per centum on certain notes, shall not apply to associations which are taxed under and by virtue of the title “National Banks.”

"That the capital of any state bank or banking association which has ceased, or shall cease to exist, or which has been or shall be converted into a national bank, shall be assumed to be the capital as it existed immediately before such bank ceased to exist or was converted as aforesaid; and whenever the outstanding circulation of any bank association, corporation, company, or person shall be reduced to an amount not exceeding 5 per centum of the chartered or declared capital existing at the time the same was issued, said circulation shall be free from taxation; and whenever any bank which had ceased to issue notes for circulation shall deposit in the Treasury of the United States, in lawful money, the amount of its outstanding circulation, to be redeemed at par, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, it shall be exempt from any tax upon such circulation; and whenever any state bank or banking association has been converted into a national banking association, and such national banking association has assumed the liabilities of such state bank or 46]*banking association, including the redemption of its bills, by any agreement or understanding whatever with the representatives of such state bank or banking association, such national banking association shall be held to make the required return and payment on the circulation outstanding, so long as such circulation shall exceed 5 per centum of the capital before such conversion of such state bank or banking association."

It is apparent that these provisions were in substance adopted in the Revised Statutes, and now constitute §§ 3410, 3411, and 3416, and that, as illumined by the history which we have given, it clearly results that the provision of § 3417, expressly making § 3411 applicable to national banking associations, caused that section to apply not in the broad sense now claimed, but that it was expressly made applicable in order, beyond peradventure, to give to national banks, as representing state banks, the benefit of the presumption of loss or inability to retire the circulation of the state bank when such circulation had been reduced by 95 per centum of the volume thereof.

It is strenuously argued that to thus construe the provisions in question will destroy the effect of the revision by causing one or more of the sections contained in the revision to become redundant or superfluous. To test this contention we must recur to the provision of the act of 1866, which has been previously quoted. By that provision (a) what should constitute the sum of the capital of a state bank for the purpose of taxation was declared; (b) the right to an exemption of circulation, when such circulation was less than 5 per cent, was also declared, and the power to deposit money with the Treasurer of the United States to the extent of the outstanding circulation, and thus avoid the continuance of a tax thereon, was also given; (c) the liability of a national banking association for the tax upon the circulation of a state bank which had been assumed, as well as the right of the national banking association to the benefits of the exemption when 95 per cent of the circulation of the state bank had been retired, was also expressed. The argument is that to give *to § 3411, the restrictive[47 significance we have adopted is to render § 3416 superfluous. It is indeed true that the effect of the construction in an extremely narrow and technical sense might be considered as operating a redundancy. But the asserted redundancy is more seeming than real, as § 3416 was plainly not enacted in order to reiterate what was expressly or impliedly embodied in § 3411, but was to declare the obligation of a national bank in a stated contingency to make return and payment on the outstanding circulation of a state bank which was subject to taxation.

The elaborate argument made at bar, to the effect that Congress, at the time of the revision, must have contemplated the non-existence of state banks and the extinguishment of their circulation, and, therefore, must be considered as having intended to make § 3411 applicable to the outstanding circulation of national banks, is, we think, so clearly in conflict with the plain manifestation of the purpose of Congress, as shown by the re-enactment in the revision of the provisions as to state banks and their circulation, as to require no further notice.

Affirmed.

J. M. CEBALLOS & COMPANY, Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 47-70.)

Appeal—from court of claims—review of facts—allowance under government contract.

1. The refusal of the court of claims to make an allowance for the transportation from the Philippine Islands to Spain, under a contract with the United States, of certain Spanish prisoners of war, certified by an American consul to have been landed in a Spanish port, will not be disturbed on appeal where the method prescribed by the contract for determining the initial fact that such persons had been taken on board in the Philippine Islands had not been pursued, and the evidence did not establish to the satisfaction of that court that such persons were entitled to transportation under the contract.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4892-4902, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Government contract—construction—repatriation of Spanish prisoners.

2. The manifest spirit of the contract and the prior conduct of the parties demand that the United States be charged at the cabin rate, with the usual reduction for children under ten years, for the transportation to Spain as cabin passengers of the wives and children of Spanish military and civil officers in the Philippine Islands, under a contract calling for the transportation of such officers at that rate, and of such other persons as might be designated by the Secretary of War at the steerage rate.

[Construction of contract with government, see United States, VI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Government contract—construction—repatriation of Spanish prisoners.

3. All noncombatants except the wives and children of military and civil officers were embraced in the words "other persons" in a contract with the United States for the transportation to Spain at the cabin rate of Spanish military and civil officers in the Philippine Islands, and at the steerage rate of such other persons as might be designated by the Secretary of War.

[Construction of contract with government, see United States, VI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 108.]

Argued March 10, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment refusing to allow certain items claimed under a contract with the United States for the repatriation of certain persons from the Philippine Islands to Spain. Reversed.

See same case below, 42 Ct. Cl. 318.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William V. Rowe and John J. Hemphill argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Sullivan & Cromwell, filed a brief for appellants:

The United States, in contracting with its citizens, is controlled by, and the court of claims and this court are required to apply, precisely the same principles that govern in ordinary controversies between individual citizens.

Smoot's Case (United States v. Smoot) 15 Wall. 36, 47, 21 L. ed. 107, 110; United States v. Bostwick, 94 U. S. 66, 24 L. ed. 66.

This contract, based upon the proposals of the Quartermaster General's office, was a government contract, drawn, in accordance with its custom in such cases, by the government itself. Its language, therefore, must be construed most strongly against the government.

Garrison v. United States, 7 Wall. 688, 690, 19 L. ed. 277, 278; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. 394, 407, 19 L. ed. 757, 761; Merriam v. United States, 107 U. S. 437, 441, 27 L. ed. 531, 533, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; O'Brien v. Miller, 168 U. S. 287, 297, 42 L. ed. 469, 473, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Scott v. United States, 12 Wall. 443, 20 L. ed. 438; Bradley v. Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. 13 Pet. 89, 10 L. ed. 72; Coghlan v. Stetson, 22 Blatchf. 88, 19 Fed. 729.

Both statutes and contracts must receive a just and sensible construction, which will effectuate their spirit and intent, and work out reasonable results, and avoid absurd consequences.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 461, 36 L. ed. 228, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Gridley, 100 U. S. 614-616, 25 L. ed. 746, 747; Beawfage's Case, 10 Coke, 101b; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683, 26 L. ed. 526; Winslow v. Kimball, 25 Me. 493; Eshleman's Appeal, 74 Pa. 42; Crane v. Alling, 14 N. J. L. 593; R. v. Collingwood, 12 Q. B. 681; United States v. Pine River Logging & Improv. Co. 32 C. C. A. 406, 61 U. S. App. 69, 89 Fed. 907; Peirce v. Van Dusen, 69 L.R.A. 705, 24 C. C. A. 280, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 696.

The practical construction placed upon the contract by the acts of the parties, although at variance with its literal meaning, must prevail.
214 U. S.

Brooklyn L. Ins. Co. v. Dutcher, 95 U. S. 269, 24 L. ed. 410; District of Columbia v. Gallaher, 124 U. S. 505, 510, 31 L. ed. 526, 527, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Franklin W. Collins, filed a brief for appellee:

Where the language of a contract is clear and explicit, the court will not attempt to construe it. The courts may not make a contract for the parties, but their function and duty consist in enforcing and carrying out the one actually made.

Calderon v. Atlas S. S. Co. 170 U. S. 278, 42 L. ed. 1035, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Speaking in a general sense, this case involves determining how much, if anything, is due by the United States to J. M. 49] *Ceballos & Company, the appellants, for services rendered in pursuance of oral and written contracts for the repatriation of certain persons from the Philippine Islands to Spain. Before coming to the case as made by the record it is necessary to dispose of a preliminary consideration which may throw light upon one of the questions arising for decision.

Ceballos & Company—who here assert their rights as arising from contracts made, as we have said, concerning transportation of persons from the Philippine Islands to Spain—after the surrender of the Spanish forces at Santiago, made a contract with the United States for the repatriation from Cuba to Spain of the prisoners of war rewas performed, and it is conceded that all obligations of the United States under the same were discharged. It is admitted, however, that, at the trial below, the Cuban contract, as it is termed, was offered and the mode of execution thereof was established by competent evidence, upon the assumption that such facts were proper to be taken into view in the elucidation of the particular contracts which are here involved. No finding was made by the lower court on the subject, although one was requested. After the filing of the record in this court a motion was made, praying that the lower court be directed to find whether or not the Cuban contract had been made, as stated, and whether or not the wives and children of Spanish officers transported thereunder were also transported under the contract, and, if they were, the rate paid for such transportation. The motion was resisted, and action thereon was postponed until the hearing on the merits. In the discussion at bar it was conceded by the government that the Cuban contract had been offered in evidence below, that the contract was correctly printed in one of the briefs, and that it had been performed in a particular manner. It was, however, insisted that the Philippine contracts here involved were unambiguous, and therefore the Cuban contract was irrelevant. It was conceded, if it was deemed that there was such ambiguity in the Philippine contracts as to require construction, and that *the construction might be elucidated by the Cuban contract and the mode of its performance, that contract and the admission as to the manner in which it had been performed might be treated as part of the record for the purposes of the case before us, without the necessity of directing findings on the subject. As we are clearly of opinion that the contracts which are here involved require construction, and that the previous contract between the parties as to the movement of the prisoners of war from Cuba to Spain, and the construction which obtained in the execution thereof, may serve within proper limitations to throw light upon the construction of the contracts here involved, we treat the Cuban contract and its mode of performance as embraced in the record, and review the case in the light thereof.

In the month of July, 1898, and from that time until the commencement of this litigation, the members of the appellant firm were the American operators and agents of the Compañía Transatlántica, a steamship line engaged in the transportation of freight and passengers between the ports of Spain and the Philippine Islands. As such agents, Ceballos & Company executed a contract with the United States, a copy of which is in the margin† to safely transport from Cuba to Spain the *troops of Spain sur- [51 rendered at Santiago de Cuba. Under this contract the wives and children of Spanish officers were carried in the cabins, and, †Cuban Contract.

Sealed proposals having been invited for the transportation of the Spanish prisoners of war who surrendered to the United States forces in Cuba, from Santiago de Cuba to Cadiz, or such port of same as might thereafter be designated, and the proposal submitted by J. M. Ceballos & Company, of New York, having been duly accepted:

It is hereby, on this 21st day of July, 1898, agreed by and between the Secretary of War of the United States and said J. M. Ceballos & Company, that said company shall transport well and safely all of the troops of Spain that were surrendered by General Toral to the Army of the United without question, the first-class rate was paid for the transportation.

The city of Manila surrendered the 13th 52] of August, 1898, *and August 14 the United States and Spanish authorities agreed upon written terms of capitulation, of which article 5 is as follows:

"All questions relating to the repatriation of officers and men of the Spanish forces and of their families, and of the expenses which said repatriation may occasion, shall be referred to the government of the United States at Washington."

The following statement as to the situation at Manila and the making of an oral contract and subsequently of a written contract are taken from findings made below.

There was surrendered to the United States forces at Manila on August 13, 1898, a large number of civil, naval, and military officers and their families, and a much larger number of enlisted men, together with the wives and children of some of these enlisted men. Many of these were in a pitiable condition physically, exhausted with exposure and disease,—1,200 being sick at one time,—all of them fed, 53] guarded, and attended at *the expense of the United States. Smallpox had been prevalent and infection was apprehended. The civil prisoners included Spanish civil officers on duty in the Philippine Islands under the government of Spain. Many of these had wives and children with them. There were besides a number of civilians, such as nurses, nuns, monks, friars, sisters of charity, and lady pensioners. The United States treated all of these classes as prisoners of war, and had supreme control of them after the surrender of Manila until they were delivered aboard plaintiff's ships for transportation, at which time the supervision of the United States ceased. Spanish officers had, in the meantime, only such supervision over their troops as the United States permitted.

General Otis, commanding the United States forces in Manila, considered that an emergency existed requiring immediate action; and, on October 7 and October 24, 1898, cabled the War Department at Washington the request of the Spanish general at Manila for permission to allow sick Spanish officers and soldiers to depart for Spain. Permission being granted, these officers and soldiers were shipped on vessels of the Compañía Transatlántica by the Spanish authorities in Manila, acting under the supervision and control of the United States authorities, but under an oral agreement with Ceballos & Company, as herein-after stated.

In the emergency deemed existing by the commanding general, and communicated to the War Department, the Secretary of War, in October or November, 1898, entered into an oral agreement with Ceballos & Company, by which the latter agreed to transport such of the Philippine prisoners as the United States desired to return to Spain, the price to be paid for such transportation to be the price fixed after the United States should advertise for bids for such transportation, under contract expected thereafter to be entered into under the terms of a treaty of peace between the United States and Spain.

Under this oral agreement, Ceballos & Company immediately began furnishing vessels, and the transportation of the Philippine *prisoners commenced by a ves-[54 sel which sailed from Manila, November 7, 1898, and continued until another and a written contract was entered for the trans-

States in Cuba, in the capitulation entered into by him at Santiago de Cuba, and from said Santiago de Cuba to such port in Spain as the Secretary of War of the United States may designate, and that the government of the United States will pay for such transportation, and for the subsistence and delivery on shore of the prisoners, the sum of twenty dollars ($20) for each enlisted man or private soldier, and the sum of fifty-five dollars ($55) for each officer so delivered.

The said company further stipulates that said subsistence furnished by the company shall be equal to United States Army garrison rations; that cabin accommodations are to be supplied for the said officers, and third-class or steerage accommodations, having suitable galley accommodations, with ample space and ventilation, for the enlisted men or privates; that, for the purpose aforesaid, it will have at Santiago de Cuba within seventeen (17) calendar days from this day (that is to say, on or before the 7th day of the month now next following) seven (7) steam vessels with a total capacity for the conveyance of at least ten thousand (10,000) prisoners in conformity with the foregoing stipulations, and ready to take them on board and proceed immediately to Spain; and the remaining vessels, in number and capacity as the Secretary of War may notify the company, within twenty-one (21) days from the date of such notice.

The Secretary of War stipulates that the United States will give safe conduct as against the Army and Navy of the United States to the vessels of the company engaged in the business aforesaid while proceeding to Santiago and from there to Spain, such safe conduct not to apply to ships already seized or in blockaded ports, and the ships employed as aforesaid to have only such armament as is customarily carried by merchant ships. Such safe conduct is to extend to foreign West Indian, Cuban, and Spanish ports, and to remain in effect until the prisoners are unloaded in a Span-portation of those prisoners not transported under the oral agreement.

The shipments under the oral contract were five in number, and the wives and children of officers were carried in the cabin, as under the Cuban contract.

On December 10, 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 1754], by the treaty of peace, it was stipulated in paragraph 1, article 5, that—

"The United States, will, upon the signature of the present treaty, send back to Spain, at its own cost, the Spanish soldiers taken as prisoners of war on the capture of Manila by the American forces."

And in article 6, that—

"Spain will, upon the signature of the present treaty, release all prisoners of war, and all persons detained or imprisoned for political offenses in connection with the insurrections in Cuba and the Philippines and the war with the United States.

"Reciprocally, the United States will release all persons made prisoners of war by the American forces, and will undertake to obtain the release of all Spanish prisoners in the hands of the insurgents in Cuba and the Philippines.

"The government of the United States will, at its own cost, return to Spain, and the government of Spain will, at its own cost, return to the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, according to the situation of their respective homes, prisoners released or caused to be released by them, respectively, under this article."

On January 20, 1899, the Quartermaster General, U. S. Army, by direction of the Secretary of War, invited sealed proposals "for the transportation of the Spanish prisoners of war now in the Philippine Islands . . . to Cadiz or such other ports of Spain as may hereafter be designated." Among other things it was stated in the advertisement as follows:

"Their number is estimated as about 16,000 officers and *enlisted men. Cabin ac-55 commodations are to be supplied for the officers and third-class or steerage accommodations, having suitable galley accommodations, conforming to the United States requirements as to space and ventilation, for the enlisted men.

"Proposals will state the price per capita for transporting officers and for transporting enlisted men, and for their subsistence, and delivering them on shore at the Spanish port or ports to be designated, and will be accompanied by a guaranty that the prisoners will be comfortably cared for and subsisted while on the journey.

"Payment for the service will be made when evidence is furnished that the ship has arrived with her passengers at point of destination. The number of officers and men counted aboard at place of embarkation by the quartermaster is to determine the number to be paid for."

The following bid was submitted:

"Sir: In accordance with the advertisement of Gen. M. I. Luddington, Quartermaster General, U. S. Army, copy of which is hereto attached, I propose, on behalf of Messrs. J. M. Ceballos & Company, agents of the Compañía Transatlántica, de Barcelona, to furnish transportation for the Spanish prisoners now in the Philippine Islands to any port or ports in Spain. Their number estimated at 16,000 officers and enlisted men. I propose to use in this service the steamers named in the annexed list, which fully sets forth the classification of each, the tonnage capacity of each, their ish port designated, and is expressly made applicable to steamers of the Spanish Transatlantic Line under the Spanish flag.

For the better security of such safe conduct a document in the following form and duly signed will be furnished to the company for each ship, which shall be exhibited on demand, together with a copy of this contract, to any officer of the Army or Navy of the United States visiting the vessel:

"The President of the United States to all whom it may concern, greeting: This is to certify that the ——— is employed under contract with the government of the United States in the business of transporting from Santiago de Cuba to a port in Spain Spanish prisoners heretofore surrendered to the Army of the United States in Cuba; that the government of the United States has guaranteed safe conduct for this purpose to the in going to and from Santiago de Cuba and until the disembarking of said prisoners in a Spanish port.

"All persons under the jurisdiction of the United States are required to respect such guarantee.

....."
The company further stipulates that it will furnish the bond of ——— for the proper and faithful performance of this contract.

The Secretary of War agrees that the United States will deliver the prisoners aforesaid on board at Santiago within a reasonable time after the vessels are ready, and to the number of at least ten thousand (10,000) men, five hundred (500) officers, and that the payment of the said twenty ($20) dollars and fifty-five ($55) dollars for each man and officer to the numbers last aforesaid shall be made when satisfactory evidence that the prisoners have been transported and delivered in accordance with this contract is presented to him.

Witness our hands and seals this 21st day of July, 1898.

R. A. Alger, Secy. of War.
J. M. Ceballos & Company.

speed, the berth accommodations upon each, and the approximate length of time required by each vessel to make the voyage to Spain. (The length of time is estimated from Manila.) Said list gives the time at which each vessel will arrive in or off the harbor of Manila for orders, the act of God and all dangers of the sea excepted.

"It is proposed not to load the steamers 56] beyond two thirds *of their steerage capacity. This is considered not only advisable as an act of humanity, but absolutely necessary, owing to climatic conditions and length of voyage.

"I further propose to call at any port of the Philippine Islands that the U. S. government may designate, provided the vessels can safely lay afloat.

"The charge for this service is dependent on the ports of call in the Philippines, and also on the quarantine regulations in Spain; but I propose and hereby agree to do this service at a price not to exceed in any case:

For each officer$215 00

For each enlisted man..... 73 75

"It is proposed to furnish subsistence equal to the United States garrison rations, or, if preferred, the usual rations furnished under Spanish regulations.

"I will furnish a satisfactory bond for the faithful fulfilment of this service."

This bid was accepted, and on March 4, 1899, a contract was executed between the Secretary of War and Ceballos & Company, by their attorney in fact, which, omitting the attestation clause and signatures, is as follows:

"Whereas, under the terms of the treaty of peace entered into by and between the representatives of the governments of the United States and of Spain, signed at Paris on December 10, 1898, it is mutually agreed and stipulated in the first paragraph of article 5 that—

"The United States will, upon the signature of the present treaty, send back to Spain, at its own cost, the Spanish soldiers taken as prisoners of war on the capture of Manila by the American forces."

"And in article 6, which reads as follows:

"Spain will, upon the signature of the present treaty, release all prisoners of war, and all persons detained or imprisoned for political offenses in connection with the insurrection in Cuba and the Philippines and the war with the United States.

57] "Reciprocally, the United States will release all persons made prisoners of war by the American forces, and will undertake to obtain the release of all Spanish prisoners in the hands of the insurgents in Cuba and the Philippines.

"The government of the United States will, at its own cost, return to Spain, and the government of Spain will, at its own cost, return to the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, according to the situation of their respective homes, prisoners released or caused to be released by them, respectively, under this article."

"And whereas sealed proposals having been invited for the transportation of the Spanish prisoners from Manila or such other port in the Philippine Islands as may be designated, to Cadiz or such other port in Spain as may be designated, and in response thereto the proposal of J. M. Ceballos & Company, of New York, having been duly accepted by the Secretary of War of the United States:

"Therefore this article of agreement is made and entered into this 4th day of March, 1899, by and between the said J. M. Ceballos & Company, for the transportation of the said prisoners of war from the Philippine Islands to Spain, as are designated in the terms of the treaty of peace, referred and quoted herein.

"The said J. M. Ceballos & Company hereby agree to furnish good and safe transportation for such number of prisoners of war and persons as may be designated by the Secretary of War, from the Philippine Islands to such port in Spain as may be designated by the Secretary of War, and to furnish to them subsistence while en route and on board the ships, and to deliver them on shore in Spain.

"The said company further agrees that, for the purpose herein stipulated, they will provide a sufficient number of steamships for the safe and comfortable transportation of the prisoners of war and such other persons as may be designated by the Secretary of War, with cabin accommodations for all officers, and third-class or steerage accommodations, space, *and ventilation for the[58 enlisted men and other persons on board each ship; that the subsistence furnished by the company shall be equal in every respect to the United States army garrison rations.

"The company further agrees to provide a sufficient number of steamships in the harbor of Manila to perform the entire service as herein stipulated, so that the embarkation of the last of the prisoners of war and the other persons may be made not later than May 1st, 1899; that the ships to be used for the purpose are named and described in the list submitted with their proposals, copy of which is hereto attached as a part of this agreement, and the company agrees that no troops shall be transported upon any one of said ships in excess of two thirds of the steerage capacity of each ship, as shown in the list referred to.

"In consideration of the faithful performances of the foregoing stipulations and in compensation therefor, the Secretary of War hereby agrees, on behalf of the United States, to pay to the said J. M. Ceballos & Company, for the transportation, subsistence, and delivery on shore of each commissioned officer, the sum of two hundred and fifteen dollars ($215), and for each enlisted man, private soldier, or other person designated by the Secretary of War for transportation the sum of seventy-three dollars and seventy-five cents ($73.75), the said sums to be due and payable upon evidence that said officers, enlisted men, or persons have been transported, subsisted, and delivered on shore in Spain.

"It is further agreed that the prisoners of war and all other persons to be transported shall be delivered by the United States on board the ships at such ports in the Philippine Islands as may be designated by the Secretary of War, within five (5) working days after the vessel or vessels are ready to receive them. Demurrage, if any, earned by any such steamer or steamers, to be paid by the United States at the rate of fifteen cents (15c.) per gross ton register per day, and for any prisoners on board at the rate of $1.50 for each officer per day 59]and 40 *cents for each enlisted man per day. An account of the number of officers, enlisted men, or other persons to be taken at the time of embarkation by a representative of the government of the United States and a representative of the said J. M. Ceballos & Company, and payment to the said company shall be made upon the basis of the number of officers, enlisted men, and persons counted on each ship.

"It is further agreed that all steamers shall call at the port of Manila for orders, and should the Secretary of War elect to deliver prisoners to any steamer or steamers at any other port in the Philippine Islands, orders to that effect must be given within twenty-four hours after the steamer or steamers have reported to the commanding officer at the port of Manila.

"No member or delegate to Congress, nor any person belonging to, or employed in, the military service of the United States, is or shall be admitted to any share or part of this contract, or to any benefit which may arise therefrom."

The findings show that the vessels which were supplied to perform this contract, like those which were supplied to perform the Cuban contract and the subsequent Philippine oral contract, were furnished with cabin and steerage accommodations, and that the officers, civil and military, with their respective families, were carried in the cabin, and in the steerage were carried the enlisted men and their families and other persons entitled to third-class passage.

For the first twenty-five shipments payment was made by the United States upon certificates of the masters of the respective ships on which said prisoners of war and other persons were transported, certified to be correct at the place of landing, showing the different classes of passengers.

The court below also found as follows:

The obligation of this country to repatriate any other persons or classes of persons than those who were actually prisoners of war or political prisoners was questioned by the Secretary of War.

On December 18, 1899, the Secretary of War addressed an *official letter to the [60 Attorney General, stating that, under the terms of the treaty of peace, the obligation of the United States to send to Spain at its own cost the wives and children of officers and soldiers and civil prisoners designated as officials, and their wives and children, was not clearly defined, and that the rates of compensation for the transportation of such persons were not set forth in the contract. But in that connection the Secretary requested an opinion as to the construction of the treaty of peace in regard to the scope of the description of Spanish prisoners,—whether and to what extent the treaty included the repatriation of noncombatants at the cost of the United States. The Secretary further requested a construction of the contract rate of compensation which might be allowed and paid per capita for each class of persons charged for under the terms of the contract with Ceballos & Company. On January 6, 1900, the Attorney General answered this official communication of the Secretary of War, and construed the contract substantially as follows: That it was questionable whether all the persons tendered and transported were not within the purview of the treaty, but that this was a question for the United States authorities, and not for the carrier, who would have been guilty or might have been guilty of a breach of his contract in refusing to carry persons designated to be carried by the United States. The Attorney General further informed the Secretary of War that the contract related to the transportation of prisoners; that, as between the contracting parties, it rested alone with the United States to say whom it would send back to Spain, and, in doing so, to alone determine who were prisoners, and who came within the purview of the treaty or the contract. That the words "other persons" were included within "enlisted men;" and that, as to all enlisted men, and all persons other than officers, military and civil, $73.75, and no more, was payable by the United States under the contract.

On January 19, 1900, the Secretary of War notified one of the firm of Ceballos & Co. that 61]he had, on January 17, cabled *General Otis, at Manila, that civil officials, prisoners' wives and children, were entitled to passage to Spain, and that the contract provided for shipment of civil officials as officers on the basis of $215 per capita; that wives and children of officers, soldiers, and civil officials were entitled to transportation to Spain on the basis of $73.75 per capita.

As shown on statement, copied in the margin,† the United States paid to Ceballos & Company, under the Philippine oral and written contracts, the sum of $1,544,595. It will be seen that no payments were made in respect of the transportation of other persons than officers and enlisted men until after the Attorney General had rendered the opinion above referred to. Of the various classes of persons specified, all but "officers" 62]*were paid for at steerage or third-class rates, and this regardless of whether cabin or steerage accommodations were furnished. Minor children, that is, those under the age of ten years, were paid for at half the adult rate.

On August 15, 1908, Ceballos & Company commenced this action in the court of claims to recover a balance alleged to be due under the Philippine contracts for the carriage of 3,445 cabin passengers, at $215 each; 415 minor children, carried in cabin at half rate, $107.50; 13,647 steerage passengers at $73.75 each, and 20 minor children carried in steerage at half steerage rate, $36.75 each. For this service it was averred $1,792,491.25 had been earned, and after deducting payments of $1,544,595 there was still due Ceballos & Company, $247,896.25. Subsequently an amended petition was filed, in which full adult cabin and steerage rates were demanded for minor children, increasing the alleged indebtedness of the United States to the sum of $293,246.25.

A counterclaim, contained in three numbered paragraphs, was filed on behalf of the United States. In paragraph first it was in substance averred that the United States was entitled to recover back from the claimants the sum of $371,988.75, paid for the transportation of persons under the alleged † Payments.

Sundry Checks Received by J. M. Ceballos & Company—Payments on a/c by United States Government.

	Officers.	Enlisted men.	Women and ma- jor children.	Minor children.	Civil officials.	Warrants.
June 20/99.....	1019	7067	-----	-----	-----	$866,247.62 ($74,028.62, 10 per cent retained by Government.)
Nov. 28/99.....	131	1198	-----	-----	-----	190,545.12 (including previous 10 per cent as above.
July 30/1900.....	288	3728	1302	406	-----	447,853.75
Oct. 6/1900.....	148	1425	53	-----	-----	140,822.50
Apr. 11/1902.....	-----	-----	-----	-----	393	28,983.75
Apr. 21/1902.....	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	9,746.25 (315 Civ.)
July 3/1902.....	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	84,747.50 (Off. @ $141.25, dif. bet. 1st and 3d class.
Oct. 31/1902.....	{ -----	16	-----	-----	-----	1,180.00
	{ -----	19	-----	-----	-----	1,401.25
	{ -----	6	-----	-----	-----	442.50
Nov. 3/1902.....	{ 1	4	-----	-----	-----	510.00
	{ 1	-----	-----	-----	-----	215.00
	{ -----	10	-----	-----	-----	737.50
	{ -----	1	-----	-----	-----	73.75
Nov. 3, received and ret'd.	8	17	6	-----	-----	3,416.25
Feb. 26/3, deposited	1	1	2	-----	-----	436.25
	5	91	-----	-----	-----	7,786.25
	9	-----	-----	-----	-----	1,935.00
March 7/1908.....	-----	-----	12	-----	18	4,755.00
Sup. Bill No. 22.....	-----	-----	8	-----	2	1,020.00
	-----	-----	9	-----	3	1,808.75
	-----	-----	1	-----	-----	73.75
	2	less not all'd	-----	-----	-----	356.25
Totals.....	1613	18583	1392	406	416	$1,544,595.00

oral contract in November and December, 1898, and January, 1899, because the same was paid without authority of law, prior to the execution of any contract, expressed or implied, between the United States and Ceballos & Company, or anyone in its behalf. In paragraph second an indebtedness from Ceballos & Company of $12,788.75 was alleged, because of moneys paid to the firm for the transportation of persons who were not actually landed in Spain, as required by the contract. In paragraph third it was averred that as to two shipments made on November 25, 1899, and December 18, 1899, the claimants, by means of a supplemental bill, had collected a second time transportation charges for fourteen military officers (at the rate of $215 each) and 91 enlisted men (at the rate of $73.75 each), whereby $9,721.25 had been overpaid by the United States to Ceballos & Company.

63] *There was contention then in the court below in regard to the number of persons carried from the Philippines to Spain, and as to the compensation to be paid. For the government it was urged that, deducting the overcharge covered by the third counterclaim for the transportation of 105 persons, payment in full had been made for all persons legally shown to have been transported; viz., 17,305. On the other hand, the appellants contended that 17,527 persons had been carried,—a difference of 222 persons. As to such excess, the government alleged it had refused payment as to 198 persons because it had not been shown by the evidence stipulated for in the contract that such persons had embarked and been carried to Spain, and that it had refused payment as to the remaining 24, because twice counted.

The dispute as to compensation arose from the contention by Ceballos & Company that it had carried the wives and children of Spanish military officers and civil officials in the cabin, and the cabin rate was properly chargeable, while the government insisted that the steerage rate applied and had been paid. Ceballos & Company also contended that, for the carriage of other noncombatants, who were entitled to be considered prisoners of war, the cabin rate applied, whereas the government contended that all noncombatants were embraced within the category of "other persons," who, under the contract, were to be carried in the steerage and paid for at the steerage rate.

The court rejected the first and second counterclaims of the government, and allowed the third. It sustained the contention of the United States as to the number of persons carried to Spain, and the rate of transportation which governed, except it was held that Ceballos & Company, instead of being paid half adult steerage rate for the transportation of minor children, should have been allowed the full adult rate for each child, and judgment was entered on that basis, in favor of Ceballos & Company for the sum of $5,391.25. 42 Ct. Cl. 318.

Without hereafter reproducing the findings verbatim, we *shall state, in a condensed form, such of the facts found as we think material to be recited.

Ceballos & Company alone have appealed, and the argument at bar on their behalf has been confined to two questions: 1, The construction of the contract in respect to the persons entitled to be carried at cabin rates; 2, the correctness of the action of the court below in disallowing the claim for the alleged transportation of 198 persons, asserted to have been actually carried under the contracts.

The court below substantially followed the construction of the contract adopted by the Attorney General, and decided that the "higher rate" specified in the contract related to one class, and the lower rate to another class, and within the second class the contract embraced priests, nuns, sisters of charity, all women and children, and every other person designated within the term "prisoners" by the United States, and whether carried in the cabin or steerage. Civil officials were held entitled to be classified with military officers, and their transportation properly chargeable at the cabin rate.

In disposing of the questions arising for consideration we will first consider that relating to the 198 persons claimed by the appellants to have been transported to Spain, but for whose transportation the United States refused to make payment. As already mentioned, for the first twenty-five shipments of prisoners of war from the Philippine Islands to Spain payment was made by the government of the United States upon the certificates of the masters of the respective ships on which said prisoners of war and other persons were transported, showing the different classes of passengers certified to be correct at the place of landing.

The method of determining the persons entitled to transportation under the written contract was, however, changed as to the last fifteen shipments,—running from February 20, 1900, to July 14, 1901, during which time it is claimed said 198 persons were carried to Spain,—so that requests for transportation with reference to available space were required to *be made upon the[65 appellants. Thereupon the United States quartermaster at Manila made demand upon the appellants in writing to furnish transportation "to the following Spanish prisoners," separately enumerating, as the case might be, the number of commissioned officers, the number of enlisted men, the number of civil officials, the number of wives of officers and officials, the number of children under three years of age, the number of children between three and ten years of age, the number of children over ten years of age, etc.

Pursuant to the requisition of the Quartermaster General, all the men who were placed on the list of passengers for each shipment were required to be at a particular place at a certain time in the morning, and they were counted by an officer of the Quartermaster's Department, and taken aboard launches, and carried out to the Spanish vessel, ready to sail; and, as they went on board, the persons mentioned in the requisitions were counted by another United States officer, accompanied with the officer who represented the steamship company. Occasionally permission was given to officers of considerable rank to go aboard in their own conveyances, and these were checked off when they went aboard by an officer representing the government and an officer representing Ceballos & Company, and were thereby included in the numbers called for by the requisitions.

No objections were offered by Ceballos & Company at the time of the change in the method of computing the number of persons to go aboard.

The 198 persons in question were not embraced in the requests sent by the quartermaster for transportation, nor were they included in the count at the time and place of embarkation. The accounts presented to the Treasury for payment asked compensation for the transportation of such persons, based upon certificates signed by the American consul at the landing place in Spain, to the effect "that the following Spanish prisoners," classifying the persons substantially as in the requisitions above referred to, had been "furnished transportation from Manila, Philippine Islands, to 66]Spain," by the appellants on a "named steamship. For the reason that the method prescribed by the contract for determining the initial fact that the persons had been taken on board in the Philippine Islands by the appellants had not been pursued, and further, because the evidence did not establish to the satisfaction of the court that said 198 persons, although certified by the counsel to have been landed in Spain, were entitled to transportation under the contract, the court of claims refused to make any allowance for the transportation of such persons. The passages of the contract relating to this branch of the controversy are as follows:

"An account of the number of officers, enlisted men, or other persons to be taken at the time of embarkation by a representative of the government of the United States and a representative of the said J. M. Ceballos & Company, and payment to the said company shall be made upon the basis of the number of officers, enlisted men, and persons counted on each ship."

After reciting the compensation to be paid, the contract recited:

"The said sums to be due and payable upon evidence that said officers, enlisted men, or persons have been transported, subsisted, and delivered on shore in Spain."

In refusing to make any allowance for the asserted transportation of these 198 persons, we cannot say, in view of the findings of the court below, that error was committed.

We come to consider the remaining subject of contention, which is thus succinctly stated in the third specification of error made in the brief of counsel for Ceballos & Company: "The court erred in holding that the wives and children of Spanish officers, civil and military, and other noncombatant prisoners of war, although transported as first-class passengers, and afforded cabin accommodations aboard ship, were to be paid for at the third-class rate specified in the contract, to wit, $73.75."

The principal question involved in this assignment is whether the United States shall pay cabin rates for the transportation of the wives and children of Spanish officers, and other officials of equal rank, who were in fact returned to "Spain with[67 such officers as cabin passengers. As stated in the findings, the oral agreement made in October or November, 1898, between Ceballos & Company and the Secretary of War, was "to transport such of the Philippine prisoners as the United States desired to return to Spain," the compensation therefor to be fixed by the written contract which was expected to be thereafter entered into. There was no substantial change in the method of carrying out this oral contract from that pursued with respect to the Cuban contract. In the Philippines, as in Cuba, the United States tendered with the military officers and civil officials which it desired carried to Spain their wives and children. The proposals invited as the basis of a written contract were couched in similar phraseology to that employed in the Cuban contract, and called for proposals for the transportation "of the Spanish prisoners of war now in the Philippine Islands . . . in number estimated as about 16,000 officers and enlisted men." When, therefore, Ceballos & Company submitted a bid for furnishing such transportation, in reason they held themselves out as ready, if the United States tendered for transportation the wives and children of the officers and enlisted men of the Spanish forces, to regard them as entitled to the same treatment required by the government for the head of the family. We cannot impute to the parties to the contract an intention to condemn and refuse to give effect to the practice which had been pursued in carrying out the oral agreement, that is, the treating the wives and children as entitled to transportation, and as being, for the purpose of the accommodations to be furnished, of the class to which the government had in effect assigned their male relatives. That the classification referred to as "such other persons as may be designated by the Secretary of War" was not intended to embrace the wives and children of officers is, it seems to us, manifest from the entire text. The government was concerned not only with the furnishing of safe but of comfortable accommodation to those were to be carried on the long voyage from Manila to Spain. It [68] exacted from *Ceballos & Company a stipulation that it should provide "safe and comfortable transportation" for those to be carried; the officers with "cabin accommodations" and "third class" or steerage accommodations, space, and ventilation to be supplied for the enlisted men and other persons on board each ship." It is to be presumed that the agents of the United States in the Philippines saw to it that this stipulation of the contract was observed. It is inconceivable, however, that the government or the appellants intended to commit such an act of inhumanity as would necessarily have arisen if the written contract required that the family of an officer should be separated from the husband and father on shipboard, and be relegated to the discomforts of the steerage and the society of enlisted men and other persons. Clearly, the spirit of the contract is opposed to any such conception. The wives and children of the officers and enlisted men were associated with them in the written terms of capitulation of the Spanish forces at Manila, signed August 14, 1898, the 5th article which, again reproduced, is as follows:

"All questions relating to the repatriation of officers and men of the Spanish forces, and of their families, and of the expenses which said repatriation may occasion, shall be referred to the government of the United States at Washington."

Under the Cuban contract, the wives and children of officers were treated as entitled to be classed with the head of the family in respect to the accommodation to be supplied, and, in the performance of the Philippine oral contract, a like practice was pursued. In effect, therefore, by a course of conduct, the United States had associated the wives and children of the officers and enlisted men with such officers and men for the purpose of the transportation to be furnished and the treatment to be accorded them on the homeward voyage. Just as, in the opinion rendered by the Attorney General, civil officials of equal grade with military officers were assimilated to such officers in construing the terms of the contract, so we think an enlarged meaning must be taken as intended by *the terms "offi-[69]cers and enlisted men" where employed in the written contract. As observed by the Attorney General, in the light of the purpose of the contract, which was to carry out the engagements made by this government with Spain, a liberal construction should be accorded to the terms employed, in order to effectuate to the fullest extent the purposes intended by the treaty. Construing the written contract of March 4, 1899, according to its manifest spirit, and looking to the prior conduct of the parties, we are of opinion that such contract, and the oral contract which was dependent upon it, so far as the wives and children of officers and enlisted men were concerned, should receive the same construction as under the Cuban contract; viz., that the wives and children of Spanish officers tendered by the United States for transportation were to be classed with such officers, and the wives and children of enlisted men were to receive like accommodations as were given to enlisted men.

As it is not questioned by the United States that civil officials representing the Spanish government in the Philippines were entitled, both under the oral and written contracts, to cabin accommodations, we have assumed that construction to be well founded. It follows from the reasoning heretofore employed that the wives and children of such officials were likewise entitled, when tendered by the agents of the United States for transportation, to receive cabin accommodations, and Ceballos & Company, on furnishing such accommodations, were entitled to compensation at the rate stipulated for cabin service. In view, however, of the distinction shown to have been made in the requisitions for space between adults and minor children, the practice shown as to payments made under the contract, and the original demand of Ceballos & Company in the court below, we think it results that the parties, in actual practice, treated the full rate for children under ten years as but half the adult rate specified in the contract, and we think that rate ought to have been applied by the court below for each minor child, whether carried in the cabin or in the steerage.

70] *We are unable to yield our assent to the contention that other noncombatants than the wives and children of officers, enlisted men, and officials of the government of Spain, should be embraced in the class entitled as of right to cabin accommodations, for which appellants were entitled to be compensated at cabin rates. The mere circumstance that a particular person, although a noncombatant, was a constructive prisoner, did not—at least, in the absence of evidence that the United States tendered such person as a cabin passenger—serve to take the person out of the category of persons whom the Secretary of War might designate to receive transportation in the steerage at third-class rates.

From finding 14 it appears that the wives and children above the age of ten years of military officers and civil officials aggregated 1,327, and that the appellants were paid for the transportation of each the steerage rate of $73.75, instead of the cabin rate of $215 each. The appellants are, therefore, entitled to a further payment on account of the transportation of such persons of $141.25 each, in all, $187,438.75. It is also shown in such finding that the number of children of Spanish military officers and civil officials who were carried to Spain and were under the age of ten years aggregated 395, and that Ceballos & Company were paid for their transportation $36.87½ each, one half the adult steerage rate, instead of $107.50 each, one half the adult cabin rates. Ceballos & Company were therefore entitled for such service to a further payment as to each child of $70.62½, aggregating for the 395 children $27,896.87. From the total of these sums, viz., $215,335.62, must, however, be deducted the overpayment recited in the third counterclaim (which counterclaim the court below sustained), viz., $9,721.25, leaving due to Ceballos & Company the sum, $205,614.37.

It results that the judgment of the Court of Claims must be reversed, with instructions to enter a judgment in favor of the appellants for the sum of $205,614.37; and it is so ordered.

71] *GEORGE G. GOODRICH, Appt.,

v.

JOHN W. FERRIS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 71-81.)

Direct appeal from circuit court — frivolousness of Federal question — notice in probate proceedings.

A claim that ten days' statutory notice of the time appointed for action upon a petition for the settlement of the final account of an executor and for the final distribution of the decedent's estate is so unreasonable as to a nonresident claimant as to be wanting in due process of law is too clearly unsubstantial and devoid of merit to furnish a basis for a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938, 939, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 120.]

Argued March 19, 22, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review a decree dismissing a bill to set aside the probate of a will and to reopen the probate proceedings in which the final account of the executor has been passed and the estate finally distributed. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 145 Fed. 844.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John G. Johnson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Tyson S. Dines, L. Sidney Carrère, and Henry Arden, filed a brief for appellant:

The notice of final settlement and distribution, posted for ten days in the city and county of San Francisco, did not constitute due process of law as to appellant, who was and is a citizen and resident of the state of New York.

Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 447, 42 L. ed. 215, 231, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 232, 41 L. ed. 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 712, 28 L. ed. 573, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

The notice, even if it had been served upon him personally, would not have given him an opportunity to make a proper appearance in court, and due process of law has been repeatedly interpreted by this court to mean

NOTE.—On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

not only that a party shall have notice, but that he shall have a reasonable and fair opportunity of being heard.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, supra.

Sections 1633 and 1634 of the Civil Code of California, upon which jurisdiction of the court to make the consent decree of distribution is based, are in contravention of § 1, Article 14, of the Constitution of the United States.

Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Cooley, Const. Lim. 353; Hamilton v. Brown, 161 U. S. 256, 40 L. ed. 691, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Bardwell v. Collins (Bardwell v. Anderson) 44 Minn. 97, 9 L.R.A. 152, 20 Am. St. Rep. 556, 46 N. W. 315; Violet v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 31 L.R.A. 382, 53 Am. St. Rep. 825, 23 S. E. 909; Levy v. Superior Ct. 167 U. S. 175, 42 L. ed. 126, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

Mr. John W. Dorsey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry Ach, filed a brief for appellees:

Where the proceeding is fundamentally against or upon the thing or subject-matter, to determine its state or condition, the judgment rendered is a solemn declaration upon the status of the thing itself, and is purely in rem. In such cases no process need be issued, but constructive notice, by some prescribed publication, draws to the jurisdiction, and concludes, everybody affected by the proceeding, and makes the adjudication of a court of competent jurisdiction binding upon the world. The right of every possible claimant is determined. Necessarily, in such case, the notice is constructive; at least, to the greater part of the world.

Woodruff v. Taylor, 20 Vt. 65; Mankin v. Chandler, 2 Brock. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 9,030; 2 Smith's Lead. Cas. 585; Bennett v. Fenton, 10 L.R.A. 500, 41 Fed. 287; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558, 559.

The jurisdiction to hear and determine in this class of cases may be obtained wholly and entirely by publication.

53 L. ed.

Cloyd v. Trotter, 118 Ill. 391, 9 N. E. 507; Adams v. Cowles, 95 Mo. 501, 6 Am. St. Rep. 74, 8 S. W. 711; Wunstel v. Landry, 39 La Ann. 312, 1 So. 893; Essig v. Lower, 120 Ind. 239, 21 N. E. 1090; Dillon v. Heller, 39 Kan. 599, 18 Pac. 693; Gillespie v. Thomas, 23 Kan. 138; Walkenhorst v. Lewis, 24 Kan. 420; Rowe v. Palmer, 29 Kan. 337; Venable v. Dutch, 37 Kan. 519, 1 Am. St. Rep. 260, 15 Pac. 520; Huling v. Kaw Valley R. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 559, 32 L. ed. 1045, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Mellen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 53 L. ed. 178, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781.

If any notice is given, or its service made, in pursuance of the requirements of the statute, it cannot be violative of any inherent or constitutional right of the persons affected thereby, and hence must be in accord with the law of the land, and amount to due process of law.

Re Davis, 136 Cal. 596, 69 Pac. 412; Wulzen v. San Francisco, 101 Cal. 22, 40 Am. St. Rep. 17, 35 Pac. 353; Burnam v. Com. 1 Duv. 210; Shepherd v. Ware, 46 Minn. 174, 24 Am. St. Rep. 212, 48 N. W. 775; Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 175 Mass. 71, 51 L.R.A. 433, 55 N. E. 812; Dillon v. Heller, 39 Kan. 600, 18 Pac. 693; United States Trust Co. v. United States F. Ins. Co. 18 N. Y. 216; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 105, 24 L. ed. 616, 620; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 533, 28 L. ed. 237, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; State v. Boswell, 104 Ind. 541, 4 N. E. 677; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; William Hill Co. v. Lawler, 116 Cal. 359, 48 Pac. 323; Hanley v. Hanley, 114 Cal. 694, 46 Pac. 736; Kearney v. Kearney, 72 Cal. 595, 15 Pac. 769; Mulcahey v. Dow, 131 Cal. 77, 63 Pac. 158; Re Griffith, 84 Cal. 109, 23 Pac. 528, 24 Pac. 381; Ackerson v. Orchard, 7 Wash. 377, 34 Pac. 1106, 35 Pac. 605.

The fact that a claimant is a nonresident does not make the slightest difference. That fact may appeal to the discretion, but cannot affect the jurisdiction, of the court.

Townsend v. Eichelberger, 51 Ohio St. 213, 38 N. E. 207; DeMares v. Gilpin, 15 Colo. 76, 24 Pac. 568; Rudland v. Mastic, 77 Fed. 688; Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599.

It is sufficient to give the notice prescribed by the statute, and where no notice is required, none need be given.

Mr. Henry E. Davis also argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. W. Dorsey, filed a brief for appellees:

The words of the statute which empower this court to review directly the action of the circuit court are that such power shall exist wherever it is claimed on the record that a law of a state is in contravention of the Federal Constitution. Of course, the claim must be real and colorable, not fictitious and fraudulent.

Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 695, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 101, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 108, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 595, 42 L. ed. 865, 871, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon demurrers, the court below dismissed the bill filed by Goodrich, the appellant, for want of equitable jurisdiction to grant the relief which was prayed. 145 Fed. 844. To review that decree this appeal direct to this court is prosecuted. Jurisdiction to review is challenged. That question, therefore, at the outset requires attention.

To clarify the issue for decision, instead of reciting the allegations of the bill in the order in which they are therein stated, we shall briefly recapitulate the facts alleged in their chronological order, in so far as essential to be borne in mind for the purpose of the question of our jurisdiction.

In February, 1886, Thomas H. Williams, a resident of California, died in San Francisco, leaving as his lawful heirs four [75]*sons, viz., Sherrod, Thomas H., Jr., Percy, and Bryant, and one daughter, Mary, who was the wife of Frank S. Johnson. The wife of the deceased and the mother of his children had died before him. Williams left an estate of large value, composed principally of real property. Shortly after his death, on April 2, 1886, in the court having probate jurisdiction in San Francisco, a last will and codicil thereto of Williams were duly admitted to probate. Leaving out of view certain bequests of personal property and small legacies in money, the estate was principally disposed of as follows: The title of the property was vested in the executor and trustee named in the will, George E. Williams, a brother of the deceased, for the purpose of making the distribution which the will provided. To one of the sons, Sherrod, nothing was given. It was provided that the sum of $50,000 should be absolutely vested in the son Percy, that $200,000 should "be set aside absolutely" for the benefit of the daughter, Mary, wife of Johnson, and that $100,000 should be set aside for the benefit of each of the sons, Thomas H., Jr., Percy, and Bryant. The will, however, provided that the gifts to the children above stated, other than the gift of $50,000, which was to vest absolutely in Percy, were only intended for the use and benefit of the children to whom they were given during their respective lives, with the remainder in fee to the lineal descendants, or, if none such, to the surviving brothers or sister, as the case might be. The residuum of the estate was directed to be set aside in equal shares for the benefit of the daughter and two of the sons (Thomas H., Jr., and Percy) during their respective lives, with the remainder in fee, as heretofore recited. The will contained the following clause:

"Item 4. When the term of three years after my death, shall have elapsed, unless the executor, herein named, shall for good cause extend it for two years, or in case there be another executor, three of my children, or representatives, shall by writing, extend it for two years, distribution of my estate, shall be made, as herein directed."

*Until the setting aside or distribu- [76] tion thus directed, the executor was authorized to advance monthly to the daughter the sum of $250, and to each of the three sons, $100. The executor was authorized to carry on the business in which the testator was engaged at the time of his death, and extensive powers were conferred in regard to the sale and reinvestment of the property to be set aside for the benefit of the children, etc. George E. Williams qualified as executor, and entered upon the performance of his duties.

In 1888 one of the sons, Sherrod, died unmarried and without issue. In the same year Frank S. Johnson, the husband of Mary, the daughter, obtained a decree of divorce against his wife, by which he was awarded the custody of an infant son, Frank Hansford Johnson, the issue of the marriage. In December of the following year, Mary, the divorced wife, married George G. Goodrich, and thereafter lived with him in the city of New York. The son Percy was married in August, 1888; a child was born in 1889, but died the year following; and Percy died on October 3, 1890, leaving his widow surviving. Bryant Williams, another son, died in May, 1893, unmarried and without issue. In that year also Mrs. Goodrich, the daughter, died in the city of New York, without issue from her marriage with Goodrich, leaving her husband surviving.

In the nearly eight years which supervened between the death of the father and the death of Mary, the daughter, the latter undoubtedly received from the executor of the estate of the father, by way of revenue or allowance, the provision made for her benefit by the will of the father. By the various deaths it came to pass that, at the end of 1893, those entitled to the estate of Williams by the terms of the will, either for life or in remainder, were the surviving son, Thomas H. Williams, Jr., and the infant son of Mary, the daughter, represented by his father, Frank S. Johnson, who had, in 1889, in the proper probate court, been duly appointed the guardian of the estate of such minor.

After the death of Mrs. Goodrich, her husband went from *New York to California for the purpose of the interment of the remains of his wife, and, while being there a short time, undoubtedly met the executor. Goodrich returned to New York, where he continued to reside. In 1896, three years after the return of Goodrich to New York, in the court having jurisdiction over the estate and person of the minor, the guardian Johnson applied for authority to agree with the executor of the estate of Williams on a final distribution of the estate. In making this application no reference was made to the fact of the marriage of Goodrich with the mother of the minor after her divorce. Conforming to the requirements of the California Code of Procedure, after hearing, the guardian was authorized to make the agreement for final distribution. Simultaneously or thereabouts the executor also filed in the proper probate court a petition asking the authority of the court to pass his accounts and make a final distribution of the estate. Express notice was given to Williams, the surviving son, and to Johnson, the guardian of the minor, and, in accordance with the provisions of the California Code, a publication, by a posting of notice for a period of ten days, was ordered and duly made. On January 5, 1897, after hearing, and in view of the consent of the parties, the accounts were finally passed and a full distribution of the estate was made between the parties in interest; that is, 40 per cent of the estate was transferred to the minor, Frank Hansford Johnson, through his guardian, 26 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent to Thomas H. Williams, Jr., the son, in fee, and 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ per cent was vested in Williams as trustee for the benefit during life of Thomas H. Williams, Jr.

Nearly three years after the entry of the decree of final distribution, in December, 1899, Williams, the trustee, died, and, by proceedings in the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco, John W. Ferris was appointed trustee.

More than eighteen years after the death of Williams and the probate of his will, about eleven years from the date of the death of the daughter, Mary, the wife of Goodrich, and more than seven years after the passing of the final account of the 78]*executor, and the final distribution of the estate by the probate court, viz., on May 53 L. ed.

19, 1904, the bill which is here in question was filed. Ferris, trustee, Williams, the surviving son of the deceased, and Johnson, as guardian, and his minor son, were made defendants. The facts above recited in various forms of statement were alleged, and, in substance, it was charged that the will and codicil of Williams, the deceased, were void because the absolute power of alienation of the property of the deceased, contrary to the laws of California against perpetuities, was, by the terms of the will, suspended for a period of three years, and not for a period measured by the continuance of lives in being, and therefore, as to all property included in the trust which Williams, the deceased, attempted to create by his will, he had died intestate, and all his property, by reason thereof, vested at his death in his heirs at law. It was averred that complainant, as heir of his deceased wife, was entitled to a stated share of her estate. It was charged that all the proceedings had in the probate court were fraudulent and subject to be avoided; that, in those proceedings, the fact of the remarriage of the daughter, Mary, and the survivorship of her husband, Goodrich, the complainant, had been sedulously concealed for the purpose of misleading the court; that when Goodrich was in California, after the death of his wife, he was notified, as the result of an inquiry made of the executor, that the death of his wife terminated her interest in the estate of her father; that the proceedings in the probate court concerning the final accounting and distribution were fraudulently had for the purpose of depriving the complainant of his interest in the estate, and it was expressly charged that, in those proceedings, the existence of the complainant and his interest in the estate were concealed. The whole proceedings, it was also averred, were not only subject to be avoided because of fraud, but to have been absolutely wanting in due process of law, because of the absence of express notice to the complainant, and because the provisions of the statutes of California providing for notice by ten days' posting were void, because insufficient *as to [79 a resident of the city of New York, and, in consequence, repugnant to the due process clause of the 14th Amendment. Without stating the various grounds upon which the defendants demurred, it suffices to say that the bill, having been submitted to the court on the demurrers, was, by it, dismissed, as we have said, because the court was without jurisdiction in equity to set aside the probate of the will and to reopen, upon the grounds alleged in the bill, the probate proceeding had conformably to the local law.

It is manifest from the foregoing statement that the only possible ground upon which the assertion that we have jurisdiction by direct appeal to review the action of the trial court can rest is the contention made below, that, as to the complainant, the notice of the hearing in the probate court upon the petition for the settlement of the account of the executor and for the final distribution of the estate of Williams did not amount to due process of law. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727, and cases cited. It is equally certain, as held in the cited case, that the mere fact that a constitutional question is alleged does not suffice to give us jurisdiction to review by direct appeal if such question is unsubstantial, and so devoid of merit as to be clearly frivolous.

The grounds for the contention that a constitutional question exists are thus stated in the brief of counsel for appellant: "4. Sections 1633 and 1634 of the Civil Code of California, upon which jurisdiction of the court to make the consent decree of distribution is based, are in contravention of § 1, article 6, of the Constitution of the United States.

"The notice of final settlement and distribution, posted for ten days in the city and county of San Francisco, did not constitute due process of law as to appellant, who was and is a citizen and resident of the state of New York."

The sections of the California Code above referred to are thus set forth in the bill:

"Sec. 1633. When any account is rendered for settlement, the clerk of the court must 80] appoint a day for the settlement *thereof, and thereupon give notice thereof by causing notices to be posted in at least three public places in the county, setting forth the name of the estate, the executor or administrator, and the day appointed for the settlement of the account. If, upon the final hearing at the time of settlement, the court, or a judge thereof, should deem the notice insufficient from any cause, he may order such further notice to be given as may seem to him proper.

"Sec. 1634. If the account mentioned in the preceding section be for a final settlement, and a petition for the final distribution of the estate be filed with said account, the notice of settlement must state those facts, which notice must be given by posting or publication. . . . On the settlement of said account, distribution and partition of the estate to all entitled there-to may be immediately had, without further notice or proceedings."

While various decisions of this court and of the courts of two states are cited in the brief of counsel for appellant under each of the foregoing propositions, none of them are apposite, and indeed, although citing them, counsel have specifically commented upon but one; viz., Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410. That case, however, concerned the validity of original process by which the conceded property of a nonresident, situate within the jurisdiction of the state of Texas, was sought to be subjected to the control of its courts. The proposition which was presented for decision in that case was whether a statutory notice of five days, given to a resident of Virginia, requiring him to appear in Texas and defend a suit brought against him to foreclose a vendor's lien upon his land, constituted reasonable and adequate notice for the purpose. Manifestly, that case is not, in any particular, analogous to the one under consideration, which is a case involving the devolution and administration of the estate of a decedent,—a subject peculiarly within state control. Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 519, 22 L. ed. 599, 205. It is elementary that probate proceeding by which jurisdiction of a probate court is asserted over the estate of a decedent for the purpose of administering the same is in the nature of a proceeding in rem*, and is [81 therefore one as to which all the world is charged with notice. And that the law of California conforms to this general and elementary rule is beyond question. William Hill Co. v. Lawler, 116 Cal. 359, 48 Pac. 323. The distribution of the estate of Williams was but an incident of the proceeding prescribed by the laws of California in respect to the administration of an estate in the custody of one of its probate courts. Under such circumstances, therefore, and putting aside the question of whether or not the state of California did or did not possess arbitrary power in respect to the character and length of notice to be given of the various steps in the administration of an estate in the custody of one of its courts, we hold that the claim that ten days' statutory notice of the time appointed for the settlement of the final account of the executor, and for action upon the petition for final distribution of the Williams estate, was so unreasonable as to be wanting in due process of law, was clearly unsubstantial and devoid of merit, and furnished no support for the contention that rights under the Constitution of the United States had been violated. As held in Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 314, 318, 43 L. ed. 460, 461, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205, even although the power of a state legislature to prescribe length of notice is not absolute, yet it is certain "that only in a clear case will a notice authorized by the legislature be set aside as wholly ineffectual on account of the shortness of the time."

The jurisdiction to determine this appeal upon the merits being dependent upon the existence of a constitutional question in the record, and the mere averment that such a question was raised below not being sufficient where the alleged Federal question is so wanting in merit as to cause it to be frivolous or without any support whatever in reason, it follows that the appeal must be and it is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the decision of this case.

82] *JULIAN E. WOODWELL, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 82-90.)

Officers — compensation — extra services.

Compensation for the services of an inspector of electric light plants in the Treasury Department, rendered in connection with the installation of an electric light plant for the buildings of the Interior Department, at the request of the Secretary of the Interior, and by the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, is forbidden by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1765, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1207, although such services were valuable, and were performed after hours, and in addition to a full discharge of regular duties, since the case is one of the performance of extra services which the law did not specially require, and for which it did not fix the remuneration, and not a case of the filling of two distinct places, offices, or employments.

[For other cases, see Officers, 28-32, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 143.]

Argued April 8, 12, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition to recover for extra services rendered by an inspector of electric light plants in the Treasury Department. Affirmed.

See same case below, 41 Ct. Cl. 357.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Robeson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Two distinct employments were being filled, each of which had its own duties and its own compensation, and both of which might be held by one person at the same time.

United States v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 126, 129, 30 L. ed. 594, 595, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467.

The law does not forbid compensation for extra services which have no affinity or connection with the duties of the office he holds.

Converse v. United States, 21 How. 469, 16 L. ed. 194.

The service rendered by this appellant was one which could not have been legally required of him, either by the Secretary of the Treasury or Secretary of the Interior; it was rendered with the knowledge and consent of appellant's superior officer; it was rendered for a department having no official control of appellant, and for a department to which he owed no service whatever; and the employment was within the legal discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, and for the benefit of the government.

Crosthwaite v. United States, 30 Ct. Cl. 300; Collier v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 125.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Clark McKercher, filed a brief for appellee:

No discretion is left to the head of a department to allow an officer who has a fixed compensation any credit beyond his salary, unless the service he has performed is required by existing laws, and the remuneration for them is fixed by law.

Converse v. United States, 21 How. 473, 16 L. ed. 195; United States v. Shoemaker, 7 Wall. 342, 19 L. ed. 81; Stansbury v. United States, 8 Wall. 36, 19 L. ed. 316; Hall v. United States, 91 U. S. 564, 23 L. ed. 448; Hoyt v. United States, 10 How. 141, 13 L. ed. 361; United States v. King, 147 U. S. 676, 37 L. ed. 328, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is from a judgment of the court of claims, dismissing a petition filed by the appellant to recover from the United States the sum of $3,675. 41 Ct. Cl. 357. From the findings of the court below the facts upon which the claim was based are substantially as follows: Woodwell, the appellant, is by profession a mechanical and electrical engineer. From a date prior to March 3, 1901, up to the time of the bringing of this suit, he was an inspector of electric light plants under the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department, receiving a salary of $2,000 per annum. In the sundry civil 83]*act, approved March 3, 1901, the following appropriation was made (31 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 853):

NOTE.—On extra pay or compensation to officers—see note to United States v. Macdaniel, 8 L. ed. U. S. 587.

"For the establishment of an electric lighting plant for buildings occupied by offices of the Department of the Interior, the Patent Office building, the old Postoffice building, now occupied by the General Land and Indian Bureaus, and the Pension Office building, and for improvement in the heating of the Patent Office buildings, including necessary conduits, the laying and construction of which are hereby authorized, $74,000."

On March 11, 1901, the Secretary of the Interior sent to the Secretary of the Treasury a communication in which, after reciting the terms of the appropriation act above referred to, he said:

"When this item was under consideration, the committee on appropriation of the House of Representatives secured, through the Assistant Superintendent of the Treasury, the itemized estimate of cost of the proposed work, upon which the amount of appropriation is based, and, all the hearing before the committee, it was also indicated by members thereof that it would be expected that the projected work should conform to the estimate and the general plan outlined therein.

"I have, therefore, to request that, if practicable, some competent person connected with the Treasury Department, expert in such matters, may be authorized to prepare detailed plans and specifications, upon which proposals for the work contemplated in the appropriation may be called for at an early date."

On March 14, 1901, the Secretary of the Treasury, acknowledging the receipt of this letter, said:

"In reply you are informed that the work incident to the preparation of the plans and specifications can be performed under the supervision of a qualified employee of this office, who is familiar with the requirements; but, as the work will involve the employment of draftsmen and other persons who cannot be supplied from the regular 84]force of this Department* without detriment to its business, it is assumed that such service can be paid for from the appropriation provided for the installation of the plant. Such expense will not exceed $500, including the expense incident to a general inspection of the work during the period of the installation.

"It is the judgment of this Department that the installation can be completed in all its details, in the most satisfactory manner, without exceeding the limits of the appropriation provided therefor,—namely, $74,000."

In answering this letter the Secretary of the Interior said:

"Referring to your letter of March 14, 1901, in which you state that, in compliance with the request of this Department, a competent person connected with the Treasury Department will be authorized to prepare necessary plans and specifications covering the installation of the electric lighting plant for the buildings of this Department, and to your suggestion that the work will involve the employment of draftsmen and other persons who cannot be supplied from the regular force of the Treasury Department, and which would involve an expense not to exceed $500, which would include the expense incident to the general inspection of the work during the period of installation, I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of the decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury, to whom the matter was submitted by this Department, in which the conclusion is reached that prior to July 1, 1901, the preliminary expenses necessary to carry into effect the appropriation for the electric lighting plant may be incurred, although payment therefor cannot be made previous to that date.

"The Department would be glad to have the preliminary work commenced at the earliest practical date, and would be pleased to consider any recommendations as to the employment of the services of draftsmen, etc., referred to in your letter. If such services cannot be procured upon the terms named by the Comptroller, it is believed that it can, in the meantime, be furnished by detail from some branch of this Department."

*And on May 10, 1901, the Secretary [85 of the Treasury notified the Secretary of the Interior as follows:

"Referring to your letter of May 8, 1901, you are informed that Mr. J. E. Woodwell, inspector of electric light plants, has been directed to confer with E. M. Dawson, chief clerk, Department of the Interior, relative to the installation of an electric light, heat, and power plant in the old Postoffice Department building of this city."

Subsequently, the Secretary of the Interior made the following order, an official copy of which was sent to Mr. Woodwell through the Secretary of the Treasury:

Order.

Department of the Interior,
Washington, June 21, 1901.

A board to consist of Mr. Edward M. Dawson, chief clerk of the Department, Mr. J. E. Woodwell, inspector of electric light plants, Treasury Department, and Mr. Joseph S. Hill, engineer, etc., 'General Post-office,' is hereby constituted to, from time to time, open bids and recommend awards of contracts for the work embraced in the installation of the electric lighting plant for the buildings of the Interior Department and in the improvement of the heating of the Patent Office building.

The board will meet at the office of the chief clerk of the Department at such time as may be designated by advertisements for opening proposals for the work.

On November 23, 1901, the Acting Secretary of the Treasury sent the following communication:

"Referring to your letter of November 21, 1901, requesting that Mr. J. E. Woodwell, inspector of electric light plants, Treasury Department, be instructed to conduct a test of the engines and dynamos being manufactured by the Ridgeway Dynamo & Engine Company, Ridgeway, Pennsylvania, for the Interior Department, I have the honor to state that, owing to prior and important instructions, it will be impractical for 86]*Mr. Woodwell to make the test the 25th instant, as desired by you.

"You are advised, however, that, if the matter can be held in abeyance until December 2, 1901, Mr. Woodwell will be instructed to make the test."

Thereafter the following from the Acting Secretary of the Interior was received by Mr. Woodwell:

Department of the Interior,
Washington, January 2, 1902.

Permission having been obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury for you to perform such service, you are hereby authorized and directed to proceed to Ridgeway, Pennsylvania, as the representative of this department at shop tests to be made, commencing on Monday next, the 6th instant, of the engines and dynamos to be furnished by the Ridgeway Dynamo & Engine Company, under contract with this Department.

There is herewith inclosed, for your information and guidance, a copy of the specifications of the contract, wherein it is provided that "the regulation, guaranteed efficiency, heating effect, and insulation resistance shall be determined by actual test in the presence of the department's authorized inspector, who shall determine test conditions. The tests to be made at the shops where the dynamos are constructed, upon due notification by contractors of their readiness to commence said test, and at the expense of the contractor, except traveling and other necessary expenses of Department's agent. Should the test be delayed or require repetition for any reason for which the contractor is justly responsible, the cost of the delayed or any subsequent test, including the traveling and other necessary expenses of the Department's agent, shall be at the expense of the contractor."

Mr. L. K. Sager, of this Department (Patent Office), will be detailed to accompany you and assist in making the tests.

Your actual expenses while engaged upon this service *will be paid by this De- [87 partment upon presentation of proper accounts and vouchers from funds available.

Because of the foregoing correspondence, Mr. Woodwell, as a mechanical and electrical engineer, performed certain services in and about the installation of said electric lighting and heating plant, between the 10th day of May, 1901, and the 1st day of February, 1902, and devoted 897 hours to said service, and also necessarily expended $110 in connection therewith.

The services rendered were performed by Woodwell outside of his regular office hours as an employee in the Treasury Department, and during the time when the services were rendered he also fully discharged his duties as such employee of the Treasury Department.

While the court of claims declared that the facts above recited presented a strong equitable case in favor of the claimant, entitling him to a reasonable allowance if authority of law existed therefor, it nevertheless entered judgment for the government upon the ground that the law—as contained in §§ 1763, 1764, and 1765 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1205-1207), copied in the margin— forbade the awarding of any compensation.

†Sec. 1763. No person who holds an office, the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of two thousand, five hundred dollars, shall receive compensation for discharging the duties of any other office, unless expressly authorized by law.

Sec. 1764. No allowance or compensation shall be made to any officer or clerk, by reason of the discharge of duties which belong to any other officer or clerk in the same or any other department; and no allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra services whatever which any officer or clerk may be required to perform, unless expressly authorized by law.

Sec. 1765. No officer in any branch of the public service, or any other person whose salary, pay, or emoluments are fixed by law or regulations, shall receive any additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation, in any form whatever, for the disbursement of public money, or for any other service or duty whatever, unless the same is authorized by law, and the appropriation therefor explicitly states that it is for such additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation,

88]*It was held that the facts did not make out a case of the holding by one person at the same time of two distinct offices, places, or employments, each having its own duties and its own compensation, but was merely a case of the performance of extra services by a government employee, for the performance of which, even if it be assumed that there was authority of law therefor, nevertheless there was no "appropriation therefor explicitly stating that it was for such additional pay, extra allowance, or compensation."

We see no reason to doubt the correctness of the reasoning and conclusion of the court below. A succinct history of the legislation respecting the question of extra compensation for government employees is contained in the case of United States v. King, 147 U. S. 676, 679-681, 37 L. ed. 328-330, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439. The decision of this case does not require that we should restate that history. If the facts presented by the record before us exhibit a case merely of the performances of extra services, and not one of the filling of two distinct places, offices, or employments, payment for such extra service is plainly prohibited by the terms of § 1765, Rev. Stat. That section was taken from two statutes, the first passed March 3, 1839 (5 Stat. at L. 349, chap. 83, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1207), and the second August 23, 1842 (5 Stat. at L. 510, chap. 183, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1207), and may be considered to be, to some extent, in pari materia with §§ 1763 and 1764. United States v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 126, 30 L. ed. 594, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467. As said in the Saunders Case, speaking of §§ 1763-1765:

"Taking these sections all together, the purpose of this legislation was to prevent a person holding an office or appointment for which the law provides a definite compensation by way of salary or otherwise, which is intended to cover all the services which, as such officer, he may be called upon to render, from receiving extra compensation, additional allowances or pay for other services which may be required of him either by act of Congress or by order of the head of his department, or in any other mode added to or connected with the regular duties of the 89]place which he holds; but that *they have no application to the case of two distinct offices, places, or employments, each of which has its own duties and its own compensation, which offices may both be held by one person at the same time. In the latter case he is, in the eye of the law, two officers, or holds two places or appointments, the functions of which are separate and distinct. and, according to all the decisions, he is, in such case, entitled to recover the two compensations. In the former case, he performs the added duties under his appointment to a single place, and the statute has provided that he shall receive no additional compensation for that class of duties unless it is so provided by special legislation."

Not only was there no specific provision in the appropriation for the employment and compensation of an electrical engineer to prepare plans and supervise the construction and installation of the plant in question. but the correspondence does not permit an inference that it was the intention of the Department of the Interior to call upon Mr. Woodwell to fill a separate and distinct office or employment from that which he already held under the government. The letter of the Secretary of the Interior of date March 11, 1901, imports that the estimate upon which the appropriation was based was made upon the assumption that such work as was desired to be performed by the experts requested from the Treasury Department would be without extra cost to the government, and the whole correspondence tends to negate the conception of either an express or implied contract between the Secretary of the Interior and Mr. Woodwell, by which the latter was to perform services for which he was to be especially compensated out of the appropriation in question or otherwise. The request made of the Secretary of the Treasury was not that he should name a competent person with whom the Secretary of the Interior might contract for the performance of the desired services, but was that he should "authorize," that is, designate, "a competent person" to do such work. The reply to such request, dated March 14, 1901, we think makes evident the *fact that it was not expected that the 90 person who was to be supplied from the regular force of the Treasury Department, because it could be done without detriment to the public service, would be additionally compensated. Indeed, any inference that such thought was entertained by the Secretary of the Treasury is rebutted by the circumstance that, in his letter, he directed the attention of the Secretary of the Interior to the fact that an expense of about $500 would be necessary for the employment of draftsmen and others who could not be supplied by the Treasury Department, and that this sum would be regarded as sufficient for "the expense incident to a general inspection of the work during the period of installation." The direction given to Mr. Woodwell to confer with the chief clerk of the Department of the Interior "relative to the installation of a electric light, heating, and power plant in the old Postoffice Department building" was addressed to him in his capacity of "inspector of electric light plants" in the Treasury Department. Pre-sumptively, the aid which Mr. Woodwell rendered by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury to the Department of the Interior was done by him in and by virtue of the order and direction of his superior officer, and was not, therefore, a distinct employment. Certainly it cannot be said that Mr. Woodwell, whatever may have been the value of his services, was called upon to render a service specially required by an existing law, and for the performance of which the remuneration was fixed by law. These conclusions clearly bring the case within the prohibitions against payment contained in § 1765, Rev. Stat. As there is no contention in argument respecting the claim for expenses ($110), which it is assumed has been paid, we eliminate it from consideration.

Affirmed.

91]*FRANCIS C. WELCH, Trustee, Plff. in Err.,
v.

GEORGE B. SWASEY et al., as the Board of Appeal from the Building Commission of the City of Boston.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 91-108.)

Error to state court — Federal question — validity of state legislation.

1. A decision sustaining the validity under the state Constitution of an alleged delegation of legislative power to a building commission does not present a Federal question for determination by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2152-2163, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — police power — building regulations.

2. Regulations with respect to the height of buildings and in regard to their mode of construction in cities, made by legislative enactment for the safety, comfort, or convenience of the people, and for the benefit of property owners generally, are valid if the height and conditions provided for can be plainly seen not to be unreasonable or inappropriate.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

For a discussion of police power generally—see notes to State v. Marshall, 1 L.R.A. 51; Electric Improv. Co. v. San Francisco, 13 L.R.A. 131; State v. Schlemmer, 10 L.R.A. 135; and Barbier v. Connolly, 28 L. ed. U. S. 923.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A.

53 L. ed.

Constitutional law — due process of law — building regulations — police power.

3. The discrimination or classification made between the commercial and residential sections of Boston, by Mass. Pub. Acts 1904, chap. 333, and Acts 1905, chap. 383, limiting the maximum height of buildings in the commercial district to 125 feet, and the residential districts to from 80 to 100 feet, will not, in the face of a decision of the highest state court, upholding such legislation, as passed in the exercise of the police power, be held so unreasonable as to deprive the owner of property in the residential section of its profitable use without justification, and hence to take his property without due process of law unless compensation be given him for such invasion of his rights, even though esthetic considerations may have entered into the reasons for the passage of such enactments.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 5, and IV. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — discrimination in building regulations.

4. The equal protection of the laws is not denied an owner of property in the residential section of Boston by the discrimination or classification made between the commercial and residential sections of that city by Mass. Pub. Acts 1904, chap. 333, and Acts 1905, chap. 383, limiting the height of buildings in the commercial district to 125 feet, and in the residential districts to from 80 to 100 feet.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 153.]

Argued April 15, 16, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment denying mandamus to compel the board of appeal from the building commissioner of the city of Boston to issue a building permit. Affirmed.

See same case below, 193 Mass. 364, 118 Am. St. Rep. 523, 79 N. E. 745.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

*The plaintiff in error duly applied to [92 the justices of the supreme judicial court of the state of Massachusetts for a mandamus against the defendants, who constitute a board of appeal from the building commissioner of the city of Boston, to compel the defendants to issue a permit to him to build on his lot on the corner of Arlington and Marlborough streets, in that city. The application was referred by the justice presiding to the full court, and was by it denied (193 Mass. 364, 118 Am. St. Rep. 523, 79 N. E. 745), and the plaintiff has brought the case here by writ of error.

655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

The action of defendants in refusing the permit was based on the statutes of Massachusetts, chap. 333 of the Acts of 1904, and chap. 383 of the Acts of 1905. The two acts are set forth in the margin.† The reason for [93] the refusal to grant the building *permit was because the building site for the proposed building was situated in one of the districts B, as created under the provisions of the acts mentioned, in which districts the height of *the buildings is limited to 80, [94 or in some cases, to 100 feet, while the height of buildings in districts A is limited to 125 feet. The height of the building which plaintiff in error proposed to build and for which he asked the building permit was stated by him in his application therefor to be 124 feet, 6 inches.

The designation of what parts in districts B and upon what conditions a building could be therein erected more than 80 while not more than 100 feet high was to be made by a commission, as provided for in the act of 1905, and the commission duly carried out the provisions of the act in that respect. The sole reason for refusing the permit was on *account of the proposed [95 height of the building, being greater than the law allowed.

The plaintiff in error contended that the defendants were not justified in their refusal to grant the permit, because the stat-

†Acts of 1904, Chapter 333.

An Act Relative to the Height of Buildings in the City of Boston.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. The city of Boston shall be divided into districts of two classes, to be designated districts A and B. The boundaries of the said districts, established as hereinafter provided, shall continue for a period of fifteen years, and shall be determined in such manner that those parts of the city in which all or the greater part of the buildings situate therein are, at the time of such determination, used for business or commercial purposes, shall be included in the district or districts designated A, and those parts of the city in which all or the greater part of the buildings situate therein are, at the said time, used for residential purposes or for other purposes not business or commercial, shall be in the district or districts designated B.

Sec. 2. Upon the passage of this act the mayor of the city shall appoint a commission of three members, to be called "Commission on Height of Buildings in the City of Boston." The commission shall, immediately upon its appointment, give notice and public hearings, and shall make an order establishing the boundaries of the districts aforesaid, and within one month after its appointment shall cause the same to be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county of Suffolk. The boundaries so established shall continue for a period of fifteen years from the date of the said recording. Any person who is aggrieved by the said order may, within thirty days after the recording thereof, appeal to the commission for a revision; and the commission may, within six months after its appointment, revise such order, and the revision shall be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county of Suffolk, and shall date back to the original date of recording. The members of the commission shall serve until the districts have been established as aforesaid; and any vacancy in the commission caused by resignation, death, or inability to act shall be filled by the mayor, on written application by the remaining members of the commission or of ten inhabitants of the city. The members of the commission shall receive such compensation as the mayor shall determine.

Sec. 3. In the city of Boston no building shall be erected to a height of more than 125 feet above the grade of the street in any district designated A, and no building shall be erected to a height of more than 80 feet above the grade of the street in any district designated B. These restrictions shall not apply to grain or coal elevators or sugar refineries in any district designated A, nor to steeples, domes, towers, or cupolas erected for strictly ornamental purposes, of fire-proof material, on buildings of the above height or less in any district. The supreme judicial court of the superior court shall each have jurisdiction in equity to enforce the provisions of this act, and to restrain the violation thereof.

Sec. 4. This act shall take effect upon its passage (Approved May 13, 1904.)

Acts of 1905, Chapter 383.

An Act Relative to the Height of Buildings in the City of Boston.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. Within thirty days after the passage of this act the mayor of the city of Boston shall appoint a commission of three members to determine, in accordance with the conditions hereinafter provided, the height of buildings within the district designated by the commission on height of buildings in the city of Boston as district B, in accordance with chapter 333 of the acts of the year 1904.

Sec. 2. Said commission shall, immediately upon its appointment, give notice and utes upon which their refusal was based were unconstitutional and void; but he conceded that, if they were valid, the defendants were justified in their refusal.

The court, while deciding that mandamus was a proper remedy, held that the statutes and the reports of the commissions thereunder were constitutional.

Mr. Burton Edward Eames argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles H. Tyler and Owen D. Young, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The 14th Amendment, although it did not take away the police power of the states in the sense of limiting the subjects upon which the police power may be exercised (Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180, 182, 41 L. ed. 677, 678, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282), or in the sense of preventing all taking or regulation of property or all inequalities, did, nevertheless, place in the Federal Constitution limitations upon the police power of the states similar to the limitations which had previously existed by virtue of similar provisions in the state Constitutions.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 418; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 382, 42 L. ed. 780, 787, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

The court will look to the real purpose of the statute.

Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 319, 12 Am. Rep. 694; Austin v. Murray, 16 Pick. 126; State v. Redmon, 134 Wis. 107, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 229, 114 N. W. 137; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 82, 34 L. ed. 863, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 710, 28 L. ed. 1145, 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 63, 27 L. ed. 383, public hearings, and shall make an order establishing the boundaries of or otherwise pointing out such parts, if any, of said district B, as it may designate, in which buildings may be erected to a height exceeding 80 feet, but not exceeding 100 feet, and the height between 80 feet and 100 feet to which buildings may so be erected, and the conditions under which buildings may be erected to said height, except that such order may provide for the erection of buildings as aforesaid to a height not exceeding 125 feet in that portion of said district B which lies within 50 feet from the boundary line separating said district B from the district designated by the commission of height of buildings in the city of Boston as district A, in accordance with said chapter 333, provided said boundary line divides the premises affected by such order from other adjoining premises, both owned by the same person or persons, and within sixty days after its appointment shall cause the same to be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county of Suffolk. Any person who is aggrieved by such order may, within sixty days after the recording thereof, appeal to the commission for a revision; and the commission may, previous to the 1st day of January in the year 1906, revise such order, and the revision shall be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county of Suffolk, and shall date back to the original date of recording. The boundaries so established shall continue for a period of fifteen years from the date of the recording of the order made by the commission on height of buildings in the city of Boston under chapter 333 of the acts of the year 1904. The members of the commission shall receive such compensation as the mayor shall determine.

Sec. 3. Within such parts of district B as may be designated by the commission as aforesaid (which may, except as hereinafter provided, include any parts of said district B affected by prior acts limiting the height of buildings), buildings may be erected to the height fixed by the commission as aforesaid, exceeding 80 feet, but not exceeding 100 feet, or 125 feet, as hereinbefore provided, and subject to such conditions as may be fixed as aforesaid by the commission; but within the following-described territory, to wit: Beginning at the corner of Beacon street and Hancock avenue, thence continuing westerly on Beacon street to Joy street, thence continuing northerly on Joy street to Myrtle street, thence continuing easterly on Myrtle street to Hancock street, thence continuing southerly on Hancock street and Hancock avenue to the point of beginning, no building shall be erected to a height greater than 70 feet, measured on its principal front, and no building shall be erected on a parkway, boulevard, or public way on which a building line has been established by the board of park commissioners or by the board of street commissioners, acting under any general or special statute, to a greater height than that allowed by the order of said boards; and no building upon land any owner of which has received and retained compensation in damages for any limitation of height, or who retains any claim for such damages, shall be erected to a height greater than that fixed by the limitation for which such damages were received or claimed.

Sec. 4. No limitations of the height of buildings in the city of Boston shall apply to churches, steeples, towers, domes, cupolas, belfries, or statuary not used for purposes of habitation, nor to chimneys, gas holders, coal or grain elevators, open balustrades, skylights, ventilators, flagstaffs, railings, weather vanes, soil pipes, steam exhausts, signs, roof houses not exceeding 12 feet square and 12 feet high, nor to other similar constructions such as are usually erected above the roof line of buildings.

Sec. 5. This act shall take effect upon its passage. (Approved May 8, 1905.)

385, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. ed. 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 40, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 110, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Farist Steel Co. v. Bridgeport, 60 Conn. 292, 13 L.R.A. 590, 22 Atl. 561; Priewe v. Wisconsin State Land & Improv. Co. 103 Wis. 549, 74 Am. St. Rep. 904, 79 N. W. 780.

And, in determining what is the real purpose of the statute, the court will consider the history of the times, and the circumstances leading up to its enactment.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 463, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

The purpose may also be inferred from the terms of the act itself.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 64, 49 L. ed. 937, 944, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133; Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray, 420; Simpson v. Story, 145 Mass. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 480, 14 N. E. 641; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 558, 39 L. ed. 759, 811, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Farist Steel Co. v. Bridgeport, 60 Conn. 278, 13 L.R.A. 590, 22 Atl. 561.

Although property may be taken by right of eminent domain for esthetic purposes (Higginson v. Nahant, 11 Allen, 530; Atty. Gen. v. Williams (Knowlton v. Williams) 174 Mass. 476, 47 L.R.A. 314, 55 N. E. 77), still that purpose is not sufficient to warrant the exercise of the police power in such manner as to interfere with the use of property.

Com. v. Boston Advertising Co. 188 Mass. 348, 69 L.R.A. 817, 108 Am. St. Rep. 494, 74 N. E. 601; St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 527, 21 L.R.A. 226, 22 S. W. 861; St. Louis v. Dorr, 145 Mo. 466, 42 L.R.A. 686, 68 Am. St. Rep. 575, 41 S. W. 1094, 46 S. W. 976; People v. Green, 85 App. Div. 400, 83 N. Y. Supp. 460; Bostock v. Sams, 95 Md. 400, 59 L.R.A. 282, 93 Am. St. Rep. 394, 52 Atl. 665; Bill Posting Sign Co. v. Atlantic City, 71 N. J. L. 72, 58 Atl. 242; Passaic v. Patterson Bill Posting, Advertising, & Sign Painting Co. 72 N. J. L. 285, 111 Am. St. Rep. 676, 62 Atl. 267, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 995; Chicago v. Gunning System, 214 Ill. 628, 70 L.R.A. 230, 73 N. E. 1035, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 892; 20 Harvard Law Rev. pp. 42, 43.

The principle of reasonableness is a principle of proportionateness.

Watertown v. Mayo, supra; Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L.R.A. 727, 35 Am. St. Rep. 152, 32 Pac. 870; State v. Speyer, 67 Vt. 502, 29 L.R.A. 573, 48 Am. 926

St. Rep. 832, 32 Atl. 476; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 57; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 878; Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 547, 10 L.R.A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 403, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 110, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 28, 31, 49 L. ed. 643, 650, 651, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 593, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Sawyer v. Davis, 136 Mass. 239, 49 Am. Rep. 27; Rideout v. Knox, 148 Mass. 368, 2 L.R.A. 81, 12 Am. St. Rep. 560, 19 N. E. 390; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Bent v. Emery, 173 Mass. 496, 53 N. E. 910; Martin v. District of Columbia, 205 U. S. 135, 51 L. ed. 743, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; State v. Redmon, 134 Wis. 89, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 229, 114 N. W. 137; Freund, Pol. Power, § 63.

Any regulation which deprives any person of a profitable use of his property constitutes a taking of property, and the owner is entitled, under the Constitution, to compensation, unless the invasion of rights is so slight as to permit the regulation to be justified under the police power.

Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 179, 20 L. ed. 557, 560; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 399, 40 L. ed. 188, 196, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co. 51 N. H. 504, 12 Am. Rep. 147; Bent v. Emery, 173 Mass. 495, 53 N. E. 910; Grand Rapids Boom Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 320; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 105, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Edwards v. Bruorton, 184 Mass. 529, 69 N. E. 328; Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 547, 10 L.R.A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 668, 31 L. ed. 212, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Parker v. Com. 178 Mass. 205, 59 N. E. 634.

The infringement is disproportionate to any public necessity or end.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133; Parker v. Com. 178 Mass. 199, 59 N. E. 634; Janesville v. Carpenter, 214 U. S.

77 Wis. 301, 8 L.R.A. 808, 20 Am. St. Rep. 123, 46 N. W. 128; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

Classification must be a reasonable one with reference to the purpose for which the statute is enacted; it cannot be arbitrary.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 159, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 669, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 560, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 104, 43 L. ed. 909, 912, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Bessette v. People, 193 Ill. 334, 56 L.R.A. 558, 62 N. E. 215; State v. Divine, 98 N. C. 778, 4 S. E. 477.

The essence of the requirement of equal protection is that laws or regulations must apply equally to property of the same kind and in like circumstances.

Raymond v. Chicago Union Traction Co. 207 U. S. 20, 52 L. ed. 78, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 757; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 269, 48 L. ed. 971, 972, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315, 319, 12 Am. Rep. 694.

The court will take judicial notice of facts of common knowledge, of the location of the lines drawn by the commission of the situation of various streets, and of the character of the various districts and localities of the city.

Brimmer v. Rebman, supra; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 321, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 23, 49 L. ed. 643, 648, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 421, 52 L. ed. 551, 555, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Siegbert v. Stiles, 39 Wis. 533; The Montello (United States v. The Montello) 11 Wall. 411, 20 L. ed. 191; Gardner v. Eberhart, 82 Ill. 316; Prince v. Crocker, 166 Mass. 347, 32 L.R.A. 610, 44 N. E. 446.

Reasonable classification of cities may be made, but it must be based upon some real difference with reference to the purposes of the act.

Tenement House Department v. Moeschen, 179 N. Y. 325, 70 L.R.A. 704, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 439; Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315, 12 Am. Rep. 694; State ex rel. 53 L. ed.

Richards v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 440; Bessette v. People, 193 Ill. 334, 56 L.R.A. 558, 62 N. E. 215.

The classification attempted within the city of Boston itself is not based upon reasonable grounds.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 368, 30 L. ed. 220, 225, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Jackson v. Stevenson, 156 Mass. 496, 32 Am. St. Rep. 476, 31 N. E. 691.

The statutes create exceptions in favor of certain occupations.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

Mr. Thomas M. Babson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The statute was enacted, according to the decision of the supreme judicial court of the state, in behalf of the public health and safety, and the Supreme Court of the United States will not strike it down as an unconstitutional interference with private property, unless it can plainly see that it has no real and substantial relation to those objects, and is a mere arbitrary attack upon the owners of land.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. ed. 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 51 L. ed. 499, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Hudson County Water Co. v. McCarter, 209 U. S. 349, 52 L. ed. 828, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529.

The right of the state to regulate the construction of buildings has been recognized and exercised ever since the population of our cities became dense enough to make regulation desirable and necessary for the protection of the inhabitants from fire and disease.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Fischer v. St. Louis, supra; Ex parte Fiske, 72 Cal. 125, 13 Pac. 310; Baumgartner v. Hasty, 100 Ind. 575, 50 Am. Rep. 830; First Nat. Bank v. Sarlls, 129 Ind. 201, 13 L.R.A. 481, 28 Am. St. Rep. 185, 28 N. E. 434; Wadleigh v. Gilman, 12 Me. 403, 28 Am. Dec. 188; Easton v. Covey, 74 Md. 262, 22 Atl. 266; Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315, 12 Am. Rep. 694; Salem v. Maynes, 123 Mass. 372; Brady v. Northwestern Ins. Co. 11 Mich. 425; Fire Department v. Gilmour, 149 N. Y. 453, 52 Am. St. Rep. 747, 44 N. E. 177; Rochester v. West, 164 N. Y. 510, 53 L.R.A. 548, 79 Am. St. Rep. 659, 58 N. E. 673; Respublica v. Duquet, 2 Yeates, 493; Douglass v. Com. 2 Rawle, 262; Klingler v. Bickel, 117 Pa. 326, 11 Atl. 555; Charleston v. Elford, 1 McMull. L. 234; Knoxville v. Bird, 12 Lea, 121, 47 Am. Rep. 326; Baxter v. Seattle, 3 Wash. 352, 28 Pac. 537; Charleston v. Reed, 27 W. Va. 681, 55 Am. Rep. 336; Hudson County Water Co. v. McCarter, 209 U. S. 349, 355, 52 L. ed. 828, 831, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; People ex rel. Kemp v. D'Oench, 111 N. Y. 359, 18 N. E. 862; 1 Abbott, Mun. Corp. p. 237; 2 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, p. 754.

In a case of this kind involving the question whether a certain state statute is aimed and adapted to promote the public welfare, the Supreme Court of the United States should and does well hesitate to overturn a decision of the highest court of the state. The validity of the statute may depend on certain facts, general, notorious, and acknowledged within the state, and with which the state courts may be assumed to be exceptionally familiar. They understand the situation which led to the demand for the enactment of the statute, and they appreciate the disastrous results which, in all probability, would flow from a denial of its validity.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1171; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 50 L. ed. 581, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1174; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 51 L. ed. 499, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Land is not taken unless it is physically entered upon, or the owner substantially deprived of the beneficial use.

Smith v. Washington, 20 How. 135, 15 L. ed. 858; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 U. S. 248, 37 L. ed. 155, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 1002, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 95, 43 L. ed. 379, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Sharp v. United States, 191 U. S. 341, 48 L. ed. 211, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

Regulations and restrictions upon the use of real property have been imposed which limit its use and impair its value more severely than those in the case at bar, without giving rise to any constitutional obligation to compensate the owner.

Slaughter-House Cases and Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, supra; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; Barbier v. Connolly; Mugler v. Kansas; and Fischer v. St. Louis, —supra.

A police regulation is not unconstitutional merely because it is applicable to a certain section of the state only; granting that a purely arbitrary distinction would be invalid, such as a burdensome restriction applied only to the democratic wards, or to those inhabited principally by people of a certain race or religion, yet all that is required is that the discrimination between localities be based upon some conceivably rational distinction; with the policy of the law the court has no concern.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 554; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 548, 36 L. ed. 247, 257, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Slaughter-House Cases and Barbier v. Connolly, supra.

The legislature is authorized, and even required in enacting a police regulation, to consider the hardship it may inflict upon individuals as well as the benefit to the public.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

There are obvious reasons why the legislature, in passing this act as a health measure, should see the greater need of sunlight and air in the residential quarters of the city, occupied during the day by women and children, than in the business district where men are employed. The legislature is well justified in throwing a greater protection around women and children than it allows men, even if property rights are thereby somewhat interfered with.

Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The ground of objection of plaintiff in error to this legislation is that the statutes unduly and unreasonably infringe upon his constitutional rights (a) as to taking of property without compensation; (b) as to denial of equal protection of the laws.

Plaintiff in error refers to the existence of a general law in Massachusetts, applicable to every city therein, limiting the height of all buildings to 125 feet above the grade of the street (Acts of 1891, chap. 355), and states that he does not attack the validity of that act in any respect, but concedes that it is constitutional and valid. See also, on same subject, Acts of 1892, chap. 419, § 25, making such limitation as to the city of Boston. His objection is directed to the particular statutes because they provide for a much lower limit in certain parts of the city of Boston, to be designated by a commission, and because a general restriction of height as low as 80 or 100 feet over any substantial portion of the city is, as he contends, an unreasonable infringement upon his rights of property; also that the application of those limits to districts B, which comprise the greater part of the city of Boston, leaving the general 125-foot limit in force in those portions of the city which 104the commission should designate (being the commercial districts), is an unreasonable and arbitrary denial of equal rights to the plaintiff in error and others in like situation.

Stating his objections more in detail, the plaintiff in error contends that the purposes of the acts are not such as justify the exercise of what is termed the police power, because, in fact, their real purpose was of an esthetic nature, designed purely to preserve architectural symmetry and regular sky lines, and that such power cannot be exercised for such a purpose. It is further objected that the infringement upon property rights by these acts is unreasonable and disproportioned to any public necessity, and also that the distinction between 125 feet for the height of buildings in the commercial districts described in the acts, and 80 to 100 feet in certain other or so-called residential districts, is wholly unjustifiable and arbitrary, having no well-founded reason for such distinction, and is without the least reference to the public safety, as from fire, and inefficient as means to any appropriate end to be attained by such laws.

In relation to these objections the counsel for the plaintiff in error, in presenting his case at bar, made a very clear and able argument.

Under the concession of counsel, that the law limiting the height of buildings to 125 feet is valid, we have to deal only with the question of the validity of the provisions stated in these statutes and in the conditions provided for by the commissions, limiting the height in districts B between 80 and 100 feet.

We do not understand that the plaintiff in error makes the objection of illegality arising from an alleged delegation of legislative power to the commissions provided for by the statutes. At all events, it does not raise a Federal question. The state court holds that kind of legislation to be valid under the state Constitution, and this court will follow its determination upon that question.

We come, then, to an examination of the question whether *these statutes with 105 reference to limitations on height between 80 and 100 feet, and in no case greater than 100 feet, are valid. There is here a discrimination or classification between sections of the city, one of which, the business or commercial part, has a limitation of 125 feet, and the other, used for residential purposes, has a permitted height of buildings from 80 to 100 feet.

The statutes have been passed under the exercise of so-called police power, and they must have some fair tendency to accomplish, or aid in the accomplishment of, some purpose for which the legislature may use the power. If the statutes are not of that kind, then their passage cannot be justified under that power. These principles have been so frequently decided as not to require the citation of many authorities. If the means employed, pursuant to the statute, have no real, substantial relation to a public object which government can accomplish, if the statutes are arbitrary and unreasonable, and beyond the necessities of the case, the courts will declare their invalidity. The following are a few of the many cases upon this subject: Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 28, 49 L. ed. 643, 650, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 57, 49 L. ed. 937, 941, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 593, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175.

In passing upon questions of this character as to the validity and reasonableness of a discrimination or classification in relation to limitations as to height of buildings in a large city, the matter of locality assumes an important aspect. The particular circumstances prevailing at the place or in the state where the law is to become operative,—whether the statute is really adapted, regard being had to all the different and material facts, to bring about the results desired from its passage; whether it is well calculated to promote the general and public welfare,—are all matters which the state court is familiar with; but a like familiarity cannot be ascribed to this court, assum-

106]ing "judicial notice may be taken of what is or ought to be generally known. For such reason this court, in cases of this kind, feels the greatest reluctance in interfering with the well-considered judgments of the courts of a state whose people are to be affected by the operation of the law. The highest court of the state in which statutes of the kind under consideration are passed is more familiar with the particular causes which led to their passage (although they may be of a public nature) and with the general situation surrounding the subject-matter of the legislation than this court can possibly be. We do not, of course, intend to say that, under such circumstances, the judgment of the state court upon the question will be regarded as conclusive, but simply that it is entitled to the very greatest respect, and will only be interfered with, in cases of this kind, where the decision is, in our judgment, plainly wrong. In this case the supreme judicial court of the state holds the legislation valid, and that there is a fair reason for the discrimination between the height of buildings in the residential as compared with the commercial districts. That court has also held that regulations in regard to the height of buildings, and in regard to their mode of construction in cities, made by legislative enactments for the safety, comfort, or convenience of the people, and for the benefit of property owners generally, are valid. Atty. Gen. v. Williams (Knowlton v. Williams) 174 Mass. 476, 47 L.R.A. 314, 55 N. E. 77. We concur in that view, assuming, of course, that the height and conditions provided for can be plainly seen to be not unreasonable or inappropriate.

In relation to the discrimination or classification made between the commercial and the residential portion of the city, the state court holds in this case that there is reasonable ground therefor, in the very great value of the land and the demand for space in those parts of Boston where a greater number of buildings are used for the purposes of business or commercially than where the buildings are situated in the residential portion of the city, and where no such reasons exist for high buildings. While so deciding, the court cited, with *approval, Com. v. Boston Advertising Co. 188 Mass. 348, 69 L.R.A. 817, 108 Am. St. Rep. 494, 74 N. E. 601, which holds that the police power cannot be exercised for a merely esthetic purpose. The court distinguishes between the two cases, and sustains the present statutes. As to the condition adopted by the commission for permitting the erection, in either of the districts B, that is, the residential portion, of buildings of over 80 feet, but never more than 100, that the width on each and every public street on which the building stands shall be at least one half its height, the court refuses to hold that such condition was entirely for esthetic reasons. The chief justice said: "We conceive that the safety of adjoining buildings, in view of the risk of the falling of walls after a fire, may have entered into the purpose of the commissioners. We are of opinion that the statutes and the orders of the commissioners are constitutional"

We are not prepared to hold that this limitation of 80 to 100 feet, while in fact a discrimination or classification, is so unreasonable that it deprives the owner of the property of its profitable use without justification, and that he is therefore entitled under the Constitution to compensation for such invasion of his rights. The discrimination thus made is, as we think, reasonable, and is justified by the police power.

It might well be supposed that taller buildings in the commercial section of the city might be less dangerous in case of fire than in the residential portion. This court is not familiar with the actual facts, but it may be that, in this limited commercial area, the high buildings are generally of fireproof construction; that the fire engines are more numerous and much closer together than in the residential portion, and that an unlimited supply of salt water can be more readily introduced from the harbor into the pipes, and that few women or children are found there in the daytime, and very few people sleep there at night. And there may, in the residential part, be more wooden buildings, the fire apparatus may be more widely scattered, and so situated that it would be more difficult to obtain the necessary amount of water, as the residence quarters *are[108 more remote from the water front, and that many women and children spend the day in that section, and the opinion is not strained that an undiscovered fire at night might cause great loss of life in a very high apartment house in that district. These are matters which, it must be presumed, were known by the legislature, and whether or not such were the facts was a question, among others, for the legislature to determine. They are asserted as facts in the brief of the counsel for the city of Boston. If they are, it would seem that ample justification is therein found for the passage of the statutes, and that the plaintiff in error is not entitled to compensation for the reasonable interference with his property rights by the statutes. That, in addition to these sufficient facts, considerations of an esthetic nature also entered into the reasons for their passage, would not invalidate them. Under these circumstances there is no unreasonable interference with the rights of property of the plaintiff in error, nor do the statutes deprive him of the equal protection of the laws. The reasons contained in the opinion of the state court are, in our view, sufficient to justify their enactment. The judgment is therefore affirmed.

KAIMIOLA NAKOOKOO GRAY, Appt.,
v.
DAVID NOHOLOA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 108-113.)

Appeal—review of facts—concurrent findings.

1. Concurrent findings of the two lower courts on the question as to what is the correct English translation of a will written in the Hawaiian language will be followed by the Supreme Court of the United States on appeal from the Hawaiian supreme court. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4558, 4559, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Wills—partial intestacy.

2. The intention of the testatrix, a leper, residing at the leper settlement at Kalaupapa, Hawaii, to give to her husband not only the property which she left situated at that place, but also all other property owned by her, wherever situated, and of whatever character, clearly appears from a gift to her husband of "all property known belonging to me and appearing in my name, situate at Kalaupapa," describing it as three horses and a wooden house, and "other houses owned by me, as well as all other property owned by me."

[For other cases, see Wills, III, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 174.]

Submitted April 20, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of the Second Circuit of that territory, refusing to grant letters of administration upon a portion of the property of a testatrix, as to which she was alleged to have died intestate. Affirmed.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 265.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The appellant herein appeals from the decree of the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii. The facts relating to the case are as follows:

Hikaalani Hobron Noholoa was a resident of the island of Molokai, territory of Hawaii, which is called the leper settlement, and was a leper, about seventy-five years of age, at the time of her death, on or about the 29th of June, 1906. Deceased left a husband, who was also a resident of the settlement and a leper, and a niece, the appellant, Kaimiola Nakookoo Gray, also residing on the island, and two grandnieces, being minors, residing in Honolulu. She left a will written in the Hawaiian language, of which the following was taken as a translation by the courts below:

"I, the undersigned, a leper residing at Kalaupapa, island of Molokai, territory of Hawaii, do make this my last will for all property known belonging to me and appearing in my name situate at Kalaupapa aforesaid, with good will (or intention) do hereby bequeath the same as hereinafter described: One gray horse, one bay mare; one black mare; one frame wooden house and other houses owned by me, as well as all other property owned by me, to my husband David Noholoa, residing at Kalaupapa aforesaid, to him and to his heirs, administrators and executors forever. Renouncing all claims that my relatives may set up in law to this."

The above will was duly admitted to probate in the circuit court of the second circuit of the territory on the 12th day of December, 1906, and, upon petition duly made, the court granted letters of administration with the will annexed to Enoch Johnson, who thereupon received such letters, and entered upon his duties as such administrator.

*After the application on the part of [110 the husband for the probate of the will of his wife, and after the filing of the same with the clerk of the circuit court, but before the granting of letters of administration to Enoch Johnson, as prayed for by the husband, a petition was filed with the same court by Kaimiola Nakookoo Gray, the appellant herein, and a niece of the deceased testatrix, in which petition it was averred that the will of the testatrix, which was offered for probate, did not dispose of any property other than which was within and at the leper settlement, and that the testatrix, at the time of her death, owned other property outside of the settlement, of the assessed value of several thousand dollars, and it was averred that there was no person who could lawfully demand settlement of the people who had possession of the property outside of the settlement, and therefore the petitioner asked for the appointment of some suitable person as administrator of the estate of which decedent died intestate, and that due notice might be given thereof.

NOTE.—As to how far the intention of a testator is to govern in the construction of a will—see notes to Pray v. Belt, 7 L. ed. U. S. 309; Dougherty v. Rogers, 3 L.R.A. 847; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Coffin, 8 L.R.A. 740; Davidson v. Coon, 9 L.R.A. 587; and Masterson v. Townshend, 10 L.R.A. 816.
53 L. ed.

Subsequently to the filing of this petition the probate court duly admitted the will as translated by the court to probate, and also denied the petition of the niece for letters of administration upon that portion of the land of deceased which she asserted was not included in the will. The translation of the will which she put in evidence in her proceeding was the same one that was made by the court in the proceeding to admit the will to probate.

Kaimiola Nakookoo Gray duly appealed from the order or decree of the probate court, refusing to grant letters of administration, as petitioned for, and the appeal was duly argued, without objection, in the supreme court of the territory, upon the same translation of the will, and the decree was affirmed.

A motion was then made for a rehearing of the case, and upon that motion, for the first time, ex parte affidavits were used on behalf of the appellant in regard to the translation of the will of testatrix. These affidavits asserted that the translation adopted, and most of it made, by the 111] probate court, and *adopted by the supreme court upon a hearing, without protest or question on her part, was not an accurate translation, and the following was asserted to be the true translation:

"I, the undersigned, a leper residing at Kalaupapa, island of Molokai, territory of Hawaii, make this my last testament concerning all chattels known as mine and in my possession, being in Kalaupapa aforementioned; with sane mind I bequeath all those said goods of mine described as follows, to wit,

"1 Creamed-colored horse,

"1 Bay mare,

"1 Black mare,

"1 Wooden house together with certain other houses, and all other chattels belonging to me, to my husband, David Noholoa, residing at said Kalaupapa and to his heirs and assigns forever. My heirs shall not have any right to claim these at law.

"In witness whereof I hereunto subscribe my name this 18th day of November, 1901."

The court refused to accept such translation or to set aside or correct the translation already made and adopted by it, and thereupon denied the motion for a rehearing, Frear, Chief Justice, dissenting.

From the decree of affirmance, Kaimiola Nakookoo Gray has appealed to this court.

Mr. David L. Withington submitted the cause for appellant. Messrs. J. Alfred Magoon and J. Lightfoot were on the brief:

In a question concerning the construction of wills, the intention of the testator is the guiding consideration; and this intention will always prevail unless it is against some positive rule of law.

Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. 68, 8 L. ed. 322; Lambert v. Paine, 3 Cranch, 97, 2 L. ed. 377; Finlay v. King, 3 Pet. 346, 7 L. ed. 701; Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 300, 32 L. ed. 138, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1164; Lee v. Simpson, 134 U. S. 572, 33 L. ed. 1038, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Harris v. Judd, 3 Haw. 421; Zupplein v. Austin, 6 Haw. 8; Thurston v. Allen, 8 Haw. 392.

In arriving at the intention of a testator, his circumstances, surroundings, and condition at the time of the making of the will can be considered for the purpose of explaining any latent ambiguity.

Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. 483, 9 L. ed. 201; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 27 L. ed. 401, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Robinson v. Adams, 4 Dall. 12, Appx., 1 L. ed. 920, Appx.; Smith v. Bell, supra; Wright v. Denn, 10 Wheat, 204, 6 L. ed. 303; Given v. Hilton, 95 U. S. 591, 24 L. ed. 458.

The generally expressed intent prevails over the technical meaning of words employed.

Butler v. Huestis, 68 Ill. 594, 18 Am. Rep. 589; Sheetz's Appeal, 82 Pa. 213; Den ex dem. McMurtrie v. McMurtrie, 15 N. J. L. 276; Den ex dem. Blackwell v. Blackwell, 15 N. J. L. 386; Stokes v. Tilly, 9 N. J. Eq. 130; Carnagy v. Woodcock, 2 Munf. 234, 5 Am. Dec. 470; Morton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 265, 39 Am. Rep. 575; Rose v. McHose, 26 Mo. 590.

The supreme court of the territory of Hawaii erred in holding and deciding that the rule "ejusdem generis" does not apply in the construction of this will.

Brawley v. Collins, 88 N. C. 607; Andrews v. Schoppe, 84 Me. 170, 24 Atl. 807; Benton v. Benton, 63 N. H. 295, 56 Am. Rep. 512; Jackson v. Vandersprengle, 2 Dall. 142, 1 L. ed. 323; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 418-421, 14 L. ed. 472, 480-482; Dole v. Johnson, 3 Allen, 364; Bills v. Putnam, 64 N. H. 554, 15 Atl. 140; Vincent v. Murray, 73 N. C. 20; Farish v. Cook, 78 Mo. 217, 47 Am. Rep. 107; Reakert's Appeal, 173 Pa. 368, 34 Atl. 58; Bond v. Martin, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 719, 76 S. W. 326; Gallagher v. McKeague, 125 Wis. 116, 110 Am. St. Rep. 821, 103 N. W. 233.

Messrs. William L. Stanley and Clarence H. Olson submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Henry Holmes was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question in this case is whether property which belonged to testatrix in her 112]lifetime, and was situated outside *of the leper island, or settlement, at the time of her death, passed by her will.

The appellant asserts that the translation of the will, although made by one and adopted by both courts below without opposition, and offered on her part in this proceeding, both in the trial court and upon review, is nevertheless, inaccurate; that the translation which she submitted in her motion for a rehearing, as contained, in certain ex parte affidavits, is the more accurate of the two, and, if it were adopted, the original will in such case, as so translated, would not dispose of any property which belonged to the testatrix at the time of her death, situated outside of the leper settlement; and, as no executor was appointed in the will, the petition of the appellant for the appointment of an administrator with the will annexed as to all outside property of which the testatrix died intestate should, as she claims, have been granted, and to that end the order should be reversed.

What is the correct English translation of the original will in this case, written in the Hawaiian language, is a pure question of fact.

The record shows that Judge Kepoikai, judge of the probate branch of the circuit court, second circuit, himself translated, at least in part, the will now before us for construction. The record discloses no objection or opposition to such translation, or any criticism of its accuracy at that time. The supreme court, on appeal, used the same translation, without criticism or opposition, as had been used by the trial court, and, upon that translation, affirmed the decree. Mr. Justice Hartwell, in writing the opinion of the supreme court, said: "The original of the will shows more clearly than does the evidently defective translation that the intention was to dispose of 'also all the other property known to be mine.' The decedent evidently knew well what her property at Kalaupapa was, and there is no reason to suppose that she did not know of the property in Honolulu." [18 Haw. 266.] So that whether the translation adopted by the court below and the supreme court 113]was defective or not, the *view of the latter court was that a correct translation showed the intention of the testatrix to dispose of all her property, or, as the court said, "also all the other property known to be mine."

As the two courts below have determined the question of fact, we follow our usual 53 L. ed.

course in such cases, and adopt the translation of the will which they have adopted.

The legal question then arising is, What did the testatrix mean by her will? Her intention is to be derived from her language, and we are of opinion that the lower court was correct in its construction as given to us.

A perusal of the will as translated and adopted by the courts below leaves us in no doubt that the testatrix's intention was to give to her husband, not only the property which she left situated at Kalaupapa, but also all other property owned by her, wherever it might be situated and whatever it might be. We do not think she intended to die intestate as to any portion of her property, or to limit her bounty to her husband to such property only as was situated at Kalaupapa.

The decree of the Supreme Court of the Territory is therefore affirmed.

GEORGE D. COLLINS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

THOMAS F. O'NEIL, Sheriff of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, et al. [No. 241.]

GEORGE D. COLLINS, Appt.,

v.

SHERIFF OF THE CITY & COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, State of California, et al. [No. 320.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 113-124.)

Extradition — prosecution for subsequent offense — opportunity to return.

1. Immunity from trial for an offense committed by a person after his extradition until he has been afforded an opportunity to return to the country whence he was extradited was not given by the provisions of the treaties with Great Britain of August 9, 1842 (8 Stat. at L. 576), and July 12, 1889 (26 Stat. at L. 1508, 1509), or of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5275, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596, under which such immunity as to prior offenses only is secured.

[For other cases, see Extradition, 65-67, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Extradition — prosecution for subsequent offense.

2. An extradited person is given no right to have the trial of the offense for which he was extradited brought to a conclusion before he can be tried for an offense subsequently committed by the provisions of the treates with Great Britain of August 9, 1842, and July 12, 1889, or of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5275, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596, under which he is entitled to a reasonable time to return to the country whence he was extradited before he can be tried for another offense committed prior to his extradition.

NOTE.—On prosecution of extradited person for other crimes than the one for which he was surrendered—see notes to Com. v. Wright, 19 L.R.A. 206; Ex parte McKnight, 14 L.R.A. 128; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 40 L. ed. U. S. 406; Cook v. Hart, 36 L. ed. U. S. 934; and Greene v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 275.

[For other cases, see Extradition, V. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 241 and 320.]

Argued and submitted April 5, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment dismissing a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a conviction for an offense committed by the accused subsequent to his extradition. Affirmed. Also APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review an order dismissing a similar writ. Affirmed.

See same case below, in No. 241, 151 Cal. 340, 90 Pac. 827, 91 Pac. 397.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

In No. 241, the plaintiff in error, being imprisoned in the county jail of San Francisco, in the state of California, by the sheriff, applied to the supreme court of that state in banc for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain his discharge from imprisonment. The writ was granted, and, after hearing, was dismissed, and the petitioner remanded to the custody of the sheriff. 151 Cal. 340, 70 Pac. 827, 91 Pac. 397. A writ of error was then sued out from this court and the case brought here.

In No. 320, the appellant applied to the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of California for a similar writ, which was issued, and a hearing had, and the writ dismissed by the court. 149 Fed. 573, and see 151 Fed. 358, 154 Fed. 980. From the order of dismissal an appeal was allowed to this court. The two cases have been heard here as one.

115] *The material facts are these: On July 13, 1905, an indictment was found by the grand jury of San Francisco county, California against the plaintiff in error charging him with the crime of perjury, alleged to have been committed in San Francisco on June 30 of that year. The plaintiff in error not being found within the state, was subsequently discovered was in Victoria, British Columbia, and proper demand, under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, being made for his surrender upon that indictment for trial, he was, on October 7, 1905, duly surrendered, and removed from Victoria by one Gibson, the agent designated in the Canadian extradition warrant, to San Francisco, where he was placed in the custody of the then sheriff, who also had a bench warrant issued from the superior court on the perjury indictment against the plaintiff in error.

His trial upon the indictment upon which he had been extradited began in San Francisco in December, 1905, and resulted in the disagreement of the jury on the 23d of December of that year, and the case was then continued, to be thereafter reset for trial. Upon the trial of the indictment for which plaintiff in error was extradited, he was himself sworn, and testified as a witness, and, on the 29th of December, 1905, after he had given such evidence, he was indicted again by the grand jury of San Francisco county, the indictment charging him with perjury committed on December 12, 1905, while testifying on his own behalf on the trial, as already stated. He was arraigned on this indictment in January, 1906, and after he had made all objections to his being arraigned or placed on trial on this second indictment until the conclusion of the first, and until he had then been afforded opportunity to return to Victoria, he was, nevertheless, brought to the bar and the trial proceeded with, resulting in a verdict of guilty on February 27, 1906, upon which judgment was entered that he be imprisoned in the state prison for the term of fourteen years.

From that judgment he appealed to the district court of *appeals of California, [116 where it was affirmed, and thereafter he applied to the state supreme court for a rehearing by that court, which was denied. People v. Collins, 6 Cal. App. 492, 92 Pac. 513.]

Thereupon the plaintiff in error, being restrained of his liberty, as well under the judgment of conviction, as otherwise under the extradition warrant, applied to the state supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus, as above stated, contending that his conviction and sentence were void and in excess of the jurisdiction of the state court, as being in contravention of his extradition rights under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, and § 5275 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596), set forth in the margin.†

The writ was issued and a return made, denying many of the allegations of the peti-

†U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5275, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596.

"Whenever any person is delivered by any foreign government to an agent of the United States, for the purpose of being brought within the United States and tried for any crime of which he is duly accused, the President shall have power to take all tion, and, after hearing, it was finally dismissed, and the plaintiff in error remanded to the custody of the sheriff. 154 Fed. 980.

Mr. George D. Collins, in propria persona, submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. William Hoff Cook argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Peckham after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The objections which the plaintiff in error urges to his further imprisonment are founded upon what he insists is implied from the provisions of the treaties between the United States and Great Britain (1842-1889 [8 Stat. at L. 572, 26 Stat. at L. 1508]), and he contends that, under those treaties, the state of California had no right or jurisdiction to try him for any offense whatever other than the one for which he was extradited and delivered to the Government of the United States for trial, even though he committed an offense subsequently to the extradition; and he further asserts that after a trial has been had for the offense for which he was extradited, he is entitled to be afforded reasonable time and opportunity after his final release on that charge to return to the country of asylum, and that the trial of the crime for which he was extradited must be had within a reasonable time after his extradition, or he is, for that reason, entitled to his discharge. In other words, the plaintiff in error claims immunity, under the treaties, from arrest or detention for any crime committed 121by him after he had been brought back upon the extradition warrant until he has been allowed a reasonable time to return to the place from which he was taken. He contends that the duty originally resting upon the demanding country to try him only for the offense for which he was extradited, and to then afford him reasonable opportunity to return, is unaffected by the fact that he committed another crime after his extradition.

The treaty of 1842, August 9 (8 Stat. at L. 576, § 10), is the one in regard to which discussions as to its meaning have arisen. United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234. Subsequently to the treaty, Great Britain passed the extradition act of 1870 (32 and 33 Viet. chap. 52), and also in 1873 an act to amend the extradition act of 1870 (36 and 37 Viet. chap. 60). Both these acts are cited as the extradition acts of 1870 and 1873. See 1 Moore, Extradition, 1891, pp. 741, 755. In subdivision 2 of § 3 of the act of 1870 it is provided: "(2) A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered to a foreign state unless provision is made by the law of that state, or by arrangement, that the fugitive criminal shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to her Majesty's dominions, be detained or tried in that foreign state for any offense committed prior to his surrender, other than the extradition crime proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded."

Article 3 of the treaty or convention of 1889, July 12, between Great Britain and the United States, is to be found in 26 Stat. at L. 1508, 1509, and is also, among others, set out in Johnson v. Browne, 205 U. S. 309, 319, 51 L. ed. 816, 819, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 542, 10 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 636, 638, as follows: "Article 3. No person surrendered by or to either of the high contracting parties shall be triable or be tried for any crime or offense committed prior to his extradition, other than the offense for which he was surrendered, until he shall have had an opportunity of returning to the country from which he was surrendered." The treatment of the criminal for all acts committed or said to have been committed by him prior to extradition is thus fully provided for.

*The contention of the plaintiff in 122 error that the duty to afford opportunity to return after a trial or other termination of the case upon which he was extradited is unaffected by any subsequent crime he may have committed is not even plausible. Nothing in the Rauscher Case (supra) is authority for any such contention. The duty to afford opportunity to return after trial, as stated, is limited to matters which happened before extradition; and, in the nature of things, such duty cannot be extended by implication so as to cover a totally different state of facts. Because, in some cases, in construing the treaty, it has been stated that a person extradited can be tried only for the offense for which he was surrendered for trial until he has had an necessary measures for the transportation and safe-keeping of such accused person, and for his security against lawless violence, until the final conclusion of his trial for the crimes or offenses specified in the warrant of extradition, and until his final discharge from custody or imprisonment for 53 L. ed.

or on account of such crimes or offenses, and for a reasonable time thereafter, and may employ such portion of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia thereof, as may be necessary for the safe keeping and protection of the accused."

opportunity of returning, it is assumed by the plaintiff in error that such language prohibits the trial of a person so extradited for any crime committed by him subsequently as well as prior to the surrender, without an opportunity for his return to the other country. The whole question is simply one as to the meaning of the treaty, and we cannot doubt for a single moment what that meaning is.

Much is said by the plaintiff in error as to his right to an asylum, as if it inhered in himself. The right is, however, simply provided for by treaty, and must be found therein, so far alone as the criminal is concerned.

The question then is, Does either the treaty or convention, by express provision or by inference, provide for a return of the criminal to the surrendering country after his surrender, and after a subsequent commission of a crime in the country to which he was surrendered? To ask the question is to answer it. The plaintiff in error contends for the treaty right to leave the country, notwithstanding his commission of the subsequent crime. This we cannot assent to. It is impossible to conceive of representatives of two civilized countries solemnly entering into a treaty of extradition, and therein providing that a criminal surrendered according to demand, for a crime that he has committed, if, subsequently to his surrender, he is guilty of murder or treason [123] or other crime, is, nevertheless, to *have the right guaranteed to him to return unmolested to the country which surrendered him. We can imagine no country, by treaty, as desirous of exacting such a condition of surrender, or any country as willing to accept it. When a treaty or statute contains a provision that the party surrendered shall be tried for no other offense until he has had an opportunity to leave the country, the meaning of such a provision is perfectly plain, and must receive a reasonable and sensible construction. The party proceeded against must not be tried for any other offense existing at the time when he was extradited (whether, at the time of such extradition, it had or had not been discovered), until he shall have had a reasonable time to return to the country from which he was taken, after his trial or other termination of the proceeding. That such privilege should be accorded to one who commits a crime after his surrender to a demanding government lacks all semblance of reason or sense.

Spear, in the second edition of his work on the Law of Extradition, says, at page 84, that the party extradited is not "protected against trial for any offenses which he may commit against the receiving government subsequently to his extradition, and while in its custody, or after his discharge therefrom." Such a criminal has no asylum, because he never had an asylum within the jurisdiction of the government delivering him, with regard to the crime which he committed since such delivery. Ibid.

The contention is also without merit that he has, at any rate, the right to a trial to a conclusion of the case for which he was extradited, before he can be tried for a crime subsequently committed. The matter lies within the jurisdiction of the state whose laws he has violated since his extradition, and we cannot see that it is a matter of any interest to the surrendering government.

There is nothing in the section of the U. S. Rev. Stat., supra, which gives the least countenance to the claims of the plaintiff in error.

*The other objections made by him [124 in regard to the person who now has him in custody under the various warrants and processes, copies of which are returned in the record, we regard as unimportant.

As soon as the judgments herein are affirmed the plaintiff in error will, of course, pursuant to the judgment entered upon the verdict of conviction against him, be taken to the state prison in California, provided for in the sentence, and there confined according to law. The orders and judgments in the two cases are affirmed.

UNITED STATES EX REL. EMILY
E. PARISH, Executrix of Joseph W. Parish, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,

v.

FRANKLIN MACVEAGH, Secretary of the United States Treasury.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 124-138.)

Mandamus — to executive officer — ministerial duty.

A duty enforceable by mandamus, and not one involving the exercise of judgment and discretion, was imposed upon the Secretary of the Treasury by the act of February 17, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1612, chap. 559), referring to him the Parish claim, under a contract to furnish ice to the government at a fixed price, to "determine and ascertain the full amount which should have been paid" to the contractor "if the said contract had been carried out in full, without change or default made by either of the parties," under the ruling of the measure of damages laid down by the Federal Supreme Court, and in "accordance with the evidence in the case collected by the court of claims," and, after determining the full amount thus due, to deduct all payments, and pay over the balance to the claimant.

NOTE. — As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; M'Cluney v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

214 U. S.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, 115-131, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 111.]

Argued March 11, 12, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a petition for mandamus to require the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a draft in payment of a claim referred to him by Congress. Judgments of both courts reversed, and the case remanded for judgment in favor of relator.

See same case below, 30 App. D. C. 45.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This is a writ of error directed to review the judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming a judgment of the supreme court, dismissing a petition for mandamus to require Leslie M. Shaw, then Secretary of the Treasury, to issue a draft in favor of the petitioner, plaintiff in error here, for the sum of $181,358.95, in payment of a claim referred to him by an act of Congress approved February 17, 1903. [32 Stat. at L. 1612, chap. 559.] Shaw, pending the appeal, resigned, and Cortelyou, his successor in office, was made a party in his stead, and subsequently, Franklin MacVeagh becoming Secretary, he was substituted for Cortelyou. We shall call plaintiff in error relator and defendant in error respondent, they having occupied that relation in the trial court.

J. W. Parish, of whose estate relator is executrix, entered into a contract with the United States, as J. W. Parish & Company, to deliver, for the use of the United States medical department at Memphis, St. Louis, and Cairo, the whole amount of ice required to be consumed during the remainder of the year 1863. The quality of the ice was to be "A No. 1," and the contract stated the prices to be paid at the designated points respectively. On March 25, 1863, Joseph B. Brown, by instruction of the Assistant Surgeon General, issued an order directing Parish to deliver the ice as follows: St. Louis, 5,000 tons, Cairo, 5,000 tons, Memphis, 10,000 tons, and Nashville 10,000 tons, "making a 53 L. ed.

total," the order recited, "of 30,000 tons which you have contracted to deliver. The ice to *be delivered at Nashville and [126 Memphis is for the use of the sick of the armies in the field and should be furnished without delay." Parish immediately proceeded to execute the order, and was performing it when, on the 31st of March, 1863, he received a letter from the Assistant Surgeon General, under the instructions of the Surgeon General, suspending the order of March 25th until instructions should be received from the Surgeon General. At the date of this letter 12,768 tons of ice had been delivered and paid for at the contract price. The order of suspension was never recalled. Under the authority of an act of Congress approved May 31, 1872 [17 Stat. at L. 195, chap. 245], Parish brought suit against the United States to enforce his demand under the contract. The court of claims dismissed the suit. 12 Ct. Cl. 609. This court reversed the judgment and remanded the case, with directions to ascertain the damages sustained by Parish. 100 U. S. 500, 25 L. ed. 763. The court of claims rendered judgment for the claimant for the sum of $10,444.91. 16 Ct. Cl. 642. Parish then petitioned Congress to satisfy as much of his claim as had not been satisfied by the court of claims. Responding to a reference by a committee of the House of Representatives, the War Department, through the Surgeon General, reported that the whole of the undelivered ice, through the order of suspension, amounted to 17,232 tons, and the same had been lost by the contractor. The report also stated that, under the evidence before the court of claims, and additional evidence before the Department, Parish was entitled to be reimbursed, in addition to the judgment of the court of claims, in the sum of $58,341.85, for the loss he had sustained because of the nondelivery of the 17,232 tons. After this report, on February 20, 1886, Congress passed an act directing payment of said sum of $58,341.85 to Parish, in addition to said sum of $10,444.91, being the balance of money laid out and expended by him in the purchase of 17,232 tons of ice for the use and at the request of the government of the United States, which were not afterwards called for, but were wholly lost to the said Parish. 24 Stat. at L. 653, chap. 11. Parish again *applied to [127 Congress for relief, and, on February 17, 1903, the act in controversy was passed. It will be given in the opinion.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and Leigh Robinson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In performing the duty laid upon him by the act of February 17, 1903, the Secretary of the Treasury was not acting in the exercise of judicial or discretionary, but only of ministerial, powers.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 165, 2 L. ed. 70; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 1181; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 48, 32 L. ed. 357, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Cooley, Taxn. p. 515; People ex rel. Otsego County Bank v. Otsego County, 51 N. Y. 401; Butterworth v. United States, 112 U. S. 57, 28 L. ed. 658, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

A ministerial duty is one to be performed or exercised in a given state of facts, in a prescribed manner, in obedience to the mandate of legal authority, and irrespective of the judgment of him on whom the duty is imposed, as to the propriety of the performance.

Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 498, 18 L. ed. 440; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 399; Com. v. Fairfax County Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 9; Betts v. Dimon, 3 Conn. 107; Flournoy v. Jeffersonville, 17 Ind. 174, 79 Am. Dec. 468; Rock Island County v. United States, 4 Wall. 435, 18 L. ed. 419; Gordon v. United States, 7 Wall. 194, 19 L. ed. 36; Chorpenning v. United States, 3 Ct. Cl. 144; Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 223, 230, 231, 44 L. ed. 443, 446, 447, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The findings of the court of claims are like a special verdict, where a jury find the facts of the case, and refer the decision of the cause upon those facts to the court. So far as they go, the findings constitute the evidence collected in the case in the court of claims.

Mason Lumber Co. v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 638, 25 L. ed. 1074; Suydam v. Williamson, 20 How. 432, 15 L. ed. 979; Stone v. United States, 164 U. S. 382, 41 L. ed. 478, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 218, 24 L. ed. 115; United States v. New York Indians, 173 U. S. 470, 43 L. ed. 771, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 547, 30 L. ed. 1002, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; Runkle v. Burnham, 153 U. S. 225, 38 L. ed. 697, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; Consolidated Canal Co. v. Mesa Canal Co. 177 U. S. 302, 44 L. ed. 779, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

A rule for the measure of damages which directs that, in case of breach of contract, the injured party shall receive from the defaulting party just what would have been received had there been no default, is a perfectly plain rule, which has no tendency to mislead anyone, and therefore did not mislead the auditor who stated the account.

Alder v. Keighley, 15 Mees. & W. 117; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; Benjamin v. Hillard, 23 How. 167, 16 L. ed. 522.

The reports of committees, made to the legislature, have been held to be proper sources of information in ascertaining the intent or meaning of an act.

Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 612, 9 L. ed. 1216; Ex parte Farley, 40 Fed. 69; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 495, 48 L. ed. 535, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 472, 40 L. ed. 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; 4 Ops. Atty. Gen. 479; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 495, 48 L. ed. 1090, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 19, 49 L. ed. 370, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158.

Assistant Attorney General Russell argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

If rights claimed under the government be set up against it, they must be so clearly defined that there can be no question of the purpose of Congress to confer them.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

It will be observed that the controversy in this case started in a contract of no uncertainty of meaning, and an ordinary action for damages for its breach, but has accumulated incidents and complexity, and has finally terminated in a dispute over an ambiguous statute.

*The case was submitted in the su-[131]preme court of the District upon what may be called a demurrer to the return, which was regarded, and is now regarded, as presenting the question of the power of the Secretary of the Treasury under the act of Congress. This is the ultimate question. If that officer had the power, which he asserts in his return, to review the evidence taken in the court of claims, and to "make such findings" as might "seem right and proper to him," the judgment of the court of appeals must be affirmed. As we may not control the Secretary's discretion (United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. ed. 1074, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698), we can have no concern with the reasoning advanced by him to support its exercise.

As we have seen, in the first suit brought by Parish, the court of claims decided against him. It based its decision on the ground that the Assistant Surgeon General had no "right to interpret the contract and decide that it called for 30,000 tons of ice, and direct how it should be delivered." The court, however, found the facts. It found as follows: "9. The said Parish was prepared and willing [italics ours] to deliver the said 30,000 tons of ice, in conformity with the conditions and obligations of his said contract and the terms of said letter of March 25, 1863, of which the defendant had notice, but they would not, nor did, receive more than the 12,768 tons aforesaid." This finding is quoted in the reports of the congressional committees as one of the elements inducing their recommendation of the passage of the bill.

This court disagreed with the court of claims upon the question of the authority of the Assistant Surgeon General, and reversed that court, but decided that the measure of Parish's damages was "the cost of ice purchased at Lake Pepin and lost, the expense bestowed upon its care, and the time and expense of making that purchase, and any sum actually lost in regard to the other 17,232 tons of ice purchased to enable them to meet the requirements." This ruling was based on the assumption that Parish "neither delivered nor offered to deliver the remainder."

132] *The court of claims, upon the return of the case to it, found obstruction in its rules to taking additional evidence, but, on that before it, made an award in favor of Parish in the sum of $10,444.91.

He was dissatisfied, and justly dissatisfied. He appealed to Congress, the petition alleges, and respondent does not deny the allegation, for "the means of satisfying so much of his claim as the court of last resort had adjudicated to be his unquestionable right." The petition further alleges (again with no denial by respondent) that his "claim was referred by the House committee to the War Department for report. The Surgeon General found that the whole amount of undelivered ice, viz., 17,232 tons, was lost to said Parish, and ascertained the cost thereof." Congress passed an act February 20, 1886, appropriating the sum of $58,341.85 to pay that loss. 24 Stat. at L. 653, 654, chap. 11. By the payment of the money appropriated, Parish received the contract price on the ice actually delivered, namely, 12,768 tons, and, in addition, what he had actually spent and actually lost on account of the balance, namely, 17,232 tons of ice. This is not denied, nor that that which was paid to him was only that which this court had decided should have been paid to him January 1, 1864. "That is to say," to quote from the petition, "the said Parish had not only lost the interest on this large sum of money for more than two decades, but had been forced to meet the expense of litigating the claim, and had been subjected to the labors and anxieties and trials of prosecuting the same."

The next step was the passage of the act in controversy; and we come to its consideration and the determination of how its ambiguity, if indeed it have any, is to be resolved. It had, we may say at the start of our discussion, its impulse in the belief that injury had been done to Parish, and it was intended to provide a means of redress. Keeping in view this purpose, we may get light by which to interpret the act.

As we have already said, the ruling of this court in Parish v. United States, 100 U. S. 500, 25 L. ed. 763, was based on the assumption that *Parish had "neither delivered nor offered to deliver" the 17,232 tons of ice, the nonacceptance of which has given rise to this controversy. Commenting on that declaration, the committees of Congress called it a "mistaken allegation" and a "false assumption," and said that the decision of the court turned upon it. The committees further said that the court "entirely overlooked" finding 9 of the court of claims, and that the "result of this oversight was to cause the court to lay down a rule of damages inconsistent with the facts and unjust to the parties." The committees then reviewed certain cases, among others, United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 338, 28 L. ed. 168, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81, and declared that the latter case established the prima facie measure of damages for a breach of a contract sustained by the injured party to consist of "two distinct items or grounds of damage; namely, first, what he has already expended toward performance, less the value of material on hand; secondly, the profits that he would realize by performing the whole contract." The report recognized that profits cannot always be recovered, that they may be remote and speculative, incapable of that clear and direct proof which the law requires. But it is manifest that the committees did not think the case called for that limitation, for it was said that the reasons for the application of the "equitable rules in the Behan Case were not nearly so clear and strong as in the Parish Case," and declared as follows:

"In the latter case the contract expressly provided what should be paid for the ice delivered at the various places named. The profits, therefore, were readily and easily ascertainable. In fact, that was the theory of the plaintiff in making his case before the court of claims, and the record of that court shows that the proofs on that point were explicit, bringing the case properly within the principles laid down in Behan v. United States.

"In a word, it is perfectly clear that the supreme court quite overlooked one of the most important findings of fact in the Parish Case. At all events, there is no doubt that the law *is properly stated in the [134 Behan Case. And all the present bill contemplates is a final and proper settlement on the rule of law which is older than our republic, and is everywhere recognized as the only equitable one that can be applied in the premises."

It is manifest, therefore, that the act was passed under the conviction that Parish had rights which had not been satisfied; and we are brought to the consideration of the act as the means of satisfying them.

The act provides "that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to make full and complete examination into the claim of Joseph W. Parish against the United States for balances alleged to be due him by virtue of a contract made by J. W. Parish & Company with Henry Johnson, medical storekeeper, acting on behalf of the United States. . . . That the Secretary shall determine and ascertain the full amount which should have been paid said J. W. Parish & Company, if the said contract had been carried out in full, without change or default made by either of the parties thereto [italics ours] under the rule of the measure of damages laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the United States v. Behan, supra, and in accordance with the evidence in the case, collected by the United States court of claims [italics ours], and after determining the full amount thus due, . . . under the said contract and rule of law aforesaid, to deduct therefrom all payments . . . stating what balance, if any, is due under the rule and evidence prescribed herein, and pay the said balance to said Joseph W. Parish, the present owner of said claim; and sufficient money to pay such balance is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury which has not been otherwise appropriated." 32 Stat. at L. 1612, chap. 559.

The issue between the parties in their ultimate statement is as follows: Relator contends, that the Secretary was directed to ascertain what amount Parish should receive under the contract, "which he was ready, able, and willing to carry out." Respondent contends that the Secretary was [135] to pass on the *evidence taken in the court of claims, and make such finding as might seem right and proper to him. In other words, to exercise judgment and discretion.

To sustain their respective contentions the parties do not urge the same words as the tests of the meaning of the statute. The relator, to determine the Secretary's duty, puts emphasis on the provision that he was to ascertain the "full amount which should have been paid . . . if the contract had been carried out in full, without change or default made by either of the parties thereto." Respondent finds difficulty with that provision, and says that "at first glance" it "may look positive and arbitrary." But it is urged that the clause "does not say which would have been paid, but which 'should' have been paid; and when we turn to the 'contract' an ambiguity immediately arises, because the contract, 'carried out in full,' did not call for any particular quantity of ice." And to remove the effect of the certainty in the quantity of ice required, made by the order for 30,000 tons, it is said that the "special act nowhere speaks of this order, but only of the contract." The final comment is that "no other clause of the act seems to be worth quoting as an unambiguous order to make an arbitrary calculation and allowance," while the act "in places unequivocally requires something different from an arbitrary calculation." To support this it is urged that the act directs a full and complete examination of Parish's claim for a balance alleged to be due him by virtue of the contract. To do this, it is argued, "would require as much judgment and discretion as the Secretary could muster." A striking contrast is exhibited to this by declaring that the duty required of the Secretary under relator's contention was "to do a sum in arithmetic which any school-boy could do in five minutes; that is, multiply the prices per ton with the 30,000 tons, and deduct the amount already paid, as per receipts on file in the Treasury."

It is elementary that all the words of the statute must be considered in determining its meaning, and we may not *there-[136] fore, disregard the provision of the statute which directs the Secretary to determine and ascertain the full amount which should have been paid if the said contract had been carried out in full, without change or default made by either of the parties. And it seems to us that these words express the subject of inquiry, the exact command to the Secretary to which the other provisions of the statute are subordinate. He was not to determine if Parish was in default. That inquiry was precluded. It had been adjudged otherwise by the court of claims and by this court. It had been declared otherwise by the legislature. The act of Congress of February 20, 1886, passed to complete the judgments of the courts, appropriated the sum of $58,341,85, "being the balance of money laid out and expended by him [Parish] in the purchase of 17,232 tons of ice, for the use and at the request of the government of the United States, which were not afterwards called for, . . . but were wholly lost to said Parish" (the italics ours).

The following things, therefore, had been determined: The existence of a contract for the delivery of ice, quantity not mentioned, at different points and at different prices. The quantity was afterwards fixed at 30,000 tons, and the contract made specific in every particular,—quantity, quality, places of delivery, and prices. Performance was undertaken and 12,768 tons delivered. Then came the order of suspension,—not revocation, it must be kept in mind,—and Parish had to keep prepared. He was not permitted to fulfil his contract, he dared not be unprepared to do so upon any notice. This court, in Parish v. United States, supra, has portrayed the situation. The demand upon him was “an unequivocal demand,” the court said, for 30,000 tons, and “to enable him to fulfil this demand . . . required promptitude and diligence in securing the ice.” The court states why. A moment’s reflection on the situation shows us why. The ice was needed for the use of the armies in the field. It might be demanded at any time. The necessity for it might be imperative. If Parish could not have supplied it, this court said, the officers of the *government would have procured at any price in the market,—a price which would have been enormously enhanced by that very demand,—and Parish would have been liable for the difference between such price and the contract price. He was, therefore, this court said, “under an imperative necessity to prepare to fulfil this requirement.” He realized his situation, and that he prepared against its contingencies was the finding of the court of claims, it was the declaration of Congress in the act of February 20, 1886, and it was the repeated declaration of the committees of Congress in their recommendation of the passage of the act in controversy. We see now the reason for regarding the opening clause of the act as its principal and dominating clause. We see now why his readiness to perform, the possession of the means of performance, and the offer of performance, were to be assumed by the Secretary, and the loss of profits only was to be determined. And the profits, the committees said, “were readily and easily ascertainable.” Indeed, because they were, their calculation was referred to an executive officer. If to ascertain them involved an intricate judicial problem, the reference would have been to the judicial tribunals, for we cannot agree with the intimation of the government, that Congress would imagine that the court of claims and this court were unable “to master the difficulties” of that problem. The better supposition is that Congress regarded the controversy as over, and that the time for reparation had arrived, and, that it might be quick and complete, referred the matter to that officer who could best state the balance due and pay it.

It does not militate with this conclusion that the duty enjoined was simple. The committees of Congress believed it to be so, believed that the extent of relief to which Parish was entitled and the items of it had been established. The act in controversy was the expression of that belief. Its purpose was relief shown to be due from a problem already solved—not to start another problem. The duty enjoined required a reference in a sense to evidence, it may be, but it was to evidence *whose probative[138 force had been estimated and declared. It conduced to but one conclusion. That conclusion was stated by the Auditor of the War Department, following the direction of the statute, to be a balance in Parish’s favor of $181,358.95. This amount represented the amount that Parish should have received over and above what he was paid by direct payment, judgment, or appropriation by Congress, and the balance due him under the rule in the Behan Case.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed, and that court is directed to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court, and direct the latter court to sustain the demurrer of relator to the return of respondent, and enter judgment as prayed for in the petition of relator.

Mr. Justice Moody took no part in the decision.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ALICE BROOKE.

(See S. C. Reporter’s ed. 138-152.)

Certiorari — return — waiver of defects.

1. Technical defects in the return of municipal officers in a proceeding by certiorari to quash an alleged illegal drainage tax assessment are waived by failure to object

NOTE. — As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumpston, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304. And see notes to People v. O’Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

when the return to the rule to show cause was made the return to the writ.

[For other cases, see Certiorari, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Drainage tax — validity — sufficiency of existing drainage as defense.

2. An abutting owner cannot urge against the validity of a drainage tax assessment for connecting her property with a sewer that no showing was made that any nuisance existed on her property, or that the means of drainage already there were unsanitary or insufficient, or that any necessity existed for making the connection.

[For other cases, see Public Improvements, II. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes who may question validity.

3. An abutting owner of property on which dwellings have been erected cannot challenge the validity of a provision in the act of May 9, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 125, p. 206), creating a drainage system in the District of Columbia, which affects only owners of unimproved property.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 53-60, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — drainage tax.

4. Due process of law is not denied an abutting owner of property on which dwellings have been erected by the attempt, in the act of May 19, 1896, creating a drainage system in the District of Columbia, under which she is assessed for the expense of connecting her property with a sewer, to give a controlling evidential effect to the existence of such improvements as dwellings, as indicating the necessity for making such connection.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 559-581, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — discrimination between residents and nonresidents.

5. The distinction between resident and nonresident owners of abutting property in the act of May 19, 1896, creating a drainage system for the District of Columbia, in that the coercion of the law as to making connections with a sewer is by criminal punishment in the case of residents, whereas, against nonresident owners, the District does the work in case of their neglect, and assesses the cost against the property as a tax, does not invalidate the statute for discrimination, even assuming that Congress is forbidden to enact discriminating legislation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 213-236, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 117.]

Argued April 7, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, quashing, on certiorari, an assessment for a drainage tax. Reversed with directions to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, and to dismiss the petition.

See same case below, 29 App. D. C. 563.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This writ was issued to review a judgment of the court of appeals, affirming a judgment of the supreme court, quashing *and vacating certain proceedings tak-[140] en for the assessment of a drainage tax upon the property of defendant in error, under the authority of an act of Congress of May 19, 1896,—“As Act to Provide for the Drainage of Lots in the District of Columbia.” 29 Stat. at L. 125, chap. 206.

The act provides (1) that each original lot or subdivisional lot in the District of Columbia, where there is a public sewer, shall be connected with such sewer, and where there is a water main, connected with such water main, under certain conditions, which are enumerated. (2) It is made the duty of the commissioners of the District to notify the owner or owners of every lot required by the act to be connected with a public sewer or water main, as the case may be, to so connect such lot, the work to be done in accordance with the regulations governing plumbing and house drainage in the District. (3) If the owner or owners neglect for thirty days after receipt of notice to make such connections, he shall or they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by a fine of not less than $1 nor more than $5 for each day of neglect. (4) If the owner be a nonresident of the District, or cannot be found therein, the commissioners shall give notice by publication twice a week, for two weeks, in some newspaper published in the city of Washington, to such owners, directing the connection of such lot with such sewer or such water main, as the case may be: “Provided, however, that, if the residence or place of abode of the said nonresident lot owner be known or can be ascertained on reasonable inquiry, then, and in that case, a copy of the aforesaid notice shall be mailed to said nonresident, addressed to him in his proper name, at his said place of residence or abode with legal postage prepaid; and in case such owner or owners shall fail or neglect to comply with the notice aforesaid within thirty days, it shall be the duty of said commissioners to cause such connection to be made, the expense to be paid out of the emergency fund; such expense, with necessary expense of advertisement, shall be assessed as a tax against such lot, which tax shall be carried on the regular tax *roll of the [141] District of Columbia, and shall be collected in the manner provided for the collection of other taxes.”

The petition of defendant in error for certiorari alleges that she is a resident of Maryland, and was owner of the property against which the assessment was made at the time the connections were made by the commissioners. She alleges that the assessment or tax is illegal in its entirety and beyond the power of the respondent (the District) to collect, in this, that the respondent had no jurisdiction of her property, "the said act of Congress being," she further alleges, "unconstitutional and void, because it discriminates between owners of real estate in said District; the said act not being uniform and capable of universal enforcement." She also alleges that the assessment or tax is void in its entirety because the provisions of the 4th section of the act were not complied with in certain particulars which were set out. We do not give them, because two only are relied on; to wit, that the record does not show that notice was mailed to her, as provided by § 4, and that the record fails to disclose that any nuisance existed on her property, or that the means of drainage already there were unsanitary or unsufficient.

A rule to show cause was issued, to which the District made return. The return was verified by the commissioners. It denied some of the allegations of the petition, averred the constitutionality of the act, and that due and legal proceedings were taken thereunder in making the connections and assessing the tax, including notice to petitioner. To the return were attached, to use the language of the court of appeals, "copies of such pertinent official papers and records as were in the custody of the District."

The writ was ordered to be granted. The return to the rule was made the return to the writ. Subsequently, the court, reciting that the cause having been argued by counsel, and submitted to the court on the writ of certiorari, and the return thereto filed herein by respondent, adjudged the tax to be "illegal and void," and that it should 142] be "quashed and held *for naught." The respondent was "forthwith directed to cancel the same on its tax records."

The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. 29 App. D. C. 563.

Mr. Francis H. Stephens argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edward H. Thomas, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The legislation in question in the present case is that of the Congress of the United States, and must be considered in the light of the conclusion, so often announced by this court, that the United States possess complete jurisdiction, both of a political 53 L. ed.

and municipal nature, over the District of Columbia.

Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 53, 42 L. ed. 946, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 619, 9 L. ed. 1218; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098.

In the exercise of this power, Congress, like any state legislature, unrestricted by constitutional provisions, may, at its discretion, wholly exempt certain classes of property from taxation, or may tax them at a lower rate than other property.

Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 116 U. S. 407, 29 L. ed. 681, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

The fact that the mode prescribed for the nonresident may be more inconvenient than that prescribed for the resident is not because the statute intends to make a discrimination, but because of the situation of the parties, and because, in the judgment of the lawmaking power, no other way could be adopted that would be as effective for the protection of the public.

McFadden v. Blocker, 3 Ind. Terr. 224, 58 L.R.A. 898, 54 S. W. 873.

Even where personal liberty was involved, a similar statute was held constitutional.

Frost v. Brisbin, 19 Wend. 11, 32 Am. Dec. 423; Howard v. Citizens' Bank & T. Co. 12 App. D. C. 235; Robinson v. Morrison, 2 App. D. C. 128.

The discrimination in the act is neither unreasonable nor unjust.

Central Loan & T. Co. v. Campbell Commission Co. 173 U. S. 84, 43 L. ed. 623, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Taylor v. Crawford, 72 Ohio St. 560, 69 L.R.A. 805, 74 N. E. 1065; Allen v. Wyckoff, 48 N. J. L. 90, 57 Am. Rep. 548, 2 Atl. 659; Campbell v. Morris, 3 Harr. & McH. 535; Chemung Canal Bank v. Lowery, 93 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 806; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 621, 622, 48 L. ed. 1142, 1153, 1154, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Savannah, 198 U. S. 392, 49 L. ed. 1097, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Hawley v. Hurd, 72 Vt. 122, 52 L.R.A. 195, 82 Am. St. Rep. 922, 47 Atl. 401; McFadden v. Blocker, supra; Tatem v. Wright, 23 N. J. L. 429; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Com. 5 Bush, 79, 96 Am. Dec. 331; Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 1 Woods, 85, Fed. Cas. No. 7,052; State v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 73 Conn. 255, 57 L.R.A. 481, 47 Atl. 299; Cribbs v. Benedict, 64 Ark. 555, 44 S. W. 707; 8 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 1038, 1047, 1048, 1073; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 80; Com. v. Holliday, 98 Ky. 616, 33 S. W. 943; Allen v. Wyckoff, supra.

There is no unlawful discrimination in the remedy which may be used to enforce the doing of the work prescribed by the act. All owners may be required to do such work.

Carleton v. Rugg, 149 Mass. 550, 5 L.R.A. 193, 14 Am. St. Rep. 446, 22 N. E. 55; Pine City v. Munch, 42 Minn. 342, 6 L.R.A. 763, 44 N. W. 197; McBride v. Ross, 13 App. D. C. 576; Guerin v. Macfarland, 27 App. D. C. 478; 1 Dill Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 379, p. 384; Watertown v. Cowen, 4 Paige, 510, 27 Am. Dec. 80.

Even in the exercise of the taxing power, which the courts construe more strictly, a wide latitude is observed and upheld by the courts.

Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 1039, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Columbus Southern R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 470, 478, 38 L. ed. 238, 242, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; L'Hote v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 587, 44 L. ed. 899, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Petit v. Minnesota, 177 U. S. 164, 44 L. ed. 716, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; St. John v. New York, 201 U. S. 633, 50 L. ed. 896, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 909; Taggart v. Claypool, 145 Ind. 590, 32 L.R.A. 586, 44 N. E. 18; McFadden v. Blocker, supra.

The owner cannot remain silent while work is being done of which he has notice, and then, after it is completed and his property benefited, be heard to complain that the proceedings are illegal.

Cass County v. Plotner, 149 Ind. 119, 48 N. E. 635; 2 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 1515; Kellogg v. Ely, 15 Ohio St. 64; Vickery v. Hendricks County, 134 Ind. 554, 32 N. E. 880; McCoy v. Able, 131 Ind. 417, 30 N. E. 528, 31 N. E. 453; Ross v. Stackhouse, 114 Ind. 200, 16 N. E. 501; State, Hampson, Prosecutor, v. Paterson, 36 N. J. L. 162; State, Youngster, Prosecutor, v. Paterson, 40 N. J. L. 246.

Mr. John Ridout argued the cause, and, with Mr. George C. Gertman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The record is fatally defective.

District of Columbia v. Burgdorf, 6 App. D. C. 470; Keyser v. District of Columbia, 3 App. D. C. 31; Allman v. District of Columbia, 3 App. D. C. 8; Johnson v. District of Columbia, 6 Mackey, 21; Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 32 L. ed. 899, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1204; 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. pp. 11, 12, 277, 282, 287, 290; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 804, 822, 9 Century Dig. § 145, p. 1891.

The act is unconstitutional and void.

McGuire v. District of Columbia, 24 App. D. C. 22, 65 L.R.A. 430; Heylman v. District of Columbia, 27 App. D. C. 563.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Defendant in error, to sustain her contention that the record does not show notice to her of the proposed work, says that it shows only that a "parcel" was mailed to her, not a letter, and that the contents of the parcel are not disclosed. To the extreme technicality of this contention the court of appeals answered that no objection was made to the return, and that it averred that the officers and agents of the District made diligent search for defendant in error in the District, and that she could not be found there, and that plaintiff in error believed that she was a citizen and resident of the state of Maryland. The court also pointed out that the return alleged that notice was given to her by publication, as required by the act of Congress, and by registered letter, postage prepaid, which was received by her. A registry return receipt, with her signature attached thereto, was made part of the return. Commenting on this, the court said that, if there was a defect in the return, it was purely technical, and could have been corrected. "Upon the granting of the writ," the court observed, "had objection been made to the adoption by the commissioners of their preliminary return, the court undoubtedly would have permitted an amendment to the record for the purpose of supplying the defects now complained of by petitioner [defendant in error here]. Having, then, made no objection to the form of the return, it is too late to do so now." If we could concede that the record justifies the distinction made by defendant in error between a parcel and a letter, we should adopt without hesitation the reply made by the court *of appeals to the contention based on that distinction, or upon any defect in the return which could have been removed if objection had been seasonably made.

The second contention of defendant in error is that the record fails to disclose that any nuisance existed on her property, or that the means of drainage already there was unsanitary or insufficient, or that any necessity existed for making the connection. This contention seems to be made in this court for the first time. It certainly received no notice from the court of appeals, and the fact that it assumes that there was means of drainage on defendant in error's lot is not alleged in her petition. But, suppose the fact had been alleged; a property owner cannot urge against the drainage system of the District that he had adopted a system of his own, and, challenge a comparison with that of the District, and obey or disobey the law according to the result of the comparison. The contention virtually denies any power in Congress to create a system of drainage to which a lot owner must conform.

Finally, defendant in error attacks the validity of the law, and bases attack, to use her words, "upon certain salient vices in the act which are apparent on its face, of which the principal are—

"(a) The attempt to give controlling evidential effect to the mere existence of an improvement in case of improved property, and to the ex parte certificate of the health officer in the case of unimproved property, thus violating the 'due process' clause of the Constitution.

"(b) Because the act lacks the requisite uniformity, inasmuch as it undertakes to provide one law for property of residents and another for property of nonresident owners in said District.

"(c) Because the act is not capable of universal enforcement, and creates unequal burdens.

"(d) Because the act is incapable of uniform enforcement as against all property in the District of Columbia."

The first objection was not expressed in 149]the petition nor *made in the lower courts, and we might therefore decline to entertain it. At best, defendant in error can only be heard against "the evidential effect of the mere existence of an improvement," because her property does not come within the category of unimproved property. Her improvements are dwelling houses, and their mere existence indicated the necessity for drainage. That they may sometimes be vacant is unimportant. What rights owners of lots differently improved or owners of unimproved property may have is no concern of defendant in error. Her contention, therefore, that the act deprives her of due process of law, is unsound.

The other objections expressed the same fundamental idea; to wit, that the act discriminates between resident and nonresident owners of property, and, because it does, it is void. The court of appeals yielded to this contention, following the authority of McGuire v. District of Columbia, 24 App. D. C. 22, 65 L.R.A. 430.

The defendant in error asserts this discrimination and argues its consequences at some length, but does not refer to any provision of the Constitution of the United States which prohibits Congress from enacting laws which discriminate in their operation between persons or things. If there is no express prohibition of such power, may prohibition be implied from our form of government? Upon that proposition we need not express an opinion. If prohibition exists, it must rest on all the powers conferred by the Constitution. This court, however, has just held, in the case of United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, ante, 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, that Congress may, in the exercise of the powers to regulate commerce among the states, discriminate between commodities and between carriers engaged in such commerce. And it was said that the assertion that "injustice and favoritism" might "be operated thereby," could "have no weight in passing upon the question of power." In the case at bar we are dealing with an exercise of the police power,—one of the most essential of powers, at times the most insistent, and always one of the least limitable of the powers of government.

*However, the question of the power[150 of Congress, broadly considered, to discriminate in its legislation, is not necessary to decide, for, whether such power is expressly or impliedly prohibited, the prohibition cannot be stricter or more extensive than the 14th Amendment is upon the states. That amendment is unqualified in its declaration that a state shall not "deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Passing on that amendment, we have repeatedly decided—so often that a citation of the cases is unnecessary—that it does not take from the states the power of classification. And also that such classification need not be either logically appropriate or scientifically accurate. The problems which are met in the government of human beings are different from those involved in the examination of the objects of the physical world, and assigning them to their proper associates. A wide range of discretion, therefore, is necessary in legislation to make it practical, and we have often said that the courts cannot be made a refuge from ill-advised, unjust, or oppressive laws. Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 47 L. ed. 400, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114. In the light of these principles the contentions of defendant in error must be judged. The act in controversy makes a distinction in its provision between resident and nonresident lot owners, but this is a proper basis for classification. Regarded abstractly as human beings, regarded abstractly as lot owners, no legal difference may be observed between residents and nonresidents; but, regarded in their relation to their respective lots under regulating laws, the limitations upon jurisdiction, and the power to reach one and not the other, important differences immediately appear. We said in St. John v. New York, 201 U. S. at page 637, 50 L. ed. 898, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, not only the purpose of a law must be considered, but the means of its administration,—the ways it may be defeated. Legislation, to be practical and efficient, must regard this special purpose as well as the ultimate purpose. This was in effect repeated in Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784, where a privilege to protest [151]*against a street improvement, given by the statute assailed to resident property owners and denied to nonresident property owners, was sustained, and the statute held not to violate the equality clause of the 14th Amendment. See Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 L. ed. 949, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

It is not contended that the act of Congress is not impartial within the classes. The act treats all resident lot owners alike and all nonresidents alike. It is contended that there is a difference in the procedure prescribed in case of default, and nonresident lot owners are thereby discriminated against, though they stand in the same relation to the purpose of the law as resident lot owners. In other words, nonresident lot owners are not treated the same as resident owners in like situation, because against resident owners the coercion of the law is by criminal punishment, while against nonresident owners the remedy is by civil proceedings,—the District does the work that the nonresident owners neglect, and charges the expense thereof on their property. This is a distinction, a discrimination, it may be called, but it has even more justification than that sustained in Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. supra. The statute under consideration in the case at bar enjoins a duty on both resident and nonresident lot owners,—a duty necessary to be followed to preserve the health of the city. There is a difference only in the manner of enforcing it,—a difference arising from the different situation of the lot owners, and therefore competent for Congress to regard in its legislation. In other words, under the circumstances presented by this record, the distinction between residents and nonresidents is a proper basis for classification. It might not be under other circumstances. Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Blake v. McClung, 176 U. S. 59, 44 L. ed. 371, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Sully v. Ameri- can Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

That the remedy in the statute under consideration against nonresident owners may be more efficient—more completely fulfil the purpose of the law—than that against resident owners, is beside the question. Indeed, the fact may be disputed. Usually the most emphatic and efficient enforcement *of a law is through crimina-[152]l prosecution. At any rate, it is hard to believe that there will be many resident lot owners whose delinquency under the statute will be so resolute that it will stand against repeated charges of crime and the consequent penalties. But, be that as it may, it was for Congress to decide whether such possibility should be risked rather than incur the greater possibility of more delinquents in so numerous a class as resident lot owners if the District was to first bear the expense of the drainage, and collect it afterward by civil proceedings.

Other criticisms are made of the law to display what is alleged to be its lack of uniformity. For instance, a supposition is made of tenants in common, some of whom are residents and the others nonresidents, and the possible difficulties that may arise from such ownership under the act; and it is asked if the property belongs to resident minors or insane persons, or persons under legal disabilities, can the act be enforced against them or against their property? To these suppositions and questions we answer that it will be time enough to reply when a case arises in which they are presented, and to determine then the operation of the act upon the persons enumerated.

Judgment reversed with directions to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court, quashing the tax, and to dismiss the petition.

Mr. Justice White did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision.

*TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY[153] COMPANY and J. M. Tucker, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

EASTIN & KNOX, a Firm Composed of S. W. Eastin and D. L. Knox, and St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 153-160.)

Removal of causes — case involving Federal question — joint action.

1. An action brought jointly against a corporation chartered under an act of Congress and a local defendant, upon a joint liability, is a suit arising under the laws of the United States, and, as such, is removable from a state court to a Federal circuit court on petition of both defendants.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, 216a-221, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Removal of causes — determination of right of removal.

2. The state courts have no jurisdiction to pass finally upon the facts stated in a petition for the removal of a cause from a state to a Federal circuit court, which show a cause properly removable, since that is the exclusive province of the Federal court.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, 287-293, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Removal of causes — further proceedings in state courts — waiver.

3. The right of a Federal corporation, when sued in a state court, to remove the cause to a Federal circuit court, as being one arising under the Federal laws, is lost by its action in bringing into the suit a cause of action against another corporation, with which the plaintiff has no concern, and recovering judgment therein.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, 462-469, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 177.]

Argued April 23, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas to review a judgment which, on a second writ of error, affirmed a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals, in that state, for the Second Judicial District, affirming a judgment of the District Court of Parker County, in favor of plaintiffs in an action against a corporation created by act of Congress, in which a petition to remove the cause to a Federal circuit court was denied. Affirmed.

See same case below, 100 Tex. 556, 102 S. W. 105.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This action was instituted by defendant in error against plaintiff in error, the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, hereinafter called the Texas & Pacific Company, and J. M. Tucker, its agent, for wrongfully billing and shipping 712 head of cows and calves via one road, though they were requested to be shipped via another, whereby they were required to go twice as far, and were seriously injured and damaged thereby.

NOTE. — On removal of causes where the Federal Constitution, statute, or treaty comes in question—see notes to Little York Gold Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 24 L. ed. U. S. 656; Ferguson v. Ross, 3 L.R.A. 322; Austin v. Gagan, 5 L.R.A. 476; Butler v. National Home, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

On the waiver of right to remove a cause to a Federal court—see note to Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. Southern R. Co. 66 C. C. A. 612.

53 L. ed.

It is alleged in the original petition that plaintiffs in the action, defendants here, were residents of the county of Jack, state of Texas; that Tucker resided in the county of Palo Pinto in said state, and that the Texas & Pacific Company "is a body corporate, duly incorporated under the Federal statutes, with an office and station in the counties of Palo Pinto and Parker, in the state of Texas."

*The Texas & Pacific Company filed [154 an answer, and, at the same time, filed a petition and bond to remove the cause to the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Texas, sitting at Fort Worth. The petition alleged as the ground of removal that Tucker was improperly and wrongfully joined with the company for the sole and only purpose of preventing it from removing the cause to the United States circuit court. That the suit against the company was a suit arising under the laws of the United States, and more especially under the law of the United States constituting the charter of the company, under which it was incorporated. Tucker adopted the statements of the petition and joined in the application for removal. The application was denied, and an exception was entered to the ruling. The Texas & Pacific Company, protesting against the right of the court to hear and determine the suit, filed its amended original answer, among other defenses alleging that "it carried and delivered the cattle to Paris, Texas, safely and carefully on reasonable time," and further alleging that the St. Louis & San Francisco Company was duly incorporated and operated its line of railway in Lamar county, Texas, and had a local agent at Paris, and that most of the damage complained of by plaintiff (defendant in error) occurred on the line of that road. The Texas & Pacific Company asked that the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company be made a party defendant, and that citation be served on it; that it be required to answer in the cause, and that, if plaintiff should recover against the Texas & Pacific Company, the latter have judgment against the St. Louis & San Francisco Company for all such damages as were caused by it.

Subsequently, a second amended original answer was filed by the Texas & Pacific Company, in which it enlarged its defenses, and, in what it called a "special and separate answer," averred its careful transportation of the cattle, and again averred the negligence of the St. Louis & San Francisco Company, and that, but for such negligence, the damages of *which plaintiffs com-[155 plain would not have occurred. The prayer of the answer was as follows:

"Wherefore, this defendant prays that citation be issued to the said St. Louis &

San Francisco Railroad Company, by service upon its local agent herein aforesaid, as the law directs, and that upon hearing hereof that the damages and injuries sustained by plaintiffs in the shipment of said cattle be, according to law, apportioned between the defendant and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, and that this defendant be held liable only for such damages as occurred to said cattle while the same were in its possession, and that such damages and injuries as accrued to said cattle while same were in the possession of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company and its connecting carriers be charged to it. But, if this defendant be mistaken in this, then it prays that, upon hearing hereof, that it have judgment over and against the said St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company for the full amount of any judgment that may be rendered against this defendant upon the trial hereof, and that it recover its costs in this behalf expended, as it will ever pray, etc., and for such general and special relief in law or equity as it may be entitled to under the law and the facts."

A citation was issued in accordance with this prayer, and the St. Louis & San Francisco Company was summoned to appear "to answer the said amended answer of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, filed as aforesaid on the 7th day of April, A. D. 1904." The citation was duly served, together with certified copies of plaintiff's original petition and the amended answer of the Texas & Pacific Company, as directed by the citation. The St. Louis & San Francisco Company appeared in the action. In what is called its first amended original answer it demurred "generally to the answer and cross action" of the Texas & Pacific Company, on the ground that the same failed to show a cause of action. The answer also denied all the allegations of the "said pleadings of the Texas & Pacific Company," set up other defenses, and alleged that, if the cattle were damaged by delay in shipment, "that the fault or liability" was that "of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company in not routing said cattle as requested by the plaintiffs and as demanded by the exigencies of the shipment," and "prayed to be hence dismissed with its costs." The issue thus made up was tried by the court, and resulted in a judgment against the Texas & Pacific Company and Tucker for $3,600, and a judgment against the St. Louis & San Francisco Company in favor of the Texas & Pacific Company for $1,800. All the defendants appealed to the court of civil appeals for the second judicial district, sitting at Fort Worth. That court reversed the decision, and remanded the case holding that the trial court erred in overruling the application for removal, and entertaining jurisdiction of the case. A motion for rehearing was made and denied, and the plaintiffs (defendants in error here) applied to the supreme court of Texas for a writ of error, which was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, but was, on motion for rehearing, granted, and, on the 2d of May, 1906, the supreme court reversed the court of civil appeals, deciding that the case was not removable, and remanded the case for decision on the other questions.

On the return of the case to the court of civil appeals, that court, on the 16th of June, 1906, affirmed the judgment of the district court. A motion for rehearing was denied, and, on writ of error to the supreme court, the latter court affirmed the judgment of the court of civil appeals.

Messrs. W. L. Hall, and Rush Taggart argued the cause, and, with Mr. John F. Dillon, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The Texas & Pacific Railway Company, being a corporation chartered under an act of Congress, when sued alone in the state court for an amount exceeding $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs, has the right to remove the cause to the Federal court; and, when sued with a local defendant, to establish a joint liability of all defendants, it is a suit arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and, if all defendants join in the application to remove, the cause should be removed to the United States court.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Smith v. Union P. R. Co. 2 Dill. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 13,121; Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 22, 29 L. ed. 319, 326, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 1132, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, ante, 558, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 145; New York v. Independent S. B. Co. 21 Fed. 593; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Martin, 178 U. S. 245, 44 L. ed. 1055, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854.

Where the facts presented in a petition for removal show a cause of action properly removable from a state to a Federal court, the state court must take the facts as stated in the record and petition, and has no jurisdiction to pass upon any such questions. The right to pass upon the issues of fact made by the petition for removal is one for the Federal court, it having the exclusive province of passing upon such questions of facts.

Black's Dillon, Removal of Causes, § 191; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S.

5, 26 L. ed. 643; Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 513, 30 L. ed. 1159, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1262; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 298, 34 L. ed. 963, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Upon the filing of the petition and bond for removal in this cause the state court lost jurisdiction of the case. The subsequent defense in that court by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company in no way affected the result of the filing of its petition and bond for removal.

Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. ed. 673, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 27 L. ed. 87, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Koontz, supra; New Orleans, M. & F. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 26 L. ed. 96; Kern v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 485, 26 L. ed. 354; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Dunn, 19 Wall. 214, 22 L. ed. 68.

Mr. Thomas D. Sporer argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. C. McClure, filed a brief for defendants in error:

It is a familiar doctrine that a corporation possessing a Federal charter can sue in the Federal circuit court (Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204), and also, that it has been extended so that, if such a corporation is sued in a state court alone, it can remove the case to the Federal court (Pacific R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 319, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1113).

But it was not supposed that the doctrine would be still further extended, to allow such a corporation to remove a case to the Federal court where it was sued jointly with one who had no right dependent on the Constitution or a Federal law, and who had no right to remove.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Martin, 178 U. S. 245, 44 L. ed. 1055, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854.

While Congress may have intended to allow the removal of a suit when the very foundation of the suit was a Federal law, it did not intend to authorize a removal where the cause of action depended solely on a law of the state, and the Federal law came in only incidentally.

New Orleans, M. & F. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 26 L. ed. 96.

This is also in accord with the general principles so often enunciated by this court, that a substantial dispute as to the construction of the Constitution or laws is essential.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 243, 244, 44 L. ed. 1053, 1054, 53 L. ed.

20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 38 L. ed. 764, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 203, 24 L. ed. 656, 658; California Oil & Gas Co. v. Miller, 96 Fed. 16.

The plaintiff in error, after filing its petition and bond for removal, waived its right to remove by voluntarily appearing in the state court, and filing its answer, by which it voluntarily impleaded and made the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company a party defendant in the suit below, and sought to recover a judgment over against it, as this latter proceeding was an affirmative action on its own part, by which it elected to retain defendants in error in the state court, not for the purpose of defending itself, but to have the matter litigated, and, at the same time, to prosecute its rights and enforce them by obtaining a judgment of the state court against a party whom defendants in error had not sued.

Chicago, I. & N. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 29 Fed. 341; Hudson River R. & Terminal Co. v. Day, 54 Fed. 545; Case v. Olney, 106 Fed. 433; First Nat. Bank v. Conway, 67 Wis. 210, 30 N. W. 215; West Virginia v. King, 112 Fed. 369; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Smith, 13 Blatchf. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 6,035; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 502, 30 L. ed. 482, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301.

In analogous cases, the courts of Texas have uniformly held that a plea of personal privilege could be waived, and was waived when the defendant sought, by plea of reconvention, affirmative relief against the plaintiff, or by cross bill introduced a new party into the suit, and sought to recover against him, independently of the plaintiff's cause of action; and that the jurisdiction of the court attached.

Douglas v. Baker, 79 Tex. 505, 15 S. W. 801; Slator v. Trostel (Tex. Civ. App.) 21 S. W. 285; Benchoff v. Stephenson (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 106.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the facts as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The assignments of error present the question of the right of the Texas & Pacific Company to a removal of the case to the circuit court of the United States (1) Because, being a corporation chartered under an act of Congress, the suit was one arising under the laws of the United States, and that this character was not taken from it by joining a local defendant when it was an action to establish a joint liability. (2) Where the facts stated in the petition for removal show a cause properly removable from a state to a Federal court, the state court has no jurisdiction to pass finally upon them; that right is one for the Federal court, it having exclusive province of passing upon such questions of fact.

159] *The first proposition is sustained in Re Dunn, 212 U. S. 374, ante, 558, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; the second proposition is sustained in Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCabe, 213 U. S. 207, ante, 765, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430. The latter case also decides that, if an application for removal be denied, the petitioner loses no right by being compelled to stay in the state court. In other words, that the petitioner may stay in the state court and defend the action against him, and, if the judgment go against him, bring the case to this court, and have the question of removal determined. But plaintiffs in error did not defend only against the cause of action. They instituted a cause of action against the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, in which the defendant in error had no concern, and recovered a judgment against that company in the sum of $1,800. By doing so they invoked the jurisdiction of the state court on their own account and for their own purpose, and the case is brought within the ruling in Merchants' Heat & Light Co. v. J. B. Clow & Sons, 204 U. S. 286, 51 L. ed. 488, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 285.

The single question in this court in that case was the jurisdiction of the circuit court from which the case came. The Merchants Heat & Light Company, an Indiana corporation, contended that no jurisdiction had been obtained over it by the service which was made upon one Schodd, who, it was asserted by the plaintiff in the action, was an agent of the company. A motion to quash the return of service was made and overruled, and thereupon the company, after excepting, appeared as ordered and pleaded the general issue, and also a recoupment or set-off of damages under the same contract sued upon, and overcharges in excess of the amount ultimately found due to the plaintiff. There was a finding for the plaintiff of $9,082.21.

Whether the company was doing business in the state of Illinois within the meaning of the statutes of that state under which service was made, this court did not decide; but it did decide that the company, "by setting up its counterclaim . . . became a plaintiff in its turn, invoked 160] the jurisdiction of the *court in the same action, and, by invoking, submitted to it." And this, notwithstanding the counterclaim arose, as it was said, "out of the same transaction that the plaintiff sued upon, and so to have been in recoupment rather than in set-off proper." It was further said: "There is some difference in the decisions as to when a defendant becomes so far an actor as to submit to the jurisdiction, but we are aware of none as to the proposition that when he does become an actor in a proper sense he submits." And the Texas & Pacific Company was an actor against the St. Louis & San Francisco Company upon a cause of action upon which it was its own choice to bring into the suit. On that cause of action it obtained a judgment against the St. Louis & San Francisco Company, and succeeded in having it affirmed by the supreme court of the state.

It would be carrying too far the right of a party who has petitioned for removal of a case to extend it beyond what is necessary to defend against the cause of action asserted against him. He should not be permitted to invoke the jurisdiction for affirmative relief and deny it afterwards. It must be remembered how amply his right of removal is protected. He may file the record in the circuit court of the United States, and thereby completely take jurisdiction from the state court.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Peckham and Mr. Justice Day dissent.

*MOLLIE E. DUPREE and William [161]
E. Dupree, Petitioners,
v.
C. W. MANSUR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 161-167.)

Federal courts—following state court decisions—limitations.

A Federal court of equity will apply, in a suit to quiet title as against the purchaser of notes for the purchase price of which a vendor's lien has attached, the rule of local law that, when a debt is barred by the statute of limitations, an action to foreclose a lien or mortgage given as security for the debt is also barred.

[For other cases, see Courts, 2025-2050, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 124.]

Argued April 6, 7, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 554; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 584; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 335; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Texas enjoining proceedings to have certain land sold to satisfy a vendor's lien, ordered a foreclosure of such lien. Reversed.

See same case below, 80 C. C. A. 213, 150 Fed. 329.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. J. Darlington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Sleeper & Kendall, filed a brief for petitioners:

All three of the notes were barred by the Texas statute of limitations; and under the laws of that state, as established by its own supreme court, the bar of the statute, which was duly pleaded, was a bar also to the respondent's recovery under either the deed of trust or the vendor's lien.

Duty v. Graham, 12 Tex. 437, 62 Am. Dec. 534; Perkins v. Sterne, 23 Tex. 561, 76 Am. Dec. 72; Ross v. Mitchell, 28 Tex. 154.

The Texas statute of limitations, as construed by its courts, does not bar the claim of the vendor of land under an express vendor's lien reserved in the deed of sale. Notwithstanding the fact that the deferred purchase-money notes are barred by the statute, the vendor may still retake the land if the notes are unpaid; but this right is one personal to himself, and does not pass to an assignee or indorsee of the notes.

Elliott v. Blane, 54 Tex. 218; Hale v. Baker, 60 Tex. 217; Stephens v. Mathews, 69 Tex. 344, 6 S. W. 567.

Had the statute of limitations run against the notes during and because of the pendency of the consolidated suit, the result would not have been to relieve the bar, since, under the Texas decisions, even an injunction against sale under a trust deed does not suspend the running of the statute.

Davis v. Andrews, 88 Tex. 524, 30 S. W. 432, 32 S. W. 513.

The decisions of the supreme court of Texas upon these questions of purely local state law are conclusive upon the Federal courts in cases arising in and governed by the laws of the state.

Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 294, 26 L. ed. 1090, 1095; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162-166, 36 L. ed. 925-928, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 159, 6 L. ed. 289, 292; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. 32, 9 L. ed. 989; Sioux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 173 U. S. 99, 107, 43 L. ed. 628, 631, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 147, 27 L. ed. 683, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Cordova v. Hood, 17 Wall. 9, 21 L. ed. 587.

53 L. ed.

The cause of action being the debt, and its recovery the sole purpose sought to be accomplished, the case is one of concurrent jurisdiction between the courts of law and of equity, and therefore one in which the statute of limitations is binding in the latter forum.

Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. 32, 56, 9 L. ed. 989, 998; Bacon v. Howard, 20 How. 22, 26, 15 L. ed. 811, 813.

Even if the respondent's cause of action were based upon a purely equitable right, the statute would be applied by analogy, and would be equally conclusive.

Miller v. McIntyre, 6 Pet. 61, 66, 67, 8 L. ed. 320, 322; Willard v. Wood, 1 App. D. C. 59, affirmed in 164 U. S. 502, 520, 41 L. ed. 531, 538, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

Mr. Hannis Taylor argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. M. McCormick, filed a brief for respondent:

Federal courts adopt state statutes of limitation, as such, only so far as they regulate remedies on the common-law side of the court.

1 Foster, Fed. Pr. 3d ed. pp. 15, 16; Fogg v. St. Louis, H. & K. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 449, 17 Fed. 873; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1521; Kirby v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 120 U. S. 130, 30 L. ed. 569, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 261; Burdon Cent. Sugar Ref. Co. v. Ferris Sugar Mfg. Co. 78 Fed. 422; Gregg v. Sanford, 12 C. C. A. 525, 28 U. S. App. 313, 65 Fed. 157; Brown v. French, 80 Fed. 169.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the petitioner to quiet title to a lot of land in Waco, Texas. A cross bill was filed by the respondent to establish and foreclose a vendor's lien and mortgage upon the same land. The facts, so far as necessary to a decision, are these. One Bailey conveyed one undivided half of the land in question to William E. Dupree, partly in consideration of five notes, for $900 each, maturing in one, two, three, four and five years respectively, from December 31, 1894, the date of the conveyance. By the words of the deed, "the vendor's lien is hereby reserved on the said property to secure the above-described notes." On the same date Dupree made a mortgage in the form of a trust deed of one-undivided half of the premises to secure the same notes. These deeds were recorded the next year, and later Dupree conveyed the land to his wife, whose title is not assailed except *as[165 subject to the lien or the notes. Then Dupree conveyed other property in trust for creditors in three classes, in the first of which was included one Slayden in respect of the above-mentioned notes, of four of which he had become the holder. Forthwith certain creditors brought a bill to get the benefit of other securities held by one of the preferred creditors, and for a receiver. Neither the petitioner nor Slayden were made parties, nor was this property mentioned in the bill. On the same day another similar bill was brought by W. B. Belknap & Company, unsecured creditors, in which Slayden was one of the defendants. The petitioner also was joined in respect of a vendor's lien on other land, which she was alleged fraudulently to assert. It was ordered that on the trial the two suits should be consolidated, the same person having been appointed receiver in each. Then Slayden answered and intervened for three of the notes, one having been paid. By the final decree, made on June 30, 1897, it was decided that the plaintiffs in the Belknap bill, to which the petitioner was a party, take nothing by their bill; but, among many other things, the claim of Slayden on his intervention was allowed, it was adjudged that he recover the amount of Dupree, and be paid out of funds in the hands of the court, and it was ordered that thereupon he should indorse the notes, described as secured by vendor's lien on the land in question, to the receiver, without recourse, and that the receiver should sell them and pay the net proceeds into court, to be applied with the other funds. The decree was carried out and the notes were sold to one Duke for $300. He afterwards sold them to Mansur, the respondent, who attempted by proceedings unnecessary to state to have the land sold. Then this bill was filed. The circuit court granted an injunction. This decree was reversed, and a decree of foreclosure in favor of the respondent ordered by the circuit court of appeals.

The circuit court of appeals proceeded upon the ground that the decree was conclusive upon the petitioner, though for what purposes or with what results is not entirely clear, *and is not necessary to inquire. We shall assume that the purchaser took the notes as unpaid, with the vendor's lien attached to the same extent as if Slayden had sold them without coming into court. That certainly is the most that can be attributed to the decree. But since the date of that decree, and before the date of the bill, the notes have been barred by the Texas statute of limitations. It is established law in Texas that, when a debt is barred, an action to foreclose a lien or mortgage given as security for it is barred also. Hale v. Baker, 60 Tex. 217; Goldfrank v. Young, 64 Tex. 432, 434; Stephens v. Mathews, 69 Tex. 341, 344, 6 S. W. 567; Davis v. Andrews, 88 Tex. 524, 30 S. W. 432, 32 S. W. 513; Brown v. Cates, 99 Tex. 133, 87 S. W. 1149. The former decree afforded no possible ground for not applying the Texas law in the present case.

The respondent argues that the vendor's lien is equitable; that the statute of limitations does not govern equitable proceedings, and that a court of equity will not be governed by the analogy of the statute unless it seems equitable to follow it; that the equity jurisdiction of the United States is not to be affected by state laws; that therefore the United States courts are unincumbered by the Texas decisions, and that they ought to say that it is inequitable to deny a remedy on the security when a suit is based upon the debt. We will not consider in how many points we disagree with this argument, but will confine ourselves to what we deem a sufficient answer.

A vendor seems to have greater rights than are enjoyed by a purchaser of notes for the price of land to which a vendor's lien is attached. If not inequitable, the vendor may resolve the sale for nonpayment, whereas a later holder of the notes only can have the lands sold and the proceeds applied in satisfaction, and this right is lost when the notes are barred. Stephens v. Mathews, supra. (These notes, it will be remembered, had been sold by the vendor long before the sale under the decree.) In one case a lien, expressly reserved seems to be regarded as equivalent to a mortgage. Wilcox v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Tex. 322, 331, 55 S. W. 317. Whether this be true or *not, we[167 hardly see how a court of law could disregard an express reservation of security, or how a lien so reserved can be called a purely equitable right. But, equitable or not, it is a creation not of the United States, but of the local law of Texas. If that law should declare the words in Bailey's deed purporting to reserve a lien unavailing, it would not be for the courts of the United States to say otherwise when sitting in equity any more than when sitting at law. It appears to us equally their duty, when the local law decides that the words create a right, to take the measure of that right from the same source. The notes are barred, as well in equity as at law. By the law of Texas the security is incident to the note, and does not warrant a foreclosure when the note does not warrant a judgment. This is not a matter of procedure or jurisdiction, but of substantive rights concerning land. It seems to us that it should be governed by the decisions of the state where the land lies. See Slide & S. Gold Mines v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 509, 516, 38 L. ed. 802, 805, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

We should add, as an independent consideration, that it cannot be admitted for a moment that for a debtor to rely upon the statute of limitation is inequitable of itself, without some special circumstance, wanting here. That would be for courts, and, in this case, courts of a different power, to undertake to declare wrong or discreditable what the proper authority, the legislature of the state, had declared right. There are other questions in the case, but we deem the foregoing reasons sufficient to show that the decree must be reversed.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Holmes (June 1, 1909):

To prevent misapprehension, there should be added to the opinion, at the end, the following words:

"We have considered only the question of the foreclosure on the cross bill. The case will be remanded to the circuit court for further proceedings in accordance with the opinion, without prejudice to the question whether the bill can be maintained."

168]*BUENAVENTURA UBARRI y YRAMATEGUI, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JACINTO LORENZO LOPEZ LABORDE,
Marie Consolación Lopez Laborde, Manuel
Demetrio Lopez Laborde, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 168-173.)

Evidence — sufficiency — fraud.

1. Fraud in connection with purchases of land at tax and execution sales is not established by questionable evidence of value, and the fact that the purchaser was a man of great power and influence, and bought the land at much less than the value set by the owners, from which it was sought to be inferred that judges, mayors, appraisers, and possible purchasers, all were frightened or corrupt.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XII. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Descent — liability of heir for ancestor's debts.

2. The liability of the succession after the inheritance has been divided is, by virtue of Porto Rico Civ. Code, 1889, arts. 1003, 1023, 1084, at an end, and gives place to a personal liability of each heir for the whole debt to the extent of the assets received by him, if he has accepted with benefit of inventory, or, otherwise, in full.

[For other cases, see Descent and Distribution, 37, 38, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — presumption — waiver.

3. There is no presumption that the heirs waived the benefit of inventory, and hence, under Porto Rico Civ. Code, 1889, arts. 1003, 1023, 1084, were liable after the inheritance was divided, for the entire debt of the succession.

[Presumptions generally, see Evidence, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 137.]

Argued April 7, 8, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover damages for fraud. Reversed.

See same case below, on motion for new trial, 3 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 163.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Walter D. Davidge and Clifford S. Walton argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Inadequacy of price of itself does not establish fraud.

Erwin v. Parham, 12 How. 197, 13 L. ed. 952; Slater v. Maxwell, 6 Wall. 268, 18 L. ed. 796.

No harm can be done to another by a person exercising his rights.

Supreme Court of Madrid, Sentencia of May 3, 1883; Sentencia of May 5, 1883; Sentencia, June 10, 1884; Sentencia, June 27, 1896.

Messrs. Willis Sweet and George H. Lamar argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The instruction given by the court on the subject of inheritance without benefit of inventory was correct.

Supreme Court of Spain, Decision 13th Nov. 1895; 5 Manresa, p. 329; 12 Manresa, p. 892; 8 Manresa, p. 200.

To have brought in a verdict for the defendants in error, the jury must have found the wrong to have been Ubarri's; and this court will not disturb the verdict of a jury as far as the same relates to passing upon the facts involved.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action by children of one Jacinto Lopez against one of the heirs of one Pablo Ubarri, alleging fraud on the part of the said Pablo in dealing with the estate of Lopez. It is alleged that as the result Pablo Ubarri became the owner of more than 4,000 acres of land that had belonged to Lopez, and *otherwise damaged and de- [169] frauded the estate to the extent of over $150,000. There was a trial and a verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs, the defendants in error. Many errors were alleged by exception and otherwise, and the case was brought by writ of error to this court.

NOTE. — On the liability of heirs for obligations of their ancestor—see note to Muldoon v. Moore, 21 L.R.A. 89,

The facts relied upon as establishing fraud are as follows: Pablo Ubarri received from the widow of Lopez a power of attorney to administer the estate, and appointed as his substitute one Tomas Cabellero. The probate proceedings went on amicably, the heirs were declared, and the estate was appraised and apportioned to them, the widow receiving property that by valuation was sufficient to pay the scheduled debts in addition to her personal share. Among these debts was one to Pablo Ubarri of $24,000. When the probate proceedings were ended, this debt was disputed by the widow, who asked for documentary evidence; Ubarri thereupon showed some irritation, and wrote to her in a manner that might be taken to imply a threat. She persisting, he began a suit with an attachment, the above-named Cabellero being his procurador. Before and afterward some of the property was attached for taxes, and ultimately it was sold. Ubarri became the purchaser, no other bidders appearing at the sale. Then his action went to judgment, and, finally, the land belonging to the estate, or a large part of it, was adjudicated to him upon execution. Ubarri was the richest, and, politically, the most powerful man in Porto Rico. Circumstances are stated suggesting the inference that even the judges might have been afraid of him. It is said that the representative of the minor heirs, the appraisers of the estate, and pretty much everyone concerned in the probate proceedings were in such relations to him as to be likely to be his tools; that the appraisal was much too low, that the sale for taxes brought a wholly inadequate price, that the attachment tied up the estate so that no money could be got to pay any debt, and that he was an official superior of the municipal authorities ordering the collection of the taxes, and practically the head of those *affairs. The inference sought to be drawn from his powers and the result is that he pressed the collection of the taxes after he had made it impossible for the estate to pay them; that no one would dare to oppose when it was made known that he wished to buy, and that, by his pressure at both ends, he was able ultimately to appropriate and exhaust an estate appraised by his own appointees at $123,000, for a claim of $24,000 and a comparatively small debt for taxes. It seems to have been argued at the trial that he helped out this result by causing the property attached to be appraised at too low a value, and thus enabling himself to bid it in, as he did, at two thirds of that value-tion, under arts. 1497, 1502, of the Code of Civil Procedure then in force.

As a further circumstance it was alleged and proved that the widow was alleged against criminally for cutting a few trees from the estate after Ubarri's attachment and was acquitted in the court of first instance, but that Ubarri, as private prosecutor, took the case to a higher court, being represented there by the above-named Cabellero, and got a sentence of fine or imprisonment imposed upon her. We do not perceive the relevancy of the fact, except possibly as showing the animus with which Ubarri pressed his rights.

On the other hand we start with the fact that the debt to Ubarri is admitted, and that in the argument it was stated that no objections have been made to the probate proceedings. Certainly no ground appears for suggesting that anything in those proceedings contributed in any way to the alleged fraud. But, if this be so, any special duty or burden of proof arising out of confidential relations disappears. We have simply the case of a creditor enforcing his debts after the division of the estate. He had to bid at the tax sale in order to save his attachment. There is no evidence except the fact of his power to show that other bids were deterred, and none to show that he tried to deter them. On the contrary, it appears that some of the personal property, at least, was bought by another. So as to the sale on execution. Both transactions *were[171 regular in form. It seems from the correspondence that, so far from his having stirred up the collection of the taxes, they were in arrears for some time, and that the officials had been pressing for them before it reasonably could be imagined that he had any hand in what was done. The widow had shown a readiness to suspect him, without grounds, so far as appears, two years before his suit was begun, and he had expressed his willingness to have her withdraw the power of attorney whenever she pleased. When the suit was brought they were at arms' length. It was argued that he procured the property attached to be appraised at too low a value, as we have said. But there is no evidence that he did; no sign of any protest on the part of the appraiser that the debtor was authorized to appoint; nothing to show that the judge did not do his duty in appointing a third competent and disinterested man. Arts. 1492, 1481, 1482. The appraisal seems to have agreed with that in the probate proceedings. It is said that that was fraudulent. But it appears that all the parties, after discussion, agreed to the appraisers appointed and to the appraisal, and it does not appear that they were misled in any way. Neither does it appear that the appraisal before execution was not the result of independent judgment, whether it agreed with the former appraisal or not. The whole property was sold by the heirs of Ubarri between 1898 and 1902 for little more than the amount of the judgment. In short, on questionable evidence as to the value of the estate, and the fact that Ubarri was a man of great power and influence, and bought the land, when sold for taxes and on execution, at much less than the value set by the plaintiffs, the case was sent to the jury, with liberty for them to find, upon suspicion, that judges, mayors, appraisers, and possible purchasers all were frightened or corrupt. We are of opinion that this was wrong, and that the exceptions taken by the plaintiff in error should be sustained.

It is not likely that we shall hear of this case again, and therefore we leave many [172] points untouched that would have *to be considered seriously before the judgment could be sustained, but we shall advert to one other matter. The court instructed the jury that because the defendant had not shown the contrary, it was to be presumed that the heirs of Pablo Ubarri took without benefit of inventory, and that therefore service upon one of them authorized the court to give judgment against the succession for whatever the verdict might be. In the light of this instruction and the prayer of the complaint, which was for judgment against the succession, it would seem that the judgment should be construed to follow the prayer. It reads that the plaintiffs "recover of and from the defendant Buenaventura Ubarri Yramategui of the succession of Pablo Ubarri," etc. This is ambiguous, but we assume it to be against the succession. But, if so, we do not perceive the bearing of the presumed waiver of the benefit, of inventory. The effect of such a waiver was to make the heir personally liable without limit, as he was in the early law of Rome, of England, and of France. Civil Code of 1889, art. 1084. Glanville, Lib. 7, chap. 8. Viollet, Hist. du Droit Civil Français, 2d ed. 829, 830. But, as this was a suit against the succession, that was immaterial, so far as the form or scope of the judgment was concerned. It was material, however, with reference to the nature of the suit. For, unless we entirely misunderstand the meaning of the Code of 1889, and of the proceedings under the civil law in case of succession, after the inheritance has been divided, the liability the succession is at an end, and gives place to a personal liability of each heir for the whole debt to the extent of the assets received by him, if he has accepted with benefit of inventory, or, otherwise, in full. Arts. 1084, 1023, 1003. It is for this reason, we presume, that creditors "recognized as such" were given the right to oppose the division until they were paid or secured. § 1082. If this suit is to be regarded as we have supposed and as the defendants in error say, it seems to be misconceived. If, on the other hand, it should be regarded as a suit against Buenaventura Ubarri personally, in respect of a liability of his ancestor, the complaint *does not al- [173] lege that he inherited any property, or how much, or that the inheritance had been divided, or whether it was accepted with or without benefit of inventory. If we assume a division to have taken place, we see no ground for presuming that the defendant accepted his share without benefit of inventory, or is liable for anything beyond the unascertained value of what he received. Whether he waived the benefit of inventory or not is a pure question of fact. It was not material to a suit against the succession, and therefore was not mentioned in the pleadings. Even the division of Pablo's inheritance was mentioned only incidentally in the evidence, and it does not appear whether it took place under the Code of 1889 or that of 1902. But, if the supposed waiver were to be considered, we know of no reason for presuming what probably is the exception, not the rule, to have happened in this case. For the foregoing reasons, also, the judgment was wrong.

Judgment reversed.

JACINTO LORENZO LOPEZ LABORDE
et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

PABLO UBARRI and Modesto Ubarri.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 173-175.)

This case is governed by the decision in Ubarri y Yramategui v. Laborde, ante, 953.

[No. 194.]

Argued April 30, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment dismissing, as to two nonresident defendants, the complaint in an action for fraud, and dissolving the attachment against their property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 2 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 95.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Willis Sweet and George H. Lamar argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. John Maynard Harlan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is the same suit that has been decided already. Ubarri y Yramategui v. Laborde, 213 U. S. 168, ante, 953, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549. There is presented here a subordinate question as to the right of the plaintiffs in error, who were also the plaintiffs below, to retain an attachment against property alleged to belong to two nonresident heirs of Pablo Ubarri. The district court ordered the complaint to be dismissed as to these heirs, and the attachment against any of their property to be dissolved, on the principle that has been laid down more than once by this court, that, in the courts of the United States, "attachment is but an incident to a suit, and, unless the suit can be maintained, the attachment must fall." Ex parte Des Moines & M. R. Co. 103 U. S. 794, 796, 26 L. ed. 461, 462. "Unless the suit can be maintained" means, of course, unless the court has jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. See further Toland v. Sprague, 12 Pet. 300, 330, 336, 9 L. ed. 1093, 1105, 1107; Chaffee v. Hayward, 20 How. 208, 15 L. ed. 804; Clark v. Wells, 203 U. S. 164, 51 L. ed. 138, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

It was admitted at the argument before us that, if the suit against the other defendant should fail, as it has, there was no need to decide this case. But it must be disposed of in some way, and we are of opinion that the judgment below should be affirmed. The suit purports to be against the succession. Yet the property sought to be attached is alleged in the petition to belong to the defendants, and is not alleged even to have belonged to the succession in the past. It seems from what was admitted at the argument that a part, at least, never did. But, if it had belonged to the succession, we gather from incidental testimony in the main case, from the allegations of separate titles in the petition for attachment, and from admissions at the bar, that it had been divided, and thereafter the liability of the heirs, if any, was personal, as explained 175] in the *other case. Even if a suit still could be maintained against the succession when there was no property left in the inheritance, the private property of the heirs could not be held to answer the judgment. On the other hand, if this could be regarded as a suit to enforce personal liability of such heirs as could be caught, it would fail for reasons stated in Ubarri y Yramategui v. Laborde. In view of the disposition of that case we deem it needless to say more.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN LEECH, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF LOUISIANA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 175-178.)

Pilots — state regulation — effect of Federal legislation.

The state of Louisiana may make it a criminal offense for a pilot not duly qualified under its laws to pilot a foreign vessel from the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans, Louisiana, although he holds a license issued under the authority of the state of Mississippi; since New Orleans, although upon the Mississippi river, is not "situate upon waters which are the boundary between two states," within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4236, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903, authorizing the master of any vessel coming into or going out of any port so situated to employ any pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of either of the states bounded on such waters to pilot a vessel to or from such port, the limit of the waters so referred to being the point at which they cease to be a boundary between the two states.

[For other cases, see Pilots, 3-18, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 152.]

Submitted April 15, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the state of Louisiana to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the District Court of the Parish of Plaquemines, in that state, for piloting a vessel without a license. Affirmed.

See same case below, 119 La. 522, 44 So. 285.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George H. Terriberry submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

A regulation of pilots is a regulation of commerce, within the grant of power to Congress in the Constitution of the United States.

Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996.

The act of August 7, 1789, is not a grant of power to the states to pass pilot laws, but a legislative recognition that the power is concurrent in the states and the United States until exercised by the latter.

The Panama, Deady, 27, Fed. Cas. No. 10,702.

The provisions of a state law regulating pilots and pilotage, which are in direct and manifest conflict with act of Congress of March 2, 1837, concerning pilots, are inoperative and void.

The South Cambria, 27 Fed. 525.

A pilot licensed by the state of Delaware is entitled to recover for services in piloting a vessel up the Delaware bay and river to Philadelphia, notwithstanding a law of Pennsylvania prohibiting anyone from acting as such pilot without a Pennsylvania license.

The Clymene, 9 Fed. 164, 12 Fed. 346.

The act of Congress of March 2, 1837, authorizing the master of a vessel bound to or from a port situate on waters which are the boundary between two states, to employ a pilot licensed by the laws of either state, applies to the laws of coterminous states situate upon a navigable river which is not a separating boundary between them.

The Clymene, supra.

A statute of the state of Louisiana which purports to give to that state absolute authority over the subject of pilots and pilotage on the Mississippi river, to the exclusion of other states bordering thereon, is inoperative and void for the reason that it conflicts with act of Congress of March 2, 1837.

The Glenearne, 7 Sawy. 200, 7 Fed. 604; The Clymene, supra; The Charles A. Sparks, 16 Fed. 480; The Abercorn, 26 Fed. 877; The South Cambria, supra; The Alcalde, 12 Sawy. 268, 30 Fed. 133; Dryden v. Com. 16 B. Mon. 598; Cribb v. State, 9 Fla. 409.

Messrs. Walter Guion and J. R. Beckwith submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. N. H. Nunez was on the brief:

The only authority that can interfere with Louisiana in the control of this long stretch of inland Louisiana water is the Federal Congress. The Federal government, through Congress, can only act or interfere with this water and dominion to the extent of assuming such direction over the use of the river as may be necessary to regulate its use as a water way used in commerce between the states and foreign nations, and can assume no other dominion or control, nor can Congress delegate that limited power or control to be exercised by Mississippi or any other state or nation.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Wilson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412.

Where Congress has not acted, the states have full legislative power over state waters.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212-230, 11 L. ed. 565-574; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805.

The states may adopt pilotage laws, subject to the limitations imposed by Congress.

Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 236, 20 L. ed. 624; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 26 L. ed. 234; 2 Story, Const. § 1071; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1-207, 6 L. ed. 23-72; 53 L. ed.

Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co. 18 Wall. 272, 21 L. ed. 841; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Martin v. Wadell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. ed. 997; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. 443, 13 L. ed. 1058; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 666, 34 L. ed. 820, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 28 L. ed. 959, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an information charging the plaintiff in error with piloting a foreign vessel from the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans, the port to which she was bound, he not being a duly qualified pilot under the laws of Louisiana. He was convicted after a trial, and the supreme court of the state pronounced the judgment correct. 119 La. 522, 44 So. 285. By demurrer, motion to quash, and motion in arrest of judgment, he raised the objection that the power of Louisiana was not exclusive, and that a license from the board of pilot commissioners for the harbor of Natchez, Mississippi, was a sufficient authority under the act of Congress of March 2, 1837, chap. 22, 5 Stat. at L. 153, Rev. Stat. § 4236, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903.

The Mississippi river, it will be remembered, is a boundary between Mississippi and Louisiana from below the port of Natchez as far north as Louisiana extends. On the other hand, all the southernmost portion of the river is wholly within Louisiana. The destination of the vessel which the plaintiff in error undertook to pilot was to a point within this southernmost portion,—New Orleans,—as the information charged. *For the purposes of decision it may[178 be assumed, although it is disputed, that the state of Mississippi has attempted to authorize the plaintiff in error to do what he did, while Louisiana has made his conduct criminal if it has power to do so under the United States law.

The section of the Revised Statutes reads as follows: "The master of any vessel coming into or going out of any port situate upon waters which are the boundary between two states may employ any pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of either of the states bounded on such waters, to pilot the vessels to or from such port."

The case for the plaintiff in error depends upon the assumption that the "waters which are the boundary between two states" are, in this case, the whole Mississippi river so far as navigable. We are of opinion that the assumption is wrong, and that the limit of the waters referred to is the point at which they cease to be a boundary between two states. Neither continuity of water nor identity of name will carry them beyond that point. If the plaintiff in error had undertaken to pilot from the Gulf to Natchez, a different question would have been presented, and it may be that in that case the Mississippi license would have been good. But New Orleans, although upon the Mississippi, is not situate upon waters which are the boundary between two states, and therefore the section relied upon does not apply. That being out of the way, Louisiana had power to pass her local regulations. Rev. Stat. § 4235, act of August 7, 1789, chap. 9, § 4. 1 Stat. at L. 54, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903.

Judgment affirmed.

179]*CITY OF DES MOINES, Appt.,

v.

DES MOINES CITY RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 179-184.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — Federal question.

The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a suit by a street railway company to enjoin the enforcement of a municipal ordinance as impairing contract rights cannot be sustained, where such ordinance, after reciting that questions as to the company's rights have been raised, orders it to remove its tracks, and directs the city solicitor to take action to enforce the city's position, since such direction must contemplate enforcement by suit, and not the forcible removal of the tracks.

[For other cases, see Courts, 513-525, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 171.]

Argued April 21, 22, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

NOTE. — As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts — see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7, and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308, APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance directing the removal of the tracks of a street railway company from the city streets. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 151 Fed. 854.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William H. Bailly, William H. Bremner, and Howard J. Clark argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. O. Brennan, filed a brief for appellant:

Whether a case presents a Federal question must be determined from the allegations of fact in the bill, giving them their natural and logical meaning and application, without regard to the arguments, conclusions, and surmises stated.

Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313-333, 50 L. ed. 1046-1053, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66-78, 44 L. ed. 673-680, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Steele, 167 U. S. 659-662, 42 L. ed. 315, 316, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102-108, 39 L. ed. 85-87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185-188, 46 L. ed. 144-146, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Western U. Telg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 243, 44 L. ed. 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 532, 37 L. ed. 267, 268, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 226-236, 42 L. ed. 1017-1020, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Simkins, Suit in Equity, p. 95.

If it appears from the entire record that a case does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy within the jurisdiction of the circuit court, jurisdiction must be denied.

Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209-212, 26 L. ed. 719, 720; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 690, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115-120, 42 L. ed. 682-684, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 550, 29 L. ed. 729, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 33 L. ed. 923, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Simon v. House, 46 Fed. 317; Maxwell v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 34 Fed. 286; Holden v. Utah & M. Machinery Co. 82 Fed. 209; Bank of Arapahoe v. David Bradley & Co. 19 C. C. A. 206, 36 U. S. App. 519, 72 Fed. 867.

Law, in its regular course of administration, is due process; and, when secured by the law of the state, the constitutional requirement is satisfied.

2 Kent, Com. 13; Davidson v. New Or. 214 U. S.

leans. 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Marehant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692-697, 34 L. ed. 816-818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 468, 35 L. ed. 225, 227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579.

The resolution shows that the city only intended to proceed by due process of law.

Cape May v. Cape May, D. B. & S. P. R. Co. 60 N. J. L. 224, 39 L.R.A. 609, 37 Atl. 892.

Mr. Nathaniel T. Guernsey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William L. Read, George H. Carr, Alonzo C. Parker, and William E. Miller, filed a brief for appellee:

This case presents a Federal question and the jurisdiction is clear.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; see also Mercantile Trust & D. Co. v. Columbus, 203 U. S. 311-322, 51 L. ed. 198-203, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 507, 44 L. ed. 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Saginaw Gaslight Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 529; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 117, 48 L. ed. 898, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 562, 41 L. ed. 1116, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Memphis, 37 C. C. A. 410, 96 Fed. 113; Riverside & A. R. Co. v. Riverside, 118 Fed. 736.

The argument that this enactment should be by ordinance, and that it is merely administrative, is beside the point, as is the argument that the city did not mean what it said.

Old Colony Trust Co. v. Wichita, 123 Fed. 779.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought in the circuit court by an Iowa corporation against a city of Iowa. The ground of jurisdiction is that a resolution of the city council of that city is a law impairing the obligation of contracts within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States, and, if carried out, will take the property of the corporation without due process of law, contrary to the 53 L. ed.

14th Amendment. The circuit court granted an injunction against the enforcement of the resolution, and the defendant appealed to this court.

The plaintiff, the appellee, sets up, under a certain ordinance, a right, unlimited as to time, to construct, maintain, and operate an electric street railway in and over the streets, alleys, and bridges of Des Moines. The resolution alleged to impair these rights is as follows:

"Whereas: Questions have been raised as to the rights of the Des Moines City Railway Company and the Interurban Railway Company to maintain their tracks and operate their lines upon and along and over the streets and bridges and public places of the city of Des Moines; and

"Whereas: It is essential to the preservation of the rights of the city of Des Moines that such questions be determined as speedily as possible,

"Be it resolved by the city council of [184 the city of Des Moines: That said companies be, and they are hereby, ordered to remove all of their tracks, poles, and wires from the streets, bridges, and public places of the city of Des Moines, and to restore and repair the surface and pavement, where paved, of all of the streets along which they are now operating their lines, and said companies are hereby ordered to commence said removal within twenty-five days after the passage of this resolution.

"Be it further resolved: That should the said railway companies fail to commence such removal within the time above specified the city solicitor be, and he is hereby, instructed to take such action as he shall deem advisable and necessary to secure the enforcement of the above resolution.

"Be it further resolved: That the city clerk be, and he is hereby, instructed to serve a certified copy of this resolution upon the Des Moines City Railway Company and the Interurban Railway Company forthwith."

We are of opinion that this is not a law impairing the rights alleged by the appellee, and therefore that the jurisdiction of the circuit court cannot be maintained. Leaving on one side all questions as to what can be done by resolution, as distinguished from ordinance, under Iowa laws, we read this resolution as simply a denial of the appellee's claim, and a direction to the city solicitor to resort to the courts if the appellee shall not accept the city's views. The resolution begins with a recital that questions as to the railway company's rights have been raised, and ends with a direction to the city solicitor to take action to enforce the city's position. The only action to be expected from a city solicitor is a suit in court. We cannot take it to have been within the meaning of the direction to him that he should take a posse and begin to pull up the tracks. The order addressed to the companies to remove their tracks was simply to put them in the position of disobedience, as ground for a suit, if the city was right.

Decree reversed, with direction to dismiss the bill.

185]*ELIZABETH PECK, Petitioner,
v.
TRIBUNE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 185-190.)

Libel — photograph — mistaken identity.

1. The publication of a woman's portrait in an advertisement for whisky, in connection with a signed statement purporting to be made by her, to the effect that she is a nurse, and has used the whisky for herself and patients, and recommends it, is a publication of and concerning her, although the name appended to such statement is that of an entirely different person.

Libel — photograph — mistaken identity as defense.

2. The publication of the portrait of an entirely different person from the one to whom the annexed libelous article refers is not excused because it was by mistake, and without knowledge that it was not what it purported to be.

[Defenses to libel, see Libel and Slander, III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to the liability of a newspaper proprietor for a libel published without his knowledge or consent—see note to State v. Mason, 26 L.R.A. 779.

Libel by publication of photograph as that of other person.

What little authority exists upon this question is in accord with the holding in PECK v. TRIBUNE Co. that the publication of a portrait in connection with a libelous article purporting to refer to the original of the portrait is a libel upon such person, although the name used in such article, and printed under the portrait, is that of an entirely different person.

Thus, the printing of a reproduced photograph in connection with an article stating that a certain person is a suicide fiend, and that, after a number of attempts when she usually went to the hospital to get the poison removed, she finally succeeded in killing herself, is a libel upon the original of the photograph, although the name used in the article does not belong to her. Wandt v. Hearst's Chicago American, 129 Wis. 419, 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 919, 116 Am. St. Rep. 959, 109 N. W. 71, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 864.

So, publishing, as a part of a newspaper account of a homicide, a portrait of a person as that of the one who had done the Libel — injuring standing with general public.

3. A publication cannot be held, as a matter of law, not to be libelous, because it may not injure the plaintiff's standing with the general public, if it may injure her in the estimation of a considerable and respectable class of the community.

[What actionable as libel, see Libel and Slander, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Libel — injuring standing with general public.

4. The publication in an advertisement for a brand of whisky, of the portrait of a woman, in connection with a signed statement purporting to have been made by her, that she is a nurse, and has used the whisky for herself and patients, and recommends it, cannot be said, as a matter of law, not to be libelous, because such publication may not injure her standing with the general public. [What actionable as libel, see Libel and Slander, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 191.]

Argued April 29, 30, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois, directing a verdict for the defendant in an action for libel. Reversed.

See same case below, 83 C. C. A. 202, 154 Fed. 330.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

killing, is a libel upon the person whose portrait was so published, although the name printed thereunder, and used in the article itself, is that of an entirely different person. James v. Ft. Worth Telegram Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 117 S. W. 1028.

The publication of a photograph in connection with an article which is libelous, and which refers specifically to the photograph which accompanies it, entitles the person whose photograph is so published to maintain an action for libel, although another person's name is printed beneath the photograph, and the article states facts tending to show that he was not the person referred to. De Sando v. New York Herald Co. 88 App. Div. 492, 85 N. Y. Supp. 111.

In Morrison v. Smith, 177 N. Y. 366, 69 N. E. 725, the court apparently took it for granted that the publication of a photograph with no name attached, in connection with an advertisement of a book purporting to narrate the "experience of a giddy typewriter girl," imputed such experience to the original of the portrait.

Where a picture of a person was published in connection with an article, in regard to a person of the same name, purporting to contain an account of his career as a strike breaker, and which stated that

Mr. S. C. Irving argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Rufus S. Simmons and Frank J. R. Mitchell, filed a brief for petitioner:

The article declared upon was libelous and actionable per se.

Morrison v. Smith, 177 N. Y. 368, 69 N. E. 725; Pavesieh v. New England L. Ins. Co. 122 Ga. 190, 69 L.R.A. 101, 106 Am. St. Rep. 104, 50 S. E. 68, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 561; De Sando v. New York Herald Co. 88 App. Div. 492, 85 N. Y. Supp. 111; Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. 113 Mo. App. 223, 87 S. W. 565; Ball v. Tribune Co. 123 Ill. App. 235; Wandt v. Hearst's Chicago American, 129 Wis. 421, 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 919, 116 Am. St. Rep. 959, 109 N. W. 70, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 864; Sheibley v. Ashton, 130 Iowa, 197, 106 N. W. 618.

Words must be construed in their ordinary meaning.

Peake v. Oldham, Cowp. pt. 1, p. 275; Woolnoth v. Meadows, 5 East, 463; 2 Erskine's Speeches, p. 91.

The publication which imputes to a person language known to those among whom she lives to contain false statements is libelous.

White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 266, 11 L. ed. 591; Odgers, Libel & Slander, ed. from 2d Eng. ed. 293; Sheahan v. Collins, 20 Ill. 325, 71 Am. Dec. 271; Prewitt v. Wilson, 128 Iowa, 198, 103 N. W. 365; Hake v. Brames, 95 Ind. 161; Monson v. Lathrop, 96 Wis. 386, 65 Am. St. Rep. 54, 71 N. W. 596; Lindley v. Horton, 27 Conn. 58.

It is the province of the jury to decide, under proper instructions from the court, whether the article was libelous.

Culmer v. Canby, 41 C. C. A. 302, 101 Fed. 197; Pfitzinger v. Dubs, 12 C. C. A. 399, 24 U. S. App. 376, 64 Fed. 696; Townshend, Slander & Libel, 4th ed. 576; McDonald v. Woodruff, 2 Dill. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 8,770.

A witness may be asked what impression the alleged libelous words made upon him.

Nelson v. Borehenius, 52 Ill. 238; Chlatovich v. Hanehett, 96 Fed. 686.

Introduction of a libelous article in evidence and proof of publication establishes the cause of action.

Kraus v. Sentinel Co. 60 Wis. 430, 19 N. W. 384.

Even though the libel does not name the person injured, it is sufficient if it can be shown that it refers to him.

Pavesieh v. New England L. Ins. Co. supra; Barron v. Smith, 19 S. D. 54, 101 N. W. 1105; Morrison v. Smith, 177 N. Y. 366, 69 N. E. 725; Palmer v. Bennett, 83 Hun, 220, 31 N. Y. Supp. 567.

Mistake is no excuse for the publication of a libel.

Hanson v. Globe Newspaper Co. 159 Mass. 299, 20 L.R.A. 856, 34 N. E. 462; R. v. Woodfall, Loft, 782; Dexter v. Spear, 4 Mason, 117, Fed. Cas. No. 3,867; Post Pub. Co. v. Hallam, 8 C. C. A. 201, 16 U. S. App. 613, 59 Fed. 536; Clark v. North American Co. 203 Pa. 351, 53 Atl. 237; Ransom v. McCurley, 140 Ill. 636, 31 N. E. 119.

he was the foe of organized labor, and had accepted a bribe from a labor organization on an agreement to leave a city during a strike, and, having gone outside the corporate limits, immediately returned,—such statements, though true in regard to the person about whom the article was written, being false as to the person whose portrait was published,—the jury was fully justified in finding that the article was published of and concerning the original of the photograph. Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. 113 Mo. App. 216, 87 S. W. 565.

Printing the picture of one woman, in connection with a libelous article relating to the death of another, with the statement that such likeness is the latest photograph of the one to whom the article refers, does not necessarily establish that the words used in the article were published of the original of the portrait, but the question is one for the jury to determine, taking into consideration the facts and circumstances surrounding the two women, and those attendant upon the death of the one to whom the article refers. Ball v. Evening American Pub. Co. 237 Ill. 592, 86 N. E. 1097. But the court said that, if the declaration had averred that the printed account of the death was published by it, and that, in connection with such article, the portrait of the plaintiff was published as a likeness of the dead woman, and had charged libel in publishing the picture in connection with the article, instead of charging that the publication of the words in and of itself constituted a libel,—a very different question would have been presented.

Reasonable care in publishing the wrong picture is suggested as a possible defense in Farley v. Evening Chronicle Pub. Co. supra, but mistake, as is plainly indicated by the foregoing cases, is ordinarily no excuse.

The fact that the person whose portrait is so published may not be injured in the estimation of those who know her well only affects the extent of the injury, and mitigates the damage. Wandt v. Hearst's Chicago American, supra.

To the same effect is De Sando v. New York Herald Co. supra, where the court said that the fact that persons who knew the plaintiff's real name, and who read the article through would be lead to the conclusion that he was not the person referred to, would not affect the libelous character of the act, though it might mitigate the damages.

Mr. John Barton Payne argued the cause, and, with Mr. William G. Beale, filed a brief for respondent:

The publication of the advertisement, together with the picture of the petitioner, was not libelous per se.

White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 266, 11 L. ed. 591; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225, 23 L. ed. 308; Com. v. Clap, 4 Mass. 168, 3 Am. Dec. 212; Sterling v. Jugenheimer, 69 Iowa, 210, 28 N. W. 559; Broughton v. McGrew, 5 L.R.A. 406, 39 Fed. 672; Stone v. Cooper, 2 Denio, 293; Goldberger v. Philadelphia Grocer Pub. Co. 42 Fed. 42; Walker v. Tribune Co. 29 Fed. 827.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on the case for a libel. The libel alleged is found in an advertisement printed in the defendant's newspaper, The Chicago Sunday Tribune, and, so far as is material, is as follows: "Nurse and Patients Praise Duffy's. Mrs. A. Schuman, One of Chicago's Most Capable and Experienced Nurses, Pays an Eloquent Tribute to the Great Invigorating, Life-Giving, and Curative Properties of Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky." Then followed a portrait of the plaintiff, with the words, "Mrs. A. Schuman," under it. Then, in quotation marks, "After years of constant use of your Pure Malt Whisky, both by myself and as given to patients in my capacity as nurse, I have no hesitation in recommending it as the very best tonic and stimulant for all weak and run-down conditions," etc., etc., with the words, "Mrs. A. Schuman, 1576 Mozart st., Chicago, Ill.," at the end, not in quotation marks, but conveying the notion of a signature, or at least that the words were hers. The declaration alleged that the plaintiff was not Mrs. Schuman, was not a nurse, and was a total abstainer from whisky and all spirituous liquors. There was also a count for publishing the plaintiff's likeness without leave. The defendant pleaded not guilty. At the trial, subject to exceptions, the judge excluded the plaintiff's testimony in support of her allegations just stated, and directed a verdict for the defendant. His action was sustained by the circuit court of appeals, 83 C. C. A. 202, 154 Fed. 330.

Of course, the insertion of the plaintiff's picture in the place and with the concomitants that we have described imported that she was the nurse and made the statements 189]set forth, as *rightly was decided in Wandt v. Hearst's Chicago American, 129 Wis. 419, 421, 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 919, 116 Am. St. Rep. 959, 109 N. W. 70, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 864; Morrison v. Smith, 177 N. Y. 366, 69 N. E. 725. Therefore the publication was of and concerning the plaintiff, notwithstanding the presence of another fact, the name of the real signer of the certificate, if that was Mrs. Schuman, that was inconsistent, when all the facts were known, with the plaintiff's having signed or adopted it. Many might recognize the plaintiff's face without knowing her name, and those who did know it might be led to infer that she had sanctioned the publication under an alias. There was some suggestion that the defendant published the portrait by mistake, and without knowledge that it was the plaintiff's portrait, or was not what it purported to be. But the fact, if it was one, was no excuse. If the publication was libelous, the defendant took the risk. As was said of such matters by Lord Mansfield, "Whenever a man publishes, he publishes at his peril." R. v. Woodfall, Lofft, 776, 781. See further, Hearne v. Stowell, 12 Ad. & El. 719, 726; Shephard v. Whitaker, L. R. 10 C. P. 502; Clarke v. North American Co. 203 Pa. 346, 351, 352, 53 Atl. 237. The reason is plain. A libel is harmful on its face. If a man sees fit to publish manifestly hurtful statements concerning an individual, without other justification than exists for an advertisement or a piece of news, the usual principles of tort will make him liable if the statements are false, or are true only of someone else. See Morasse v. Brochu, 151 Mass. 567, 575, 8 L.R.A. 524, 21 Am. St. Rep. 474, 25 N. E. 74.

The question, then, is whether the publication was a libel. It was held by the circuit court of appeals not to be, or, at most, to entitle the plaintiff only to nominal damages, no special damage being alleged. It was pointed out that there was no general consensus of opinion that to drink whisky is wrong, or that to be a nurse is discreditable. It might have been added that very possibly giving a certificate and the use of one's portrait in aid of an advertisement would be regarded with irony, or a stronger feeling, only by a few. But it appears to us that such inquiries are beside the point. It may *be that[190 the action for libel is of little use, but, while it is maintained, it should be governed by the general principles of tort. If the advertisement obviously would hurt the plaintiff in the estimation of an important and respectable part of the community, liability is not a question of a majority vote.

We know of no decision in which this matter is discussed upon principle. But obviously an unprivileged falsehood need not entail universal hatred to constitute a cause of action. No falsehood is thought about or even known by all the world. No conduct is hated by all. That it will be known by a large number, and will lead an appreciable fraction of that number to regard the plaintiff with contempt, is enough to do her practical harm. Thus, if a doctor were represented as advertising, the fact that it would affect his standing with others of his profession might make the representation actionable, although advertising is not reputed dishonest, and even seems to be regarded by many with pride. See Martin v. The Picayune (Martin v. Nicholson Pub. Co.) 115 La. 979, 4 L.R.A. (N.S.) 861, 40 So. 376. It seems to us impossible to say that the obvious tendency of what is imputed to the plaintiff by this advertisement is not seriously to hurt her standing with a considerable and respectable class in the community. Therefore it was the plaintiff's right to prove her case and go to the jury, and the defendant would have got all that it could ask if it had been permitted to persuade them, if it could, to take a contrary view. Culmer v. Canby, 41 C. C. A. 302, 101 Fed. 195, 197; Twombly v. Monroe, 136 Mass. 464, 469. See Gates v. New York Recorder Co. 155 N. Y. 228, 49 N. E. 769.

It is unnecessary to consider the question whether the publication of the plaintiff's likeness was a tort per se. It is enough for the present case that the law should at least be prompt to recognize the injuries that may arise from an unauthorized use in connection with other facts, even if more subtilty is needed to state the wrong than is needed here. In this instance we feel no doubt.

Judgment reversed.

191]*CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RAILWAY COMPANY and Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

J. W. McDONALD, Administrator of Nancy J. Wilson, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 191-196.)

Error to state court — Federal question — how raised and decided.

The refusal by an inferior state court of an application to remove a cause to a Federal circuit court presents no Federal question which will sustain a writ of error under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, from the Supreme Court of the United States, to review a judgment of the highest state court, affirming the judgment below, where there is nothing in the record to indicate that the question of the right of removal was brought to the attention of the highest state court, and that court could not have considered the question even if presented, because, at the time the appeal from the final judgment was taken, it was too late to review the order refusing the removal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1168-1430, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 158.]

Argued April 19, 1909. Decided May 17, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Lewis Circuit Court, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for an alleged wrongful death. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below on first appeal, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 778, 86 S. W. 690; on second appeal, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 500, 102 S. W. 810.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. L. Worthington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. H. Wadsworth, W. D. Cochran, and LeWright Browning, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Allan D. Cole argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Thomas R. Phister, R. D. Wilson, and W. T. Cole, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, J. W. McDonald, as administrator of Nancy J. Wilson, deceased, on March 23, 1900, brought *suit [192 in the Lewis circuit court of Kentucky against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company and the Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad Company, and certain employees of the former, to recover damages for the alleged wrongful death of Nancy J. Wilson. On May 29, 1900, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company, a corporation of Virginia, filed a petition for removal of the case to NOTE. — On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case of a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on 53 L. ed.

the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to when the Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Kentucky, and an order of removal was made accordingly. On September 3, 1902, the case having been remanded by the United States circuit court, it was redocketed in the state court. On January 19, 1903, the plaintiff discontinued the action as against the five individual defendants. On January 21, 1903, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company filed another petition to remove the case to the United States circuit court on the ground of separable controversy. This motion for removal was overruled by the Lewis circuit court, and, thereafter, on May 19, 1904, the case went to trial in the Lewis circuit court, and that court directed a verdict for the railroad companies. Upon appeal to the court of appeals of Kentucky, that judgment was reversed. 27 Ky. L. Rep. 778, 86 S. W. 690.

A second trial of the case in the Lewis circuit court, on September 27, 1906, resulted in a verdict and judgment for the defendant in error. From that judgment an appeal was taken to the Kentucky court of appeals, and it was there affirmed. 31 Ky. L. Rep. 500, 102 S. W. 810.

The Federal question attempted to be presented grows out of the alleged error in refusing, upon the second application, to remove the cause from the Lewis circuit court to the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Kentucky.

The right to review a judgment of a state court by error proceedings in this court is regulated by § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). To lay the foundation for such right of review it is necessary to bring the Federal question in some proper manner to the consideration of the state court whose judgment it is sought to review; if this is not done, the Federal question cannot be [193]originated by assignments of error *in this court. The Federal right asserted in this case comes within the third class named in § 709 of the Revised Statutes, wherein a right, title, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the United States, and the decision is against such right, title, privilege, or immunity. In this class of cases the statute requires that such right or privilege must be specifically set up and claimed in the state court; and in any of the classes of cases mentioned in § 709 it is essential that the record disclose that the Federal question involved was decided, or that the judgment necessarily involved the Federal right, and decided it adversely to the claim of the plaintiff in error. Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Fowler v. Lamson, 164

U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 172, 41 L. ed. 673, 674, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 248, 46 L. ed. 171, 176, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120, 124. In the latter case this court said:

"It is settled that this court, on error to a state court, cannot consider an alleged Federal question when it appears that the Federal right thus relied upon had not been, by adequate specification, called to the attention of the state court, and had not been by it considered, not being necessarily involved in the determination of the cause. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 67, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 655, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 1152, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709, and cases cited."

In the opinion of the Kentucky court of appeals in this case the question of the correctness of the order of removal is not considered, nor is there anything in the record to indicate that the alleged error in refusing to remove the case on the second application was brought to the attention of the Kentucky court of appeals. In this court the assignments of error concern the alleged error in refusing to remove the case upon the second application, and avers that the Kentucky court of appeals erred in holding, in substance and effect, that the plaintiff in error had no such right of removal. But, as we have said, the assignments of error in this court cannot enlarge the right of review. Moreover, it is apparent that, if the question of the right of removal was brought before the Kentucky *court of [194] appeals upon the judgment to which this writ of error is prosecuted, it would not have considered the question. The refusal to remove upon the second application was in January, 1903. The judgment which was taken to the court of appeals for review in the present case was rendered on September 27, 1906.

The Kentucky Civil Code of Practice provides that an appeal from judgments and final orders, which includes such orders as the one now under consideration (Hall v. Ricketts, 9 Bush, 366, 370), shall not be granted except within two years after the right of appeal first accrued. No appeal was taken from the order refusing to remove within two years. At the time when the appeal in the present case was made to the Kentucky court of appeals it was too late to review the order refusing to remove. In the case of Maysville & B. S. R. Co. v. Willis, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1249, 1252, 104 S. W. 1016, 1018, the court of appeals of Kentucky, dealing with the question, said:

"It is further insisted that it was error not to grant request of appellant to remove the action to the Federal court. This motion was based upon the ground that the original petition did not state a good cause of action against either the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company, which is a foreign corporation, or the resident defendant, the Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad Company. . . . The action of the lower court, refusing to transfer the action, was made and entered in July, 1903, and it is now too late to raise any question as to the regularity of this ruling. In fact, this appeal is prosecuted alone from the judgment rendered in October, 1906, and, under no state of case, could this court review an error of the character complained of, committed in 1903."

It is contended, however, that, if the case were a removable one, the effect of filing a petition and bond was to divest the jurisdiction of the state court; and this has been said in decisions of this court upon the subject. This does not mean, however, that the right to review the judgment of a state court only by proper proceedings under § 709 195] of the Revised Statutes *is in anywise altered or modified. When the state court, upon the second application, refused to remove the case, it was the privilege of the railroad company to take a transcript of the record, and make an application to file it in the Federal circuit court; and, if that court sustained its jurisdiction, it might have protected the same by injunction against further proceedings in the state court, or if the latter court refused to surrender the record, a writ of certiorari could issue to require its transfer to the circuit court of the United States (Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCabe, decided April 5, 1909, 213 U. S. 207, ante, 765, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430); or, remaining in the state court after that court refused to remove, it might, after final judgment, have brought the case here for review; but this does not mean that it could have a review of the judgment of the state court when it has failed to invoke the judgment of that court within the time prescribed by the statute of the state for the review of such orders. Under the statute in Kentucky the review of the order refusing to remove could only be had within two years. Within that time the plaintiffs in error could have taken the question to the Kentucky court of appeals, and, if the ruling was against it, after final judgment, could have brought the case here for review. But it could not remain in the state court, without any attempt to have the order refusing the removal reviewed within the statutory period, and escape its judgment on the ground that it was void, if against it, because the case was a removable one.

53 L. ed.

In Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 934, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176, it was held that a Federal constitutional objection might be waived, so far as having the right of review of a judgment in a state court was concerned, where the record in the case disclosed that the question was not made in the state court by proper procedure or argument in support of the assertion of the Federal question, and the state court had, for that reason, held the right to review the Federal question waived.

We are of the opinion that this case presents no valid exception to the ruling of the state court upon a Federal question duly reserved by some proper form of procedure, as is required by *§ 709 of the Revised [196 Statutes of the United States, in order to be reviewable here.

It follows that the writ of error must be dismissed.

Dismissed.

W. O. ROGERS, JR., Ellen G. M. Rogers,
John B. Martin, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JOSEPH T. JONES, the County of Harrison, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 196-204.)

Error to state court—Federal question—decision on non-Federal grounds.

A decree of a state court dismissing the bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court because of a ruling that an execution sale by a Federal marshal, relied upon as the foundation of title, was made at the wrong place, where the decree is also based upon the grounds that the alleged return on the writ of fieri facias did not describe the lands in controversy, that title had not been deraigned as required by the state statute under which the suit was

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Williams v. Norris, 6 L. ed. U. S. 571; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

brought, and that the suit was barred by the state statute of limitations.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 196.]

Submitted April 27, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court for Harrison County, in that state, dismissing the bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below on 1st appeal, 85 Miss. 802, 38 So. 742.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a bill in equity brought by Rogers and others, plaintiffs in error, November 11, 1903, in the chancery court for Harrison county, Mississippi, to remove certain alleged clouds from the title to lands situated in that county, and to be put in possession of said lands, against J. T. Jones, Harrison county, and the persons constituting the board of supervisors of the county, as individuals and as composing that board.

Defendants demurred, and the demurrer was overruled by the chancellor. An appeal was taken from this decree to the supreme court of Mississippi, where the decree of the lower court was reversed and the cause remanded. Jones v. Rogers, 85 Miss. 802, 38 197] So. 742. *Thereupon plaintiffs in error filed an amended bill. To the amended bill Jones and the county severally filed demurrers and also answers denying certain allegations of fraud. On rehearing, the chancellor sustained the demurrers, and plaintiffs in error refusing to amend or plead further, the amended bill was dismissed December 23, 1905. From this decree plaintiffs in error appealed to the state supreme court, where it was affirmed October 22, 1906, and from this judgment plaintiffs in error have prosecuted the pending writ of error.

The material averments of the amended bill were that plaintiffs in error claimed title to certain lands described in the bill, by virtue of a purchase of said lands by "their ancestor," John Martin, at a sale of said lands on October 28, 1839, made by the United States marshal under an execution on a judgment of the United States circuit court for the southern district of Mississippi, against one James McLaren.

That plaintiffs in error are the "legal descendants and sole surviving heirs at law of John Martin, deceased, who died intestate in the city of New Orleans and state of Louisiana, during the year 1848." That Martin, at the time of his death, was seised and possessed of, in fee simple, in addition to other lands, certain described lands or parcels of land, which include the lands in controversy, situated in the town of Gulfport, county of Harrison (Hancock county at the time of the sale), and state of Mississippi. That plaintiffs in error are tenants in common, and all derived their title "from their common ancestor, John Martin, by descent." That James McLaren acquired said lands by sales from the United States government, dated December 11, 1834, and a patent dated January 5, 1841.

That, at the sale of the land under an execution on the judgment against McLaren, Martin became the highest and best bidder at and for the sum of $760, and the same was knocked off to him by the United States marshal, and the purchase money was then and there paid by Martin to the marshal, and *he was then and there put into [198 possession, and so remained until his death, in the year 1848.

The amended bill further averred that the land was in Harrison county, Mississippi, and that John Martin never sold nor made any disposition of any kind of the lands; that plaintiffs in error have been all the while in constructive possession of the lands since the death of John Martin, in 1848, and that no person or persons ever went into actual possession of the lands until the county of Harrison or the board of supervisors thereof took possession under deed of June 4, 1902, from J. T. Jones.

The bill alleged upon belief that, at the sale, a deed to the lands was made by the marshal to John Martin, and, in this connection, the bill further alleged that another sale of lands was made on the same execution, and the deeds were made by the marshal to the purchasers at said sale.

That McLaren died intestate, leaving no heirs at law, either lineal or collateral, and that the lands never escheated to the state of Mississippi.

The bill further alleged that, while plaintiffs in error were minors, the administrator of McLaren procured a certified copy of the judgment and execution and proceedings of the sale, and, with the purpose of depriving plaintiffs in error of their legal right and title to the lands, organized a company to take charge of the lands, concealing the facts of the said sale. That the company kept the facts of the real ownership from the plaintiffs in error, and sold some of the lands without knowledge of their legal rights to said property until the last four or five years. That as soon as the fact of the purchase and ownership of the lands by John Martin was made known to them, plaintiffs in error at once began to take the necessary legal steps to begin suit to establish the claim.

The bill also alleged that defendants in error had full notice of the claim to the title of plaintiffs in error, but they accepted the gift of the land in controversy from J. T. Jones, and had full knowledge of the fraud that had been practised upon them from its beginning to the present time. That on June 199]4, 1902, *Jones conveyed by deed the land in Gulfport, as a gift, to the board of supervisors of Harrison county, with the condition that, should the county of Harrison at any time cease to use the lands for the courthouse, they should revert to Jones.

The bill further stated that if the supreme court of Mississippi should decide against the validity of the marshal's sale under the judgment and execution, plaintiffs in error "claim the right and benefit of an appeal from the final decree to the Supreme Court of the United States."

The original bill had averred, "par parenthesis, that they are claiming their rights and title to this property under a marshal's sale made under and by virtue of the laws and Constitution of the United States of America, and they now and here desire to lay the proper predicate, so that they may have these proceedings in this case revised and reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in case the decision of the supreme court of the state of Mississippi is adverse to their lawful, just, and bona fide claim, having derived the same from the patentee of these lands."

The answers of the supervisors and of Jones denied notice or knowledge of any fraud on complainants, and, having answered the bill for the purposes of that denial, prayed the judgment of the court on the demurrers.

Mr. Frank Johnston submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. A. Y. Harper was on the brief:

The writ of error will lie in this case on the ground that the supreme court of Mississippi erroneously held that the judicial sale, made by the United States marshal under a judgment rendered by the United States circuit court for the southern district of Mississippi, and under which the plaintiffs in error claim title to the lands in controversy, was irregular and void, and conferred no title upon the purchaser at such sale.

Collier v. Stanbrough, 6 How. 14, 12 L. ed. 324; Erwin v. Lowry, 7 How. 172, 12 L. ed. 655; Clements v. Berry, 11 How. 398, 13 L. ed. 745; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 35 L. ed. 171, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Bock v. Perkins, 139 U. S. 628, 35 L. ed. 53 L. ed.

314, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Day v. Gallup (Derby v. Gallup) 2 Wall. 97, 17 L. ed. 855; Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; O'Brien v. Weld, 92 U. S. 81, 23 L. ed. 675; Factors' & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 28 L. ed. 582, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Long Island Loan & T. Co. 172 U. S. 493, 43 L. ed. 528, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 507, 46 L. ed. 657, 664, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 310, 45 L. ed. 203, 205, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union, S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Commercial Pub. Co. v. Beckwith, 188 U. S. 567, 569, 47 L. ed. 598, 599, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 688, 26 L. ed. 277, 278; McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. 327, 331, 35 L. ed. 796, 799, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 19, 50 L. ed. 348, 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 526, 51 L. ed. 298, 303, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153.

A Federal question is sufficiently set up or claimed when it appears that the contentions involving it were raised by the pleadings, or called to the attention of the court in some proper way.

Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 503, 46 L. ed. 657, 662, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200, 28 L. ed. 400, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 167, 51 L. ed. 1002, 1009, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

The decision of the supreme court of Mississippi, on the first appeal (Jones v. Rogers, 85 Miss. 802, 38 So. 742), has been expressly overruled in the subsequent case of Kennedy v. Sanders, 90 Miss. 524, 43 So. 913, which held that the real ground of the decision was the question of the validity of the title of plaintiffs in error, and that that part of the opinion in respect to the statute of limitations was a mere dictum, and, furthermore, was incorrectly decided.

If, therefore, the question of the statute of limitations were in this case (which we deny), the decision of it by the supreme court, on the first appeal, would have to be held by this court to be palpably erroneous.

Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 307, 34 L. ed. 683, 686, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Maguire v. Tyler, 8 Wall. 650, 664, 665, 19 L. ed. 320, 324, 325; Berea College

v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45, ante, 81, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

It is elementary that a certificate of a court of last resort may serve to elucidate the determination whether a Federal question exists.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 525, 51 L. ed. 298, 303, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153.

Where, on error to the supreme court of the state, the record shows a decision of the state court on a Federal question properly presented, and to which this court could take jurisdiction, and shows also the decision of the local question, the writ of error will not be dismissed on motion in advance of the hearing. The parties are entitled to be heard on the soundness of the decision below on the Federal question, on the sufficiency of that question to control the judgment in the whole case, and on the sufficiency of any other point decided to affirm the judgment, even if the Federal question was erroneously decided.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 20 Wall. 643, 22 L. ed. 446.

It is the duty of the state courts to decide Federal questions; if errors supervene, the remedy is open to the aggrieved party.

Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 190, 191, 46 L. ed. 144, 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 193, 194, 48 L. ed. 140, 144, 145, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 28 L. ed. 542, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544.

Messrs. James H. Neville and Walter A. White submitted the cause for defendants in error:

The bare averment of a Federal question is not sufficient; there must, at least, be color or ground for such averment.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

The fact that a party to a suit is a receiver of a United States court does not necessarily create a Federal question authorizing a review of the case by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Bausman v. Dixon, 173 U. S. 113, 43 L. ed. 633, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 43 L. ed. 502, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

Nor does the fact that plaintiffs in error claim lands under a patentee of the United States create such Federal question.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; McStay v. Friedman, 92 U. S. 723, 23 L. ed. 767; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

The determination by a state court of a Federal question adversely to the plaintiff in error will not sustain the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States, if another question, not Federal, was also raised and decided against him, and the decision thereof is sufficient, notwithstanding the Federal question, to sustain the judgment.

Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Chappell Chemical & Fertilizer Co. v. Sulphur Mines Co. 172 U. S. 465, 43 L. ed. 517, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Union Nat. Bank v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 163 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 177, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1039.

It is not enough to give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction over the judgment of a state court for the record to show that a Federal question was argued or presented to that court for decision. It must appear that such Federal question was necessary to the determination of the cause, and that it was actually decided, or that the judgment could not have been given without deciding it.

Moore v. Mississippi. 21 Wall. 636, 22 L. ed. 653; Bolling v. Lersner, 91 U. S. 594, 23 L. ed. 366; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327, 23 L. ed. 511; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation (Louisiana ex rel. Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation) 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114; Endowment & Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. ed. 960, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Blount v. Walker, 134 U. S. 607, 33 L. ed. 1036, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Skinner, 139 U. S. 293, 35 L. ed. 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528.

Where one of the points decided in the supreme court of a state against the plaintiff in error would be a sufficient ground for the exercise of jurisdiction by the Supreme Court of the United States, yet, if the decree is also based on another and distinct ground over which the national court has no jurisdiction,—as the statute of limitations of the state,—the decree is beyond the revisory power of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Rector v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In entering the decree of December 23, 1905, the chancellor manifestly proceeded on the decision of the supreme court of Mississippi, reported 85 Miss. 802, 38 So. 742, as did the supreme court in affirming, October 22, 1906, the chancellor's decree. To this decree the pending writ of error was allowed and issued September 18, 1907.

The contention is that, in determining the rights of plaintiffs in error, the Mississippi supreme court put a wrong construction upon the special act of Congress of February 16, 1839 [5 Stat. at L. 317, chap. 27], referring to the time and place for the making of judicial sales in Mississippi, in that it held that the marshal's sale relied on as the foundation of title was made at the wrong place. But the supreme court made other and decisive rulings, as well as that in reference to the place of the alleged sale.

In the first place, that court held that the alleged return on the writ of fieri facias did not describe the lands in controversy, and therefore could not confer title, even though regular and valid. The act of Congress of February 16, 1839, did not attempt to define what is and what is not a good and valid description of real estate, or to make any rule by which a purchaser at a marshal's sale could take possession of lands other [204]*than those specifically described in the process. The question of a sufficient description was a question of general law.

In the second place, the court held that, under the Mississippi statute authorizing suits of the character then before the court, plaintiffs in error had not deraigned a title to the lands in controversy, which, under the Mississippi statute under which the suit was instituted, was a fatal objection to the bill.

In the third place, the court held that the claim of plaintiffs in error was barred by the Mississippi statute of limitations, in that it failed to show possession by the plaintiffs, or their ancestor, during the sixty-four years that intervened between the marshal's sale and the bringing of the suit, and did not, as required by the rules of practice in courts of equity in Mississippi, show that it was the defendants or those in privity with them who had fraudulently canceled from plaintiffs the evidence of their claim.

It is true that the supreme court of Mississippi in the subsequent case of Kennedy 53 L. ed.

v. Sanders, 90 Miss. 524, 43 So. 913, decided May 20, 1907, overruled the ruling in Jones v. Rogers, applying the ten-year statute of limitations, and quoting what the court then observed in that regard, said that "this announcement was not necessary to the decision in Jones v. Rogers, for the court had already held that the complainants in that case had deraigned no title." And it will have been perceived that this writ of error runs to the judgment of the supreme court of October 22, 1906.

The result is, therefore, that this writ of error comes within the rule that where the disposition of a Federal question was not necessary to the determination of the cause, and the judgment is based on a distinct ground or grounds broad enough to sustain it, over which this court has no jurisdiction, the writ of error cannot be maintained.

Writ of error dismissed.

Mr. Justice White took no part in the consideration and disposition of this case.

*STATE OF WASHINGTON [205 v.

STATE OF OREGON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 205-218.)

Boundaries — between states — middle of channel.

1. The middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, described as the boundary between Oregon and Washington in the act of February 14, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 33), admitting Oregon into the Union, remains the boundary, subject to the changes in it which come by accretion, and is not moved to the other channel because the latter, in the course of years, becomes the more important, and is properly called the main channel of the river.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Boundaries — between states — middle of channel.

2. The middle of the main channel of the river is what is meant by the words "the middle channel of said river," in the act of February 14, 1859, admitting Oregon into the Union, with the Columbia river as its northern boundary.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, 29-34, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Boundaries — between states — widest channel.

3. The widest expanse of water which can reasonably be called a channel is what is

NOTE.—On rivers and lakes as state boundaries—see note to Buck v. Ellenbolt, 15 L.R.A. 187.

On jurisdiction over boundary rivers—see note to Roberts v. Fullerton, 65 L.R.A. 953.

meant by the words "widest channel" in the act of February 14, 1859, admitting Oregon into the Union, with the Columbia river as its northern boundary.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, 29-34, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Boundaries — between states — islands.

4. Desdemona sands and Snag island are within the territorial limits of the state of Oregon, admitted into the Union by the act of February 14, 1859, with its northern boundary described as a point due west and opposite the middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, thence easterly to and up the middle channel of said river, and, where it is divided by islands, up the middle of the widest channel.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, 46-50, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 3, Original.]

Decided May 24, 1909.

PETITION for rehearing in a suit in equity between the states of Washington and Oregon, to determine the boundary line between those states, in which such boundary was adjudged to be the center of the north channel of the Columbia river, subject to certain changes from accretions. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George Turner, E. C. MacDonald, S. H. Piles, and W. P. Bell for complainant.

Messrs. A. M. Crawford, C. W. Fulton, I. H. Van Winkle, Harrison Allen, and A. M. Smith for defendant.

214] *Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was decided on November 16, 1908, substantially in favor of the state of Oregon. 211 U. S. 127, ante, 118, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47. On February 17 of this year a petition for rehearing was presented by the state of Washington. On examination of that petition we entered an order directing that the parties have leave to file briefs upon the questions. They have done so, and we have re-examined the case with great care.

There are practically two matters presented: One, whether the boundary near the mouth of the Columbia river was and is the channel north of Sand island. We held that it was, and with that conclusion we are still satisfied. It is unnecessary to restate the reasons therefor. We may, however, refer to Missouri v. Kentucky, 11 Wall. 395, 20 L. ed. 116, as much in point. That was a controversy between those two states as to the title of Wolf island. The treaty between France, Spain, and England in February, 1763, stipulated that the middle of the Mississippi should be the boundary between the British and French territories on the continent of North America. This was recognized by the treaty of peace with Great Britain in 1783 [8 Stat. at L. 80], and different treaties since then. The boundaries of Missouri when she was admitted into the Union as a state in 1820 [3 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 22] were fixed on this basis. Kentucky had succeeded in 1792 to the right and possession of Virginia, which, by virtue of the treaties referred to, extended to the middle of the bed of the Mississippi. The main channel of the Mississippi had been, up to at least 1820, west of the island. There was testimony that since then it had changed to the east side. Nevertheless the court held that the island remained still a part of Kentucky, saying (p. 401):

"It follows, therefore, that if Wolf island in 1763, or in 1820, or at any intermediate period between these dates, was east of this line, the jurisdiction of Kentucky rightfully attached to it. If the river has subsequently turned its course, and now runs east of the island, the status of the parties to this controversy is not altered by it, for the channel which the *river aban- [215] doned remains, as before, the boundary between the states, and the island does not, in consequence of this action of the water, change its owner."

So, whatever changes have come in the north channel, and although the volume of water and the depth of that channel have been constantly diminishing, yet, as all resulted from processes of accretion, or, perhaps, also of late years, from the jetties constructed by Congress at the mouth of the river, the boundary is still that channel, the precise line of separation being the varying center of that channel. Jefferies v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 33 L. ed. 872, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 36 L. ed. 186, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Iowa v. Illinois, 147 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 55, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Missouri v. Nebraska, 196 U. S. 23, 49 L. ed. 372, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 913, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408, 571.

The other question arises in this way. The act admitting Oregon, after naming as the commencement of the boundary "a point due west and opposite the middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river," adds "thence easterly, to and up the middle channel of said river, and, where it is divided by islands, up the middle of the widest channel thereof to a point near Fort Walla-Walla." [11 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 33.] With reference to this we said: "The testimony fails to show anything calling for consideration in respect to the last clause in the quotation from the boundary of Oregon.

The channel is not divided by islands." Now, it is alleged that there is set forth in the bill of complaint, and admitted in the answer, that a controversy has arisen as to the boundary lines, and that both of said states claim and assume to exercise jurisdiction over numerous islands and sands in said Columbia river, sixteen of which are enumerated by name.

While sixteen islands and sands are mentioned, yet, in the brief filed by the plaintiff on the application for a rehearing, it is stated that outside of Sand island, the title to which is, as shown in the former opinion, settled by the decision of the first question, only two, Desdemona sands and Snag island, can be called islands, the remainder being entirely submerged and only visible at low tide. These two, therefore, are all that can come within the definition in the boundary. 216] *That speaks of "the middle channel of said river," and counsel contend that there is no pretense of three channels, and therefore the language should properly be construed as the middle of the main channel of said river, and we are inclined to think that that is the true construction. But it must be remembered that the boundary in the first instance passes around the north of Sand island, in what was known as the north channel, and it does not strike any channel which deserves to be called the main channel until it has passed to the eastward of Sand Island. While the testimony is not satisfactory as to the point, at the time of the admission of the state of Oregon, at which this north channel, after passing Sand island, touched any other channel, we are of the opinion that it must have been at a point east and north of Desdemona sands. Of course, in considering this matter, we assume that the contention of the state of Washington is correct,—that Desdemona sands could have then properly been termed an island.

With reference to Snag island, the question is a difficult one. We agree with counsel that the term "widest channel" does not mean the broadest expanse of water. There must be, in the first instance, a channel,—that is, a flow of water deep enough to be used, and in fact used, by vessels in passing up and down the river; but it does not mean the deepest channel, but simply the widest expanse of water which can reasonably be called a channel. Now, close to Snag island there appear several channels, the principal ones being Woody Island channel and Cordell channel, both used at different times by vessels navigating the river. The Cordell channel runs to the north of Snag island, the Woody channel to the south, while the boundary claimed by the state of Oregon runs in a channel far to the north of both Woody island and Cordell channels.

Further, it appears that in December, 1877, the state of Oregon conveyed Snag island, in consideration of the sum of $143.75, to J. W. and V. Cook. While of course this is not conclusive, yet, taken in connection with the fact that the *state of [217 Washington has never attempted to interfere with the jurisdiction of the state of Oregon over Snag island, and the doubt that hangs about the position and depths and width of the various channels in the vicinity at the time of the admission of the state of Oregon, we hold that that island is within its territorial limits.

It must be borne in mind that an inquiry of this kind is attended with much difficulty. Here is a river of great width, 3 miles or so at certain places, whose bed is largely of sand, and whose channels have been naturally affected by the flow of the water, and also of late years by the jetties constructed by the government in order to facilitate navigation. Congress, evidently recognizing the difficulty which attended the location of the exact boundaries, provided that the states of Washington and Oregon should have concurrent "jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases upon the Columbia river." Yet this provision does not determine the boundaries between the two states, and has proved insufficient to settle the disputes between them as to things done upon the Columbia river. Nielsen v. Oregon, 212 U. S. 315, ante, 528, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

We may be pardoned if, in closing this opinion, we refer to the following:

Joint Resolution to Enable the States of Mississippi and Arkansas to Agree upon a Boundary Line and to Determine the Jurisdiction of Crimes Committed on the Mississippi River and Adjacent Territory.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the consent of the Congress of the United States is hereby given to the states of Mississippi and Arkansas to enter into such agreement or compact as they may deem desirable or necessary, not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, or any law thereof, to fix the boundary line between said states, the Mississippi river now, or formerly, formed the said boundary line, and to cede respectively, each to the other, such *tracts or parcels of the territory of [218 each state as may have become separated from the main body thereof by changes in the course or channel of the Mississippi river, and also to adjudge and settle the jurisdiction to be exercised by said states, respectively, over offenses arising out of the violation of the laws of said states upon the waters of the Mississippi river.

Approved January 26, 1909.

Similar ones have passed Congress in reference to the boundaries between Mississippi and Louisiana and Tennessee and Arkansas. We submit to the states of Washington and Oregon whether it will not be wise for them to pursue the same course, and, with the consent of Congress, through the aid of commissioners, adjust, as far as possible, the present appropriate boundaries between the two states, and their respective jurisdiction.

The petition for rehearing is denied.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 218-223.)

Commerce — state regulation — furnishing intoxicating liquors to inebriate.

The provision for the punishment of knowingly furnishing intoxicating liquor to an inebriate, which is made by Ky. Stat. 1903, § 1307, is, as applied to the transportation of liquor by an express company from state to state, an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 178-184, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 144.]

Argued April 8, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of Hart County in the State of Kentucky to review a judgment convicting an express company of knowingly furnishing liquor to an inebriate. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Section 1307, Kentucky Statutes 1903, provides:

"Any person who shall sell, lend, give, procure for or furnish, spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors, or any mixture of either, knowingly, to any person who is an inebriate or in the habit of becoming intoxicated or drunk by the use of any such liquors,

NOTE.—On state regulation of sales of intoxicating liquors—see note to Rhodes v. Iowa, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1089.

On state regulation generally of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

or who shall suffer or permit any such person to drink any such liquors in his bar-room, saloon, or upon the premises under his control or in his possession, shall be fined, for each offense, $50," etc.

The Adams Express Company was prosecuted in the circuit court of Hart county for a violation of that statute. The facts were agreed upon. It was a company engaged in the express business. W. G. Tharp was a resident of Hart county, Kentucky, who bought and paid for liquor in Nashville, Tennessee, and New Albany, Indiana. The sellers were licensed dealers in those places, and shipped the liquors to him, by the defendant, prepaying the express charges. Tharp was in the habit of becoming intoxicated, and the defendant's agent in *Hart[220 county knew of this fact when he delivered the liquors. On the trial the court ruled "that the said transportation and delivery of said liquor to said Tharp by defendant did not constitute interstate commerce within the meaning of the clause of the Federal Constitution which gives to the Congress of the United States power to regulate commerce between the states, and that the defendant is guilty of knowingly furnishing liquor to an inebriate, as charged in the information herein."

The defendant prayed an appeal to the court of appeals of Kentucky, which was denied, and thereupon the case was brought here directly from the circuit court of Hart county, the highest court of the state in which a decision could be had. Ky. Stat. 1903, § 950.

Mr. Lawrence Maxwell argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph S. Graydon, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The transaction was interstate commerce.

American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 433, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 206 U. S. 129, 51 L. ed. 987, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 426, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1096, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

The business of an interstate carrier cannot be subjected at any stage to state regulation under the Wilson act.

Rhodes v. Iowa, supra; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 486, 31 L. ed. 700, 707, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062.

The Kentucky statute is an illegal regulation of interstate commerce.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 110, 34 L. ed. 128, 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 514; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 40 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The jurisdiction of this court is not open to dispute. Defendant contended that the 222]Kentucky statute, as applied to *the transportation of liquor from state to state, was in conflict with the section of the Federal Constitution vesting jurisdiction in Congress over interstate commerce. This contention was denied by the state court, and thus a question arose under the Federal Constitution, decided adversely to the plaintiff in error. Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg, 204 U. S. 359, 51 L. ed. 520, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

Liquor, however obnoxious and hurtful it may be in the judgment of many, is a recognized article of commerce. License Cases, 5 How. 504, 577, 12 L. ed. 256, 289; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100-110, 34 L. ed. 128-132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

In Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674, 676, Mr. Justice White, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"Equally well established is the proposition that the right to send liquors from one state into another, and the act of sending the same, is interstate commerce, the regulation whereof has been committed by the Constitution of the United States to Congress, and, hence, that a state law which denies such a right, or substantially interferes with or hampers the same, is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States."

That the transportation is not complete until delivery to the consignee is also settled.

In Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 426, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1096, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664, 669, it was held that the Wilson act [26 Stat. 53 L. ed.

at L. 313, chap. 723, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177] "was not intended to and did not cause the power of the state to attach to an interstate commerce shipment, whilst the merchandise was in transit under such shipment, and until its arrival at the point of destination, and delivery there to the consignee."

This legislation is in the exercise of the police power,—a power which, generally speaking, belongs to the state,—and is an attempt, in virtue of that power, to directly regulate commerce; but, in case of conflict between the powers claimed by the state and those which belong exclusively to Congress, the former must yield, for the Constitution of the United States and the laws made in pursuance thereof are "the supreme law of the land."

*Section 5258 of the Revised Stat-[223 utes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3564) provides:

"Every railroad company in the United States . . . is hereby authorized to carry upon and over its road . . . all passengers . . . freight, and property on their way from any state to another state, and to receive compensation therefor." New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

In Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 123, it was declared "that any exercise of state authority, in whatever form manifested, which directly regulates interstate commerce, is repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution."

In Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 206 U. S. 129, 135, 51 L. ed. 987, 991, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606, 607, it was said:

"The testimony showed that the package, containing a gallon of whisky, was shipped from Cincinnati, Ohio, to George Meece, at East Bernstadt, Kentucky. The transaction was therefore one of interstate commerce, and within the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress. The Kentucky statute is obviously an attempt to regulate such interstate commerce. This is hardly questioned by the court of appeals, and is beyond dispute under the decisions of this court."

Clearly, within the cases above cited, the statute before us, as applied to transportation from state to state, cannot be sustained.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Hart County, Kentucky, is reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the views expressed in this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissents.

224]*MARIA DE LAS NIEVES CABRERA and Magdalena de la Cruz, Appts.,
v.
AMERICAN COLONIAL BANK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 224-235.)

Evidence — to explain writing — consideration.

1. Evidence to show that a bill of sale which appears on its face to have been given in discharge of a debt was really intended to give the creditor additional security is admissible under the Porto Rico law of evidence, § 101, declaring that the rule which raises a conclusive presumption of the truth of the facts recited in a written instrument does not apply to the recital of a consideration.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 1649-1665, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Guaranty — discharge.

2. The taking of additional security cannot affect the liability of a guarantor upon a mortgage executed by her to secure the debt.

[For other cases, see Guaranty, V. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mortgage — what property mortgageable.

3. The accrued interest of an heir in the estate of a decedent, although undivided, is not a property right to be "owned in the future," within the meaning of the provisions of the Porto Rico mortgage law, art. 108, defining things which are not mortgageable.

[For other cases, see Mortgage, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mortgage — what property mortgageable.

4. The right of an heir to mortgage an accrued undivided interest in a decedent's estate is not affected by the provisions of the Porto Rico mortgage law, arts. 110, 111, which only define the incidents of an estate to which the mortgage of it extends.

[For other cases, see Mortgage, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mortgage — debt secured.

5. The liability of a mortgagor under a mortgage executed to secure a debt extends to the whole debt, whether such mortgage was executed by her as principal or as surety.

[For other cases, see Mortgage, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 136.]

Submitted April 7, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a decree for the foreclosure of a mortgage. Affirmed.

See same case below, 3 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 14.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This is a suit to foreclose a mortgage given by the appellant Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna to the appellee bank, executed by her on certain property in Porto Rico, to secure a promissory note for 8,000 pesos, provincial money, made *in favor [225 of the bank by a mereantile firm in San Juan, known as Sucesores de J. M. Suarez y Compañia, as principals, and the appellant above named as surety. The Banco Territorial y Agrícola was also made a party, but, as it disclaimed any interest in the controversy, no further proceedings were taken against it. Magdalena de la Cruz Cabrera y Pruna was made a party because, as it is alleged in the bill, the property mortgage was conveyed to her by Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna, who was her sister, for the purpose of depriving the plaintiff (appellee here) of the benefit of its security, and that the conveyance was made without consideration. She answered, denying the allegations, and averred that the conveyance was made upon certain valuable considerations, which were set out.

The answer of Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna set up that her signature to the mortgage had been obtained by fraud, and that Suarez & Company had paid the debt secured thereby, that the original note signed by her had been renewed without her knowledge or consent, that the bank had accepted a bill of sale of the stock of merchandise belonging to Suarez & Company in full payment of the indebtedness, and had executed a public document acknowledging the same. She also averred the good faith of the conveyance to her sister.

The principal contention of appellants in this court turns entirely on the truth of the allegation that the bank had accepted the bill of sale of the stock of Suarez & Company in full payment of the indebtedness. Of this bill of sale we may say at the outset that the district court found, and we concur in that finding, that it was not executed with such intention. Appellants, therefore, are limited to the proposition that it had such effect by operation of law. They so contend, insisting that it was a conveyance of property on its face, and that it could not be varied or changed by parol testimony. The district court, having admitted such testimony, it is further contended, committed error. The ruling that parol evidence will not be received to vary a written instrument is elementary, *but the in-[226 quiry is, Is that ruling so far imperative in NOTE. — On parol evidence as applicable to written contracts—see notes to Durkin v. Cobleigh, 17 L.R.A. 270; Bradley v. Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. 10 L. ed. U. S. 72; and Fire Ins. Asso. v. Wickham, 35 L. ed. U. S. 860.

Porto Rico that an instrument, though an absolute conveyance on its face, may not be shown as only intended for security?

A statement of some of the facts will exhibit the situation of the parties and their relations to the indebtedness. Previous to the year 1900 José Maria Suarez carried on a mercantile business in San Juan, Porto Rico. Shortly before that date he died, and two of his brothers, including his widow, Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna, one of the appellants, continued the business under a partnership, organized in the early part of 1900, under the firm name and style of Sucesores de J. M. Suarez y Compañia. Suarez had bought the store with his wife's private funds, and owed her at the time of his death 8,000 pesos, and she became a silent partner to that extent, but took no part in the management generally. The partnership, being in need of money, borrowed from appellee, on the 21st of February, 1900, the sum of 8,000 pesos, equivalent to $4,800 in United States currency, and gave its promissory note to secure the sum, payable in six months, at 9 per cent interest. The note was in the following words:

$8,000 Pesos } Either on demand.
$4,900 Dollars }

San Juan, Porto Rico, February 21, 1900.

Six months after date, for value received, we promise to pay to the American Colonial Bank of Porto Rico, at the office of the said company, in the city of San Juan, 8,000 pesos M. C. or 4,800 dollars U. S. cy., having deposited with said company as collateral security for payment of this or any other liability or liabilities of ours to said company, now existing, or which hereafter may be contracted, the following property, viz.:

A cession of all the interests of the signers of this in the estate of Nieves Pruna y Vanrosi, and a mortgage on house on Sol street. This note can be renewed with the consent of the cashier of the American Colonial Bank, without prejudice to the security or collateral, with full power and authority to said company to sell, assign, and deliver the whole, or any part thereof, or any substitutes therefor, or any additions thereto, at any brokers' board, or at any public or private sale, at the option of said company, or its president or treasurer, or its or their or either of their assigns, on the nonperformance of this promise, or the nonpayment at maturity of any of the other liabilities aforesaid, or at any time or times thereafter, without demand of payment, advertisement, or notice of sale, which are hereby expressly waived; and, after deducting all costs and expenses for collection, sale, and delivery, to apply the residue of the proceeds of such sale or sales, to pay any or all of said liabilities to said company, or its assigns, as its president or treasurer or assigns shall deem proper, returning the overplus to the undersigned; and upon any sale at public auction or at brokers' board the holder thereof may purchase the whole or any part of such securities, discharged from any right of redemption. And the undersigned agrees to be and remain liable to the holder hereof for any deficiency.

The company is hereby given a lien upon all moneys held by it on deposit or otherwise, to the credit of the undersigned, and is authorized at any time to appropriate all of said moneys to the payment of whatever may be due on this note, or any other obligations of the undersigned now existing or hereafter contracted, whether the same be then due or not due.

In case of depreciation in the market value of the security hereby pledged, or which may hereafter be pledged for this loan, a payment is to be made on account, so that the said market value shall always be at least — per cent more than the amount unpaid of this note. In case of failure to do so this note shall be due and payable forthwith, anything hereinbefore expressed to the contrary notwithstanding, and the company may immediately reimburse itself by sale of the security as hereinbefore provided.

(Sgd.) Maria de las Nieves de Suarez.

(Sgd.) Suc. de J. M. Suarez & Co.

*The note was signed by her as a principal, but the bill alleges that the firm signed as principal, and that she signed as surety, and, to further secure the note, that she executed the mortgage in this suit. It is recited in the mortgage that the note was given by the firm "as direct debtors," and that she executed the mortgage as surety "for the debtors and principal guarantor of the debtors." The mortgage was recorded.

On the 13th of March, 1901, a bill of sale upon which the controversy in the case turns was executed before a notary. The instrument recites that it was made by the Mercantile Society, Ltd., doing business under the firm name and style of Sucesores de J. M. Suarez y Compañia, owner of the establishment, the bazaar "Europa," Don Manuel and Ramon Suarez y Cordero, represented by its managing and active partners as parties of the first part, and Mr. Edwin L. Arnold, cashier of the American Colonial Bank of Porto Rico, party of the second part. The bill of sale further recites as follows:

"First. The Society Sucesores de J. M. Suarez y Cia. now is debtor to the American Colonial Bank of Porto Rico in the sum of $4,800, due on the 21st of August, last, ac-ording to the promissory note which they executed, and, not being able to deliver the amount thereof, have offered to make payment thereof in mercantile stocks, according to the detailed inventory which they exhibit, subscribed by the society, and which they take with them bearing my signature and seal, and to which the creditor bank has manifested its conformity.

"Second. That carrying into effect the sale of the stocks set forth in the inventory exhibited, Messrs. Suarez y Cordero, in the representation by which they act, transfer all of the said effects set forth in the said inventory to the creditor bank for the sum of $4,800, leaving the same in the possession of the bank, in payment of the said amount of the promissory note above mentioned.

"Third. Mr. Edwin L. Arnold accepts this deed, receives the inventory above mentioned, and in consequence thereof *says that he leaves in the said establishment of the sellers, the 'Bazaar Europa,' all the stock and goods which such persons have sold to him in payment for the $4,800 which they owe to the American Colonial Bank, in order that, for the account and commission of the latter, they proceed to realize from the said goods, prices not to be less than those fixed in the inventory, and they are obliged to present to the bank weekly account of sales they may make, together with the value in cash thereof, until the complete realization of the same takes place."

It was signed by Ramon Suarez y Cordero, Manuel Suarez y Cordero, and Edwin L. Arnold, cashier.

The district court found, as we have already said, that the bill of sale was taken as additional security, and that there was no agreement or understanding that it should be considered as full payment of the main loan or debt; that Arnold never saw the stock of goods or any part of it, nor went to the store of the firm, and that the firm retained possession of the goods. Neither of the appellants took part in the execution of the instrument, and it is found that no testimony was offered charging them or any of the members of the company with fraudulent conduct. It is also found by the district court that subsequently the firm went into bankruptcy, that the stock of goods was scheduled as part of the assets of the firm, and that the bank received no part of the assets collected by the trustee in bankruptcy, and distributed among the general creditors of the firm. The district court adjudged that the bank was entitled to foreclose its mortgage, and entered a decree accordingly.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter submitted the cause for appellants:

When the clauses of a contract are clear and explicit, there is no necessity to have recourse to the rules for interpretation.

Decisions, Supreme Court, Madrid, April 11, June 19, 1865, March 1, 1862, March 21, 1900, October 12, 1900, January 10, 1901, April 24, 1901, July 6, 1901.

It cannot be successfully contended that the acceptance by the appellant bank of the stock of goods transferred to it by its debtor was simply an additional security. On the contrary, it was, in fact and law, a substitution of the debt.

4 Derecho Civil, Sanchez Roman, pp. 428, 431.

Appellee acquired no specific right or interest in the inheritance or participations of appellant Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna in the estate of her deceased mother.

3 Galindo, Legislación Hipotecaria, p. 199, p. 279.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill submitted the cause for appellee:

Any court with equity jurisdiction not only possesses the right, but must perform the duty, in a proper case, in order to ascertain the real transaction, to go behind the recitals of an instrument of conveyance, and construe it according to its true consideration and significance.

Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489, 6 L. ed. 142; Peugh v. Davis, 96 U. S. 332, 24 L. ed. 775; Morris v. Nixon, 1 How. 118, 11 L. ed. 69; Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139, 147, 13 L. ed. 927, 930; Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 299, 15 L. ed. 644, 648; Risher v. Smith, 131 U. S. clvi., Appx. 24 L. ed. 808; Morgan v. Shinn (McLellan v. Shinn) 15 Wall. 105, 21 L. ed. 87.

The law of evidence of Porto Rico requires the insular courts, which have no equity jurisdiction, to receive the same evidence and reach the same result.

Horton v. Robert, 3 Castro Dec. de Puerto Rico, 415.

An heir or devisee not only has a right to sell or mortgage his interest in the inheritance before the division, but such lien or alienation follows the portion of the inheritance subsequently set apart to him.

66 Jurisprudencia Civil, p. 684; 96 id. p. 853; 101 id. p. 15.

The action of the trial court herein in admitting evidence of the circumstances of the alleged "release," and of the real agreement and intent of the parties in executing it, is supported by a long line of authorities from the Supreme Court of Spain itself.

78 Jurisprudencia Civil, p. 494; 79 id. pp. 232-568; 86 id. p. 408; 89 id. p. 121; 93 id. p. 311; 97 id. p. 441; 101 id. p. 615.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Appellants, to sustain their contention that 230] the bill of sale *was an absolute conveyance and accomplished payment of the debts to the bank, quote provisions of the Spanish Civil Code which, it is said, was in force in Porto Rico until 1902, which provides that the obligations of contracts must be complied with according to their terms, that their provisions, when clear and explicit, must control, and that there can be no evidence of the terms of the agreement other than the contents of the writing, unless "a mistake or imperfection of the writing is put in issue by the pleadings," or its "validity" is the fact in dispute.†

But these are also the principles of the common law, and absolutely necessary if the written instrument is to be given a distinctive sanction of the agreement of the parties. But there are well-recognized exceptions. The face of an instrument is not always conclusive of its purpose. In equity, extrinsic evidence is admitted to show that a conveyance absolute on its face was intended as security. The rule regards the circumstance of the parties and executes their real intention, and prevents either of the parties to the instrument committing a fraud on the other by claiming it as an absolute conveyance, notwithstanding it was given and accepted as security. In other words, the real transaction is permitted to be 231] *proved. This court said in Pengh v. Davis, 96 U. S. 336, 24 L. ed. 776, and repeated it in Brick v. Brick, 98 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 256: "As the equity upon which the court acts in such cases arises from the real character of the transaction, any evidence, written or oral, tending to show this, is admissible." The rule which excludes parol testimony, the court further said, has reference to the language used by the parties, and does not forbid an inquiry into their object in executing and receiving the instrument. Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489, 6 L. ed. 142; Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139, 13 L. ed. 927; Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289, 15 L. ed. 644. In Morgan v. Shinn (McLellan v. Shinn) 15 Wall. 105, 21 L. ed. 87, the rule of equity was enforced against the bill of sale of a vessel, though it was enrolled and also insured in the name of the transferee. See Livingston v. Story, 11 Pet. 351, 9 L. ed. 746.

It is not contended that the equitable rule is explicit in the Porto Rican Code; but it is contended that the power to enforce the rule is given by § 34 of the act of Congress of April 12, 1900 [31 Stat. at L. 84, chap. 191], which conferred upon district courts of Porto Rico, "in addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, jurisdiction of all cases cognizant in the circuit courts of the United States," and that they should "proceed therein in the same manner as a circuit court." The deduction from this is that the district court, having the "ordinary jurisdiction" of both circuit and district courts, may "proceed in the consideration of any case within that jurisdiction on the same principles," depending on the nature of the case, as those courts may.

Appellee, however, says that it is not necessary to insist upon that proposition because the question presented is the "kind of evidence" which the court was entitled to receive and consider, and the case of Horton v. Robert, 3 Castro's Dec. de Puerto Rico, 410, 415, is adduced to sustain the decision of the district court in admitting evidence to explain the bill of sale in controversy. The English translation of the decision, given by the appellee, is as follows:

"It seems that the defendant believes, and his whole contention *is based on this [232] belief that, for a mortgage to be declared usurious, the usury must appear from the document itself. Such an affirmation would convert the law of usury into a dead letter, and is directly in conflict with § 25 of the Law of Evidence of Porto Rico. The appellee also presumes that the object of a written contract cannot constitute the subject of investigation by a court, upon examining into its validity, but that the court must presume that it has been stated correctly in the contract itself. This presumption of the appellee is contrary to the second subdivision of § 101 of the Law of Evidence of Porto Rico, and to the law established by the American courts. No matter what motive †"Obligations arising from contracts have legal force between the contracting parties, and must be fulfilled in accordance with their stipulations." Article 1091.

"Contracts shall be binding, whatever may be the form in which they may have been executed, provided the essential conditions required for their validity exist." Article 1278.

"If the terms of a contract are clear and leave no doubt as to the intentions of the contracting parties, the literal sense of its 53 L. ed.

stipulations shall be observed." Article 1281.

"Commercial contracts shall be executed and complied with in good faith, according to the terms in which they were made and drafted, without evading the honest, proper, and usual signification of written or spoken words with arbitrary interpretations, nor limiting the effects which are naturally derived from the manner in which the contractors may have explained their wishes and contracted their obligations." Article 57, Code of Commerce.

or consideration is expressed in a written contract, the truth of its provisions is not conclusively presumed, but the same can always be the subject of investigation before a court, and therefore proof can always be proposed and received in order to demonstrate what was the true motive or consideration of the obligation which may be established. See also paragraph 38 of § 102 of the Law of Evidence of Porto Rico."

The law of evidence referred to is inserted in the margin.†

Horton v. Robert seems to interpret the 233] Code as permitting *the application of the equitable rule, and defines the word "consideration" in § 101 to comprehend the motive or purpose of the instrument. If there is any decision or statute which militates with this conclusion, we feel sure that appellants would have cited it. But we need not distinguish between motive and consideration. The testimony was addressed to the consideration of the bill of sale in its strictest sense. On the face of the instrument the bank engaged to give up its debt for the stock of goods. This, then, constituted the consideration as expressed, but the testimony explaining it showed that it was not the real consideration, that the real consideration was to keep Suarez & Company a going concern, and to give the bank additional security. More than this it is not necessary to decide; and we shall not consider, therefore, the contention of appellee and the citations to support it, that the law of Spain "permits what our own does not—the admission of oral *testimony regarding all the terms of a contract upon equal footing with the writing which evidences it."

It is, however, contended that, if it should be held that the bill of sale did not pay or discharge the debt, appellant Maria de las Nieves was (a) but a guarantor, and her liability must be determined as such. (b) The deed of sale was but a novation. (c) It constituted, under all the circumstances, a modification of the security, and released her, the guarantor.

All these objections seem (we say seem, because the argument to support them is somewhat involved) to rest on the contention that the bill of sale was not taken as an additional security, and is, therefore, answered by what has been said. Whether she was a guarantor or not, that could not make a mortgage of her real estate any less effective, or make the bill of sale something other than what it was. Joyce v. Auten, 179 U. S. 591, 45 L. ed. 332, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

It is next contended by appellants that the bank "acquired no specific right or interest in the inheritance or participations of appellant Maria de las Nieves Cabrera y Pruna in the estate of her deceased mother," because, as it is further contended, "that her interest in the estate of her mother had not yet been divided or assigned." There was an allegation in the bill that such interest was covered by the mortgage, which was †Sec. 25. When the terms of an agreement have been reduced to writing by the parties, it is to be considered as containing all those terms, and therefore there can be between the parties and their representatives or successors in interest no evidence of the terms of the agreement, other than the contents of the writing, except in the following cases:

1. Where a mistake or imperfection of the writing is put in issue by the pleadings.

2. Where the validity of the agreement is the fact in dispute.

But this section does not exclude other evidence of the circumstances under which the agreement was made or to which it relates, as defined in section twenty-eight, or to explain an intrinsic ambiguity, or to establish illegality or fraud. The term "agreement" includes deeds and wills, as well as contracts between parties.

Sec. 28. For the proper construction of an instrument, the circumstances under which it was made, including the situation of the subject of the instrument, and of the parties to it, may also be shown, so that the judge be placed in the position of those whose language he is to interpret.

Sec. 101. The following presumptions, and no others, are deemed conclusive.

2. The truth of the facts recited, from the recital in a written instrument between the parties thereto, or their successors in interest by a subsequent title; but this rule does not apply to the recital of a consideration.

Sec. 102. All other presumptions are satisfactory, if uncontradicted. They are denominated disputable presumptions, and may be controverted by other evidence. The following are of that kind:

38. That there was a good and sufficient consideration for a written contract.

Sec. 107. No evidence shall be considered as conclusive or unanswerable unless so declared by this act. Laws of Porto Rico, 1905, pages 73, 74, 87, 88, 90.

In the same connection should be considered article 1186 of the Civil Code of Porto Rico, which reads as follows:

"Public instruments are evidence, even against a third person, of the fact which gave rise to their execution, and of the date of the latter.

"They shall also be evidence against the contracting parties and their legal representatives with regard to the declarations the former may have made therein." Revised Statutes & Codes of Porto Rico, 1902.

not denied. Besides, it does not appear that the point was made in the lower court, and counsel say here, after quoting some very general provisions of the Civil Code of Porto Rico, and articles 110 and 111 of the mortgage law, "as we more confidently rely upon the other points in this case, we do not enter into a discussion of the law bearing on this point." We leave the point where counsel has left it. We do not feel called upon to compare the provisions which he has cited with those cited by counsel for appellee, which, it is contended, have a contrary effect, and establish that an heir or devisee has an interest in the inheritance before the division, which he may sell or mortgage.

It is enough to say that the provisions 235]quoted by appellants *do not sustain their contention. They quote article 1874 of the Civil Code, in force at the time the mortgage was given, as confining a mortgage contract to real property and to rights in real estate which can be alienated according to law. There is no attempt to define such rights other than to quote article 108 of the mortgage law, as follows:

"Article 108. The following are not mortgageable:

"5. The property right in things which, although they will be owned in the future, are not yet recorded in the name of the person who will have a right to own them."

But the interest of Maria de las Nieves in her mother's estate had accrued, and because it was an undivided interest did not make it a "property right" to be owned in the future."

Articles 110 and 111 of the mortgage law are clearly not applicable. They only refer to what incidents of an estate the mortgage of it extends, as improvements, crops, rents, etc.

It is finally contended that, if Maria de las Nieves is responsible at all, it is only for a part of the debt. This contention is answered in effect by what we have already said. Whether as principal or surety, she bound herself to the bank for the whole debt,—mortgaged her property for the whole debt,—and her liability extends to the whole debt.

Decree affirmed.

236]*RICHARD BONG, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ALFRED S. CAMPBELL ART COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 236-248.)

Copyright—transfer of right.

1. An author of a painting, who, not being a citizen or subject of a foreign state 53 L. ed.

with which the United States has copyright relations, is excluded by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1107, chap. 565, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406), § 13, from the benefit of copyright, cannot convey such right to a person whose citizenship is such as to satisfy the provisions of that section. [For other cases, see Copyright, 11. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Copyright—who may have—aliens.

2. The action of the President is a condition of the right of a foreign citizen to the benefits of the act of March 3, 1891, § 13, giving the right of copyright to citizens of a foreign state when such state permits to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens, or is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States may, at its pleasure, become a party, the existence of such condition to be determined by the President by proclamation, made from time to time, as the purposes of the act may require.

[Persons entitled to copyright, see Copyright, 1. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 150.]

Argued and submitted April 15, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, directing a verdict for defendant in an action for the infringement of a copyright. Affirmed.

See same case below, 83 C. C. A. 576, 155 Fed. 116.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Max J. Kohler argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Since § 4952, of U. S. Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406, was first enacted in the revision of July 8, 1870, the "proprietor" or "assign" of the author, as well as the author himself, has been permitted to take out a copyright in his own name, the act of 1870 expressly interpolating the word "proprietor" when paintings were first made copyrightable.

American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 296-299, 52 L. ed. 208, 216-218, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595, affirming 76 C. C. A. 647, 146 Fed. 375; Werckmeister v. Pierce & B. Mfg. Co. 63 Fed. 449; Werckmeister v. Springer Lithographing Co. 63 Fed. 810; Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. 142 Fed. 830; Mifflin v. R. H. White Co. 190 U. S. 260, 262, 47 L. ed. 1040, 1042, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136; Parton v. Prang, 3 Cliff. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 10,784; Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 658, 32 L. ed. 547, 559, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

If it had been the intention of Congress to limit copyright to the work of authors of the specified countries, it could easily have said so.

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

The experience and legislation of the rest of the civilized world, antedating the framing of this act, led to the adoption of a policy protecting works published in a country, as well as those by native authors or artists, and it was undoubtedly the purpose of Congress to adopt such policy.

White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 209 U. S. 14, 15, 52 L. ed. 660, 661, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844.

Construction by the Librarian of Congress, if as contended for by defendant, is obviously wrong, and is not uniform, long established, nor reasonable, so as to be entitled to any weight as an alleged departmental construction.

United States v. Graham, 110 U. S. 219, 28 L. ed. 126, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; United States v. Tanner, 147 U. S. 661, 37 L. ed. 321, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Even before the International Copyright Law Amendment of 1891, it is submitted that the proprietor of a painting who was himself a citizen or resident of the United States could have secured a copyright, even though the artist may have been a nonresident alien, but the rule was different as to books and other articles enumerated in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4971, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3416, because of the express provisions of that section.

Drone, Copyright, pp. 231, 232; Darras, Du Droit des Auteurs & des Artistes dans les Rapports Internationaux, Paris, 1887; Philipp, Bulletin de l'Association Littéraire et Artistique Internationale, Series 2, No. 3, p. 102.

This supposed disability of alienage is a personal one, which Congress, of course, could, and doubtless intended to, abolish, as various states have done as to realty, in favor of the acquisition of such property rights by a citizen of the United States or of a country with which we have copyright relations. Even the most familiar examples of this disability, an alien's lack of capacity to own land, was cured by assignment or descent from the alien, even at common law.

Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 505, 38 L. ed. 532, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; United States v.

Southern P. R. Co. 88 Fed. 832; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 70-72.

The common-law copyrights, before publication, of the painter or owner of a painting or other copyrightable objects, are, of course, well established.

Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. 68 L.R.A. 591, 69 C. C. A. 553, 134 Fed. 321; Parton v. Prang, 3 Cliff. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 10,784; Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. 142 Fed. 827; Turner v. Robinson, 10 Ir. Ch. Rep. 121, 510; Oertel v. Wood, 40 How. Pr. 10, Prince Alhert v. Strange, 2 DeG. & S. 652; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 51 L.R.A. 353, 19 C. C. A. 429, 38 U. S. App. 410, 73 Fed. 196, appeal dismissed in 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Palmer v. De Witt, 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Thomas v. Lennon, 14 Fed. 849; The Iolanthe Case, 15 Fed. 439; The Mikado Case, 25 Fed. 183; Globe Newspaper Co. v. Walker, 210 U. S. 356, 52 L. ed. 1096, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; see also Mansell v. Valley Printing Co. [1908] 1 Ch. 568, affirmed in [1908] 2 Ch. 441.

This rule of law as to common-law copyright is not limited, in any way, under the American authorities, to productions by American authors or painters.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 519; Palmer v. De Witt, supra; Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Keene v. Wheatley, 4 Phila. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 7,644; Thomas v. Lennon, 14 Fed. 849; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480; French v. Maguire, 55 How. Pr. 471; Shook v. Daly, 49 How. Pr. 366.

International copyright arrangements should be most liberally construed and enforced.

Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 437, 46 L. ed. 264, 270, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Osgood v. Felsenheld, LeDroit, d'Auteur, 1898, pp. 45-49; Briggs, International Copyright, p. 522; Sarpy v. Holland [1908] 2 Ch. 198.

The court below erred in holding that the statute involved declares a penalty which is a very noxious thing, and requires a strict construction designed to avoid it, if possible.

Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. 142 Fed. 827; Myers v. Callaghan, 5 Fed. 726, 10 Biss. 139, 20 Fed. 441; Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co. 188 U. S. 239, 47 L. ed. 460, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 265, 44 L. ed. 156, 157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; United States v. One Pearl Necklace, 56 L.R.A. 130, 49 C. C. A. 287, 111 Fed. 172; United States v. Shapleigh, 4 C. C. A. 237, 12 U. S. App. 26, 54 Fed. 126; Atlanta v. Chattanooga Foundry & Pipeworks, 64 L.R.A. 721, 61 C. C. A. 387, 127 Fed. 23.

The court's argument below that, because colorable assignments might be resorted to, the statute should be construed to deny copyright to works produced by citizens of countries outside the President's copyright proclamation, is untenable.

Carte v. Evans, 27 Fed. 861; Black v. Henry G. Allen Co. 9 L.R.A. 433, 42 Fed. 620.

It is now well settled that a transfer of common-law copyright in a painting entitled the transferee to take out a copyright, though he does not own the physical painting; but the question was still doubtful when this case was tried below.

American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 296-299, 52 L. ed. 208, 216-218, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595, affirming 76 C. C. A. 647, 146 Fed. 375.

Surely an assign of the American copyright rights is entitled in his own behalf to copyright the painting.

Goldmark v. Kreling, 35 Fed. 661; G. & C. Merriam Co. v. United Dictionary Co. 76 C. C. A. 470, 146 Fed. 354; Werckmeister v. Springer Lithographing Co. 63 Fed. 808; Palmer v. De Witt, 47 N. Y. 541, 7 Am. Rep. 480.

Such is the usual course with respect to transfer of American rights. Even if the copyright were held in part by him for the benefit of persons other than plaintiff, he would be entitled to take out the copyright in his own name.

Press Pub. Co. v. Falk, 59 Fed. 324; Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136; Wooster v. Crane, 77 C. C. A. 211, 147 Fed. 515; Goldmark v. Kreling, supra; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 545, 546; Mifflin v. R. H. White Co. 190 U. S. 260, 47 L. ed. 1040, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Ford v. Charles E. Blancy Amusement Co. 148 Fed. 642; Harper & Bros. v. M. A. Donohue & Co. 144 Fed. 494; Osgood v. Felsenheld, supra.

Copyright protection is accorded when the fact exists, and the President's proclamation, specified in an independent sentence, is merely made a convenient, directory manner of proclaiming and proving the fact. An erroneous failure to issue the proclamation does not prevent copyright from vesting, as the legislative will cannot thus be disregarded.

Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Campbell v. United States, 107 U. S. 410, 27 L. ed. 594, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; United States v. Dominici, 24 C. C. A. 116, 45 U. S. App. 255, 78 Fed. 334; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 496, 48 L. ed. 525, 535, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 461, 462, 52 L. ed. 278, 296, 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The court erred in dismissing the complaint, on the opening of counsel, against plaintiff's objections.

Oscanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539; Hoffman House v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 348, 65 N. E. 169; Kennedy v. White, 91 App. Div. 475, 86 N. Y. Supp. 852; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 32, 28 L. ed. 923, 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Van Stone v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 142 U. S. 128, 134, 35 L. ed. 961, 963, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; Butler v. National Home, 144 U. S. 64, 72, 73, 36 L. ed. 346, 351, 352, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Mr. George Ryall submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Hernandez, being a citizen and subject of Peru, could not have obtained a copyright in this country, and most assuredly he could not assign a right which never existed.

Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. 142 Fed. 831; Werckmeister v. Springer Lithographing Co. 63 Fed. 811; Yuengling v. Schile, 20 Blatchf. 452, 12 Fed. 97.

The Librarian of Congress has always construed our statute as denying to citizens of Peru copyright protection, and that the assignee of one who could not obtain a copyright could not obtain one; and this construction of the statute is most reasonable, well established, and entitled to great weight as a departmental construction.

United States v. Graham, 110 U. S. 219, 28 L. ed. 126, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; United States v. Tanner, 147 U. S. 661, 37 L. ed. 321, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

This is an action for a penalty, and under a statute highly penal in its nature. And the statute should be strictly construed against the plaintiff.

Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

In order to entitle an assignee to the benefit of the statute of copyright, the assignment must have been made by one himself entitled to copyright.

Koppel v. Downing, 11 App. D. C. 93; Banks v. Manchester, 128 U. S. 244, 32 L. ed. 425, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Yuengling v. Schile, 20 Blatchf. 452, 12 Fed. 103.

When Hernandez assigned to Bong he had no common-law rights of copyright for he had parted with the ownership of the painting, and no application for copyright had been made by him or by the proprietor of the painting.

Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 8 L. ed. 1055; Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447, 454, 15 L. ed. 155, 158; American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 291, 52 L. ed. 208, 214, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595; Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 85, 43 L. ed. 904, 905, 19 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 606; Banks v. Manchester, 128 U. S. 244, 252, 32 L. ed. 425, 428, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 151, 33 L. ed. 76, 86, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action under the copyright statutes to recover penalties and forfeitures for the infringement of a copyright of a painting.

The complaint shows the following facts: Plaintiff in error (as he was plaintiff in the trial court, we shall refer to him hereafter as plaintiff, and to defendant in error as defendant) was a citizen and subject of the German Empire and resident of the city of Berlin, that nation being one which permits to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens. It is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States may, at its pleasure, become a party, 243] the existence of *which condition has been determined by the President of the United States by proclamation duly made. 27 Stat. at L. 1021. The defendant is a New Jersey corporation doing business in New York under the laws of the latter state.

In 1899 one Daniel Hernandez painted and designed a painting called "Dolce Far Niente," he then being a citizen and subject of Spain, which nation permits the benefit of copyright to citizens of the United States on substantially the same basis as its own citizens, as has been determined by the proclamation of the President of the United States. 29 Stat. at L. 871. Prior to November 8, 1902, plaintiff became the sole proprietor of said painting by due assignment pursuant to law. About said date plaintiff applied for a copyright, in conformity with the laws of the United States respecting copyrights, before the publication of the painting or any copy thereof. Plaintiff inscribed, and has kept inscribed, upon a visible portion of the painting, the words "Copyright by Rich. Bong." and also upon every copy thereof. By reason of the premises, it is alleged, plaintiff became and was entitled, for the term of twenty-eight years, to the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, and vending the painting. A violation of the copyright by defendant is alleged by printing, exposing for sale, and selling, copies of the painting under the name of "Sunbeam," by Hernandez, and that defendant has in its possession over 1,000 copies. By reason of the premises, it is alleged, and under § 4965 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895 [28

Stat. at L. 965, chap. 194, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3414], defendant has forfeited the plates on which the painting is copied and every sheet thereof copied or printed, and $10 for every copy of the same in its possession and by it sold or exposed for sale, not more, however, than $10,000, whereof one half shall go to plaintiff and the other half to the United States. Judgment of forfeiture is prayed.

Defendant answered, admitting that it was a corporation, as alleged, and was doing business in New York. It denied, either absolutely or upon information and belief, all other allegations.

*The court directed a verdict for the [244 defendant, counsel for the plaintiff having stated in his opening, as it is admitted, that he would offer no evidence to establish the citizenship of Hernandez, and would not controvert the statement made by the defense that he was a citizen of Peru (it was alleged in the complaint that he was a citizen of Spain), as to which country the President had issued no copyright proclamation. It is also admitted that plaintiff never owned the "physical painting." There was introduced in evidence a conveyance of the right to enter the painting for copyright protection in America, and the exclusive right of reproduction in colors, and of engraving, etching, lithography in black and in colors. The right of photography and reproduction by all photographic monochrome processes was reserved.

The ruling of the circuit court, and that of the court of appeals sustaining it, were based on the ground that Hernandez, being a citizen of Peru, and not having the right of copyright in the United States, could convey no right to plaintiff. Plaintiff attacks this ruling, and contends that the act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 1106, chap. 565, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406], "confers copyright where the person applying for the same as proprietor or assign of the author or proprietor is a subject of a country with which we have copyright relations, whether the author be a subject of one of those countries or not."

Whatever strength there is in the contention must turn upon the words of the statute conferring the copyright. Section 4952 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 1107, chap. 565, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406] (1 U. S. Rev. Stat. Supp. 951), reads as follows:

"The author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of any book, map, chart, . . . painting . . . and the executors, administrators, or assigns of any such person, shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same," etc.

Other sections prescribe the proceedings to be taken to secure copyright, and § 13 provides as follows:

245] "That this act shall only apply to a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation when such foreign state or nation permits to citizens of the United States of America the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens; or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may, at its pleasure, become a party to such agreement. The existence of either of the conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation, made from time to time, as the purposes of this act may require."* 1 U. S. Rev. Stat. Supp. 954.

Plaintiff urges that he is "the 'assign' of the author and proprietor of the painting . . . and being himself a 'citizen or subject of a foreign nation' with which we have copyright relations," the condition of the statute is satisfied, and his copyright is valid, though Hernandez was not such citizen or subject. In other words, though the author of a painting has not the right to copyright, his assignee has if he is a citizen or subject of a foreign state with which we have copyright relations, these being, it is contended, the conditions expressed in § 13. Counsel's argument in support of this contention is able, but we are saved from a detailed consideration of it by the decision of this court in American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 52 L. ed. 208, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595. In that case we said that "the purpose of the copyright law is not so much the protection and control of the visible thing as to secure a monopoly, having a limited time, of the right to publish the production, which is the result of the inventor's thought." In considering who was entitled to such right under the statute, we defined the word "assigns," as used in the statute. We said: "It seems clear that the word 'assigns,' in this section is not used as descriptive of the character of the estate which the 'author, inventor, designer, or proprietor' may acquire under the statute, for the 'assigns' of any such person, as well as the persons themselves, may, 'upon complying with 246] the provisions *of this chapter,' have the sole liberty of printing, publishing, and vending the same. This would seem to demonstrate the intention of Congress to vest in 'assigns,' before copyright, the same privilege of subsequently acquiring complete statutory copyright as the original author, inventor, designer, or proprietor," and there was an explicit definition of the right transferred as follows: "While it is true that the property in copyright in this country is the creation of statute, the nature and character of the property grows out of the recognition of the separate ownership of the right of copying from that which inheres in the mere physical control of the thing itself, and the statute must be read in the light of the intention of Congress to protect this intangible right as a reward of the inventive genius that has produced the work." In other words, an assignee within the meaning of the statute is one who receives a transfer, not necessarily of the painting, but of the right to multiply copies of it. And such right does not depend alone upon the statute, as contended by plaintiff, but is a right derived from the painter and secured by the statute to the assignee of the painter's right. Of this the opinion leaves no doubt, for it is further said: "We think every consideration of the nature of the property and the things to be accomplished supports the conclusion that this statute means to give to the assigns of the original owner of the right to copyright an article [italics ours] the right to take out the copyright secured by the statute independently of the ownership of the article itself." The same idea was repeated when the court came to consider whether the exhibition of the painting, which was the subject-matter of the case, in the Royal Gallery, constituted a general publication which deprived the painter, as the owner of the copyright, of the benefit of the statutory provision. It was said: "Considering this feature of the case, it is well to remember that the property of the author or painter in his intellectual creation is absolute until he voluntarily parts with the same." And the painter had the right of copyright, he being a subject of Great Britain, that country having copyright relations with *the United States. His as-[247 signee, Werckmeister, was also a citizen of a country having copyright relations with us. But it was the right of the painter which was made prominent in the case and determined its decision.

It was not an abstract right the court passed on, one that arose simply from ownership of the painting. It was the right given by the statute, and which, when transferred, constituted the person to whom it was transferred an assignee under the statute and of the rights which the statute conferred on the assignor. "It is the physical thing created, or the right of printing, publishing, copying, etc., which is within the statutory protection." It is this right of multiplication of copies that is asserted in the case at bar, and it is not necessary to consider what right plaintiff might have had under the common law "before he sought his Federal copyright and published the painting." See White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 209 U. S. 1, 52 L. ed. 655, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319.

It is next contended that Hernandez, as a subject of Peru, was entitled to a statutory copyright in his own right, because, as it is further contended, Peru belongs to the Montevideo International Union. This contention is based on the words of § 13, supra, which gives the right of copyright to a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation when such state or nation "is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States of America may, at its pleasure, become a party to such agreement." If this were all there were in the statute, the contention of the plaintiff might have some foundation. The statute, however, provides that the existence of such condition "shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation, made from time to time, as the purposes" of the "act may require." It is insisted, however, that this provision is directory, and a right is conferred independent of the action of the President, his proclamation being only a convenient mode of proving the fact. We cannot concur in this view, nor do the cases 248] cited by plaintiff *sustain it. In Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Campbell v. United States, 107 U. S. 407, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, this court decided that where the Secretary of the Treasury or Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make regulations in aid of the law, he cannot make regulations which defeat the law. In Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, a regulation of the Secretary of the Treasury fixed the primary standard of imported tea, and was sustained as an "executive duty to effectuate the legislative policy declared in the statute."

It is admitted that the decision of the state department is adverse to the contention, and it is asserted by defendant, and not denied by plaintiff, that the Librarian of Congress has always construed the statutes as denying to citizens of Peru copyright protection. We think, besides, the statute is clear, and makes the President's proclamation a condition of the right. And there was reason for it. The statute contemplated a reciprocity of rights; and what officer is better able to determine the conditions upon which they might depend than the President?

On the record, we think there was no error in directing a verdict on the opening statement of counsel. We agree, however, with plaintiff, that it is better to let a case be developed by evidence. In Hoffman House v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 348, 65 N. E. 169, it was pertinently said: "The practice of disposing of cases upon the mere opening of counsel is generally a very unsafe method of deciding controversies where there is or was anything to decide."

Judgment affirmed.

*EUGENE C. KREIGH, Petitioner, [249
v.
WESTINGHOUSE, CHURCH, KERR, & COMPANY.

(See 3. C. Reporter's ed. 249-259.)

Removal of causes — nonresidence of both parties — waiver.

1. Making up the issues on the merit, without objection waives the right to object, because of the nonresidence of both parties within the district, to the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court to which the cause has been removed from the state court for diverse citizenship.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, 287, 288, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — sufficiency of evidence of negligence to go to jury.

2. Expert testimony that the proper construction of a derrick required that its boom be rigged with two ropes, or that the mast be provided with a lever by which the swing of the boom can be controlled, is sufficient to carry to the jury the question whether an injury to a workman who was struck by the swinging bucket of a derrick not so equipped was not attributable to faults of construction and equipment as well as to negligent operation by fellow servants. [For other cases, see Trial, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE. — As to the proper Federal district for suit—see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 33 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On waiver of right as to Federal district in which suit may be brought—see note to Memphis Sav. Bank v. Houchens, 52 C. C. A. 192.

As to the relation of the doctrine of proximate cause to the rule of liability of a master for injuries to his servant, caused by combined negligence of the master and a fellow servant—see notes to Lutz v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. 16 L.R.A. 819, and Maupin v. Texas & P. R. Co. 40 C. C. A. 236.

On contributory negligence as question of law or fact—see note to Northern P. R. Co. v. Egeland, 41 L. ed. U. S. 82.

Master and servant—concurrent negligence of master and fellow servant.

3. Concurring negligence of fellow servants does not exclude the master's liability if his negligence in failing to provide and maintain a safe place to work contributed to the injury.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial—question of law or fact—contributory negligence.

4. Whether an employee, injured while in the direct line of his duty by the swinging bucket of a derrick, had reason to expect that such bucket might swing across the place where he was at work, without notice or warning, or whether due regard for his own safety required him to keep a constant lookout for its approach, are questions for the jury to determine under proper instructions.

[For other cases, see Trial, 298-417, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 188.]

Argued April 27, 28, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Kansas, sustaining a demurrer to evidence in an action for negligent injury to an employee, which had been removed to that court from the District Court of Wyandotte County in the state of Kansas. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

See same case below, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 684, 61 C. C. A. 338, 152 Fed. 120.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. James S. Botsford and Rees Murpin argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

Plaintiff's injury was the natural and probable result of, and should have been anticipated from the lack of, a code of signals and the lack of a lever on the derrick with which to swing the boom, or of a guy rope on the north side to draw it across the wall. And, as the accident could have been foreseen to be the natural or probable result of the failure to provide signals, lever, or guy ropes, the defendant owed the plaintiff the duty to do so, and was guilty of actionable negligence.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 386, 37 L. ed. 772, 780, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ward, 10 C. C. A. 166, 18 U. S. App. 683, 61 Fed. 927; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Powers v. Harlow, 53 Mich. 507, 51 Am. Rep. 154, 19 N. W. 257; Colusa-Parrot Min. & Smelting Co. v. Monahan, 89 C. C. A. 256, 162 Fed. 276.

53 L. ed.

The duty of the defendant in the construction of the derrick and provision for signals and warnings could not have been affected by the question whether the roofers were notified or actually knew of the presence of the plaintiff or of his brick men.

Lang v. Terry, 163 Mass. 138, 39 N. E. 802.

Nor only was plaintiff ignorant of the defendant's failure to provide for his safety, but the law cast no obligation upon him to become familiar with it.

Newark Electric Light & P. Co. v. Garden, 37 L.R.A. 725, 23 C. C. A. 649, 39 U. S. App. 416, 78 Fed. 74; Swoboda v. Ward, 40 Mich. 420; United States Smelting Co. v. Parry, 166 Fed. 407.

The absolute duty of the master to provide a safe place is not avoided by the neglect of his representative or servants to do the things which will obviously prevent the known original danger.

Grace & H. Co. v. Kennedy, 40 C. C. A. 69, 99 Fed. 682; National Ref. Co. v. Willis, 74 C. C. A. 301, 143 Fed. 107; F. C. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 32 C. C. A. 309, 60 U. S. App. 661, 89 Fed. 677.

If the negligence of the master in failing to provide a sufficient or proper appliance and a safe place is a contributing cause of the injury, the fact that the negligence of fellow servants may also contribute is no defense.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 266, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Brice-Nash v. Barton Salt Co. (Kan.) 19 L.R.A. (N.S.) 749, 98 Pac. 768.

Where the servants engaged in a department of work themselves change the condition of the place where they are employed by the work they are doing, and by that work create a peril by reason of which one of their number engaged in the same department of work is injured, the master is not liable.

Armour v. Hahn, 111 U. S. 313, 28 L. ed. 440, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

The reason of the rule is that the master should not be liable for an injury caused by the working place becoming "unsafe at the particular time of the accident by causes that could not have been anticipated, or by sudden exigencies created in carrying on the details of the work."

Grace & H. Co. v. Kennedy, supra.

When the plan or method of doing the work directed by the master, or any omission of the master, creates a danger not necessarily attendant upon the work in which the servant is engaged, the master is liable for the results of that danger, although it arises in the progress of the work.

Woods v. Lindvall, 1 C. C. A. 37, 4 U. S. App. 49, 48 Fed. 62.

The reason fails and the rule does not apply to cases where one set of workmen, during the progress of the work, create a dangerous condition, and that condition is permitted to exist, and another servant, in a different department of work, who had nothing to do with the creation of the dangerous condition, and who had no knowledge of it, is injured by it.

Thompson-Starrett Co. v. Fitzgerald, 79 C. C. A. 427, 149 Fed. 721.

The rule in regard to dangers created by the progress of the work is stretched beyond all reasonable limits when the master is relieved from all consequences of a known continuing original danger because the progress of the work leads a servant who has no knowledge of the danger into the path of it.

Grace & H. Co. v. Kennedy, supra; Western Electric Co. v. Hanselmann, 70 L.R.A. 765, 69 C. C. A. 346, 136 Fed. 564; Felice v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 14 App. Div. 345, 43 N. Y. Supp. 922; Lang v. Terry, 163 Mass. 138, 39 N. E. 802; McCauley v. Noreross, 155 Mass. 584, 30 N. E. 464; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Tennant, 14 C. C. A. 190, 21 U. S. App. 682, 66 Fed. 922; Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. v. Whelan, 12 C. C. A. 225, 29 U. S. App. 1, 64 Fed. 462.

Mr. Clifford Histed argued the cause, and, with Mr. James H. Harkless, filed a brief for respondent:

The impelling cause for the issuing of the writ of certiorari no longer existing, and the question which suggested its issue having already been finally determined, the writ should be now dismissed.

Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 483, 51 L. ed. 890, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

In so far as it is claimed that the injury to the plaintiff petitioner was brought about by the other workmen upon the building, the doctrine of fellow servant exempts defendant from liability.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Dixon, 194 U. S. 338, 48 L. ed. 1006, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 683; Northern P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 346, 40 L. ed. 994, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Brown, 76 C. C. A. 482, 146 Fed. 24; Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L.R.A. 416, 59 C. C. A. 593, 124 Fed. 113.

The duty of the master is not always to furnish the latest or even the most approved means, appliances, and tools. His duty is performed when the appliances which he does furnish are reasonably safe and calculated to perform the function for which they are designed. Neither is it the duty of the master to see, at his peril, that the appliances and means of safety furnished by him are actually used by his employees. He performs his full duty in that regard when he supplies them.

American Bridge Co. v. Seeds, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1041, 75 C. C. A. 407, 144 Fed. 605.

Plaintiff's own negligence contributed to his injury.

Ross v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 113 Mo. App. 600, 88 S. W. 144; National Biscuit Co. v. Nolan, 70 C. C. A. 436, 138 Fed. 6.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here upon a writ of certiorari to the United States circuit of appeals for the eighth circuit. The action was originally brought to recover for injuries received by Eugene C. Kreigh, petitioner, hereinafter called the plaintiff, while engaged in the employ of the respondent, Westinghouse, Church, Kerr, & Company, hereinafter called the defendant, superintending the construction of the brickwork in the erection of a brick and steel building for which the defendant was the contractor.

The case was originally commenced in the district court of Wyandotte county, Kansas. On the application of the defendant it was removed to the United States circuit court for the district of Kansas. In the petition for the allowance of the writ of certiorari a question was made as to the jurisdiction of the Federal court, as it appears that at the time of the removal neither party was a resident nor citizen of the Federal district to which the case was removed, and neither of them a resident nor citizen of the state of Kansas. But it appears that no motion was made to remand for want of jurisdiction in the Federal court, and no question as to the jurisdiction was made until the case came here. In that state of the record the defect as to the jurisdiction being simply as to the district to which the suit was removed, the parties being citizens of different states, the *objection as to the juris-[253] diction might be, and, in our opinion, was, waived, by making up the issues on the merits without objection as to the jurisdiction of the court. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon this feature of the case, as it is controlled by the recent cases of Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706; Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 210 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 1101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720.

The remaining question in the case concerns the correctness of the ruling of the circuit court, affirmed in the court of appeals, whereby, upon the conclusion of the evidence offered by the plaintiff, a demurrer thereto was sustained and the case taken from the jury.

The testimony shows, and, in deciding a question of this character, the view must be taken of it most favorable to the plaintiff, that he was foreman of the bricklayers engaged in the construction of a large brick building which the defendant, as principal contractor, was erecting in Kansas City. About the time of the plaintiff's injury a gang of workmen, also employees of the defendant, were engaged in cementing the roof of the building, the plaintiff and his men being engaged in laying the brickwork of the north wall of the building. The roofers were laying concrete upon the top of the roof. This was accomplished by means of a derrick with a rope and bucket attachment for raising the material, which was on the ground on the north side of the building, and which, by means of the derrick and motive power, was raised in the bucket suspended from the boom, or arm, of the derrick, to a height slightly above the roof, and then pulled inward by means of a guy rope attached to the boom, and, when the bucket was at the proper place, the bottom of it was opened and the concrete deposited upon the roof. Then, in order to put the bucket in position for lowering it, it was swung out over the north wall by means of an energetic push, carrying the end of the boom over the north wall and in position for lowering the bucket again. The work of bricklaying under the superintendence of the plaintiff had progressed to a height of about 40 feet in the north wall, and the plaintiff, superintending the erection of a scaffolding 254]for *the men to work upon in the further construction of the wall, was standing upon a plank near the wall, when the boom was swung outward by a push from the men operating it, and the plaintiff was struck by the heavy bucket attached to the rope from the end of the boom, and was knocked off the plank and fell a distance of 40 feet to the ground, and thereby severely injured.

The testimony shows that the derrick used for the purposes stated was what is known as a "stiff-legged derrick," having a main staff supported by two stiff legs or braces with a swinging boom with hoisting rope attached to it. The derrick at the time was on the top of the roof, and was operated by an engine furnishing the power for hoisting the bucket in the manner we have already described.

The plaintiff introduced testimony tending to show that the usual method of constructing such derricks was to provide them with two ropes, one attached on either side of the end of the boom, to be used to haul it back and forth, and for the purpose of steadying its operation; or by the attachment of a lever to the mast in such a way that a man operating the lever could control the swing of the boom. The boom in use had but the one guy rope, and that the testimony shows was used for hauling the loaded bucket over the top of the wall to the place where the load was dumped on the roof. The method of returning the bucket for lowering was by a strong push of the boom, the single guy rope thereof hanging loose at the time.

The testimony of the plaintiff tended to show that while he knew there was a derrick on the roof, he did not know of its method of operation further than he knew that it was operated by hand. He did not know the number of ropes attached to the boom, or whether there was a lever or not; he had not seen the boom in operation from the roof. At the time he was struck, when working on the north wall, he received no warning of the approach of the bucket, and had been there but a very short time when he was struck by the bucket and knocked to the ground.

*In the amended petition it was [255 charged as grounds for recovery that—

"1. The defendants were careless and negligent in furnishing and operating a defective, improper, and unsafe derrick to raise, move, and lower said tub or bucket.

"(a) Said derrick was so constructed and operated that there was no means of moving the arm thereof and said bucket or tub after it was emptied, horizontally to or over the north wall of said building, excepting by the employees of the defendants violently pushing the tub or bucket with sufficient force to cause it to clear the wall of the building, and also move with it said arm.

"(b) Said derrick was so constructed and operated that there were no means of stopping or controlling it or the tub or bucket attached thereto after the bucket or tub was emptied and started toward and over the wall of said building.

"(c) The ropes and pulleys on said derrick were defective, insecure, and improperly arranged and used.

"2. The defendants were careless and negligent in causing and allowing said bucket to be violently pushed and swung against the plaintiff without notice or warning to him.

"3. The defendants were careless and negligent in failing to supply and use a system of signals or warnings to notify persons on the building when the derrick, tub, or bucket were to be moved, raised, or lowered.

The duty of the master to use reasonable diligence in providing a safe place for the men in his employ to work in and to carry on the business of the master for which they are engaged has been so frequently applied in this court, and is now so thoroughly settled, as to require but little reference to the cases in which the doctrine has been declared.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 87, 39 L. ed. 624, 629, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 161 U. S. 451, 40 L. ed. 766, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 96, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

The employee is not obliged to examine into the employer's methods of transacting 256] his business, and he may assume, in the absence of notice to the contrary, that reasonable care will be used in furnishing appliances necessary to carrying on the business. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 68, 48 L. ed. 96, 100, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24. But while this duty is imposed upon the master, and he cannot delegate it to another and escape liability on his part, nevertheless, the master is not held responsible for injuries resulting from the place becoming unsafe through the negligence of the workmen in the manner of carrying on the work, where he, the master, has discharged his primary duty of providing a reasonably safe appliance and place for his employees to carry on the work, nor is he obliged to keep the place safe at every moment, so far as such safety depends on the due performance of the work by the servant and his fellow workmen. Armour v. Hahn, 111 U. S. 313, 28 L. ed. 440, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Perry v. Rogers, 157 N. Y. 251, 51 N. E. 1021.

Nevertheless, the duty of providing a reasonably safe place for the carrying on of the work is a continuing one, and is discharged only when the master furnishes and maintains a place of that character. As late as Santa Fe & P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 202 U. S. 438, 50 L. ed. 1094, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, it was declared: "The duty is a continuing one and must be exercised whenever circumstances demand it."

Where workmen are engaged in a business more or less dangerous, it is the duty of the master to exercise reasonable care for the safety of all his employees, and not to expose them to the danger of being hurt or injured by the use of a dangerous appliance or unsafe place to work, where it is only a matter of using due skill and care to make the place and appliances safe. There is no reason why an employee should be exposed to dangers unnecessary to the proper operation of the business of his employer. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 66, 48 L. ed. 96, 99, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24, and cases there cited.

As we have said, this case was taken from the jury when only the plaintiff's evidence had been introduced, and when the plaintiff had the right to have it submitted to the jury in its most favorable aspect if it fairly 257] tended to show liability on the part of the master. The plaintiff's witnesses, experts in this field of operation, testified that the proper construction and management of such a derrick required that its boom should be rigged with two guy ropes instead of one, or that the mast should be provided with a lever by means of which the men in control could safely operate the boom. In that view we think it was a question for the jury to determine whether the operation of this derrick, which would swing the bucket into the field of operations where the plaintiff and others were constructing the wall, and might be injured unless the operation of the boom were properly controlled, was not attributable to faults of construction and equipment, as well as to negligent operation at the time of injury.

It is contended by the defendant that the boom could have been safely operated with one rope had the men used care in the operation thereof. But, in view of the testimony referred to, we think it was a question for the jury to determine whether the character of derrick furnished by the master discharged his obligation to furnish and maintain for the plaintiff and his associates a reasonably safe place in which to labor, and whether that kind of derrick was not of itself a dangerous instrumentality when operated where others were likely to labor in the course of their employment.

If the negligence of the master in failing to provide and maintain a safe place to work contributed to the injury received by the plaintiff the master would be liable, notwithstanding the concurring negligence of those performing the work. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 266, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Deserant v. Cerillos Coal R. Co. 178 U. S. 409, 420, 44 L. ed. 1127, 1133, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967, and cases there cited.

It is further argued that the testimony shows that the injuries to the plaintiff were solely caused by the negligence of the men operating the derrick in giving it a sudden and strong push toward the north wall, where the plaintiff was standing when injured, and it is contended that the derrick could not have injured the plaintiff but for the negligent operation *thereof by the [258 fellow servants of the plaintiff using the same. But here again we think the question, was one for the jury to determine.

Questions of negligence do not become questions of law, to be decided by the court, except "where the facts are such that all reasonable men must draw the same conclusion from them; or, in other words, a case should not be withdrawn from the jury unless the conclusion follows as matter of law that no recovery can be had upon any view which can be properly taken of the facts the evidence tends to establish." Gardner v.

Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 361, 37 L. ed. 1107, 1110, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

It may be that the jury would have found that the injury to the plaintiff was the result solely of the negligence of his fellow servants, but there was testimony in the case tending to establish the unsafe character of the derrick when operated in the manner it was intended to be operated, so far as the record discloses. Of course, so long as there were no workmen in the probable swing of the bucket attached by the rope to the boom, there was no danger to the bricklayers. But a jury might have found that when the bricklayers came within the plane of operation of the derrick, the swinging bucket became a constant menace to them, and they might consider that, in view of the testimony adduced, the duty of the master had not been discharged in furnishing an appliance the operation of which might make unsafe the place in which the workmen were engaged in carrying in their work. The mere fact that until the workmen came within the plane of operation of the boom and swinging bucket, there was no danger to them, would not affect the case, in view of the continuing duty of the master to use reasonable care to keep the place where the workmen were engaged free from dangers not necessarily incident to the business. In other words, we think that upon this branch of the case it was a question for the jury to determine whether the alleged defective appliances contributed directly to produce the injuries complained of.

But it is insisted that the testimony shows 259] that the plaintiff *was guilty of such contributory negligence as should prevent any recovery. But we think there was enough in the case to take it to the jury upon this branch of it. The testimony shows that the plaintiff was engaged in the direct line of his duty at the time of his injury. Whether he had reason to expect the swinging of the bucket across the place where he was at work, without notice or warning to him, or whether he ought to have expected that the bucket would swing where he was at work, and that his own safety required him to keep a constant lookout for the approach of the same, were questions for the jury to determine under proper instructions as to the care required of the plaintiff as well as of the defendant. Lang v. Terry, 163 Mass. 138, 39 N. E. 802.

Upon the whole case, we are of opinion that, as the testimony stood at the time the case was arrested from the jury, there was enough in it to require its submission, under proper instructions from the court, to the jury to determine the questions involved. In this view we think it was error to take the case from the jury and to instruct for the defendant in the circuit court, and that the circuit court of appeals erred in affirming that judgment.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded to the Circuit Court with directions to grant a new trial.

Reversed.

*JOSÉ ELIAS SANTIAGO and Ana[260
Matilde Gonzales, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

ANTONIO PONS NOGUERAS, Juan Pons Colon, and Amador Pons Colon, Doing Business under the Name of Pons & Company, and the American Colonial Bank.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 260-268.)

War—military power in ceded territory—establishing provisional court.

1. The creation of the United States provisional court for Porto Rico between April 11, 1899, when the ratifications of the treaty of peace by which Porto Rico was ceded to the United States were exchanged, and May 1, 1900, when the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191), establishing a civil government in Porto Rico, took effect, was within the scope of the military power, acting by the authority of the President as Commander in Chief, although peace then prevailed, and the courts established under the Spanish sovereignty were open.

[For other cases, see War, VI. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts—jurisdiction of Porto Rico provisional court—diverse citizenship.

2. A controversy between a Porto Rican and a Spaniard furnishes the diversity of citizenship which the order establishing the United States provisional court for Porto Rico made jurisdictional.

[Jurisdiction of insular courts, see Courts, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Writ and process—service.

3. Service of the process of the United States provisional court for Porto Rico by delivering the summons at the usual place of defendant's abode, into the hands of his wife, is sufficient, such service being in strict accordance with the procedure established by that court.

[Service of process, see Writ and Process, III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment—collateral attack.

4. Whether or not the United States provisional court for Porto Rico lost jurisdiction of a cause and of the parties because, in the course of its proceedings, it disre-

NOTE.—On the effect of acquisition of territory by United States on laws and property rights therein—see note to Re Chavez, 80 C. C. A. 457.

As to what constitutes personal service of process—see note to Wilson v. Trenton, 16 L.R.A. 200.

garded certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which were binding upon it. is a question which cannot be raised by collateral attack on its judgment.
[For other cases, see Judgment, III. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 127.]

Submitted April 7, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of defendants in an action to recover certain parcels of land sold under an execution issued upon a judgment of the United States Provisional Court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 2 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 468.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Charles Hartzell submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. Manuel Rodriguez-Serra was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiffs in error brought in the district court of the United States for Porto Rico an action for the recovery of certain parcels of land held by the defendants in error. There was judgment for the defendants in the court below, and the case is here upon writ of error. We need pay attention only to such facts as will make clear the question which we think is decisive of the case.

One of the plaintiffs once owned the lands in dispute, but they were sold upon an execution issued upon a judgment rendered against him by the United States provisional court. The defendants, by mesne conveyances, hold the title conveyed by the execution sale. The plaintiffs attack that title solely upon the grounds that the United States provisional court had no lawful existence, and if lawfully constituted was entirely without jurisdiction to render the judgment which it did, and that, for the one reason or the other, the judgment is a nullity everywhere.

The ratifications of the treaty of peace by which Porto Rico was ceded to the United States were exchanged April 11, 1899. 30 Stat. at L. 1754. The act of Congress establishing a civil government in Porto Rico, passed April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191), took effect on May 1 of that year. 264] Between these two dates, *on June 27, 1899, the United States provisional court, here in question, was established by military authority, with the approval of the President, by general order No. 88, series of 1899. The parts of the order material here follow:

"1. In view of the existing and steadily increasing legal business requiring judicial determination, which does not fall within the jurisdiction of the local insular courts, such as smuggling goods in evasion of revenue laws, larceny of United States property, controversies between citizens of different states and of foreign states, violation of the United States postal law, etc., etc., and pursuant to authority from the President of the United States, conveyed by indorsement of April 14, 1899, from the Acting Secretary of War, and after full conference with the supreme court and members of the bar of the island, a United States provisional court is hereby established for the department of Porto Rico.

"2. The judicial power of the provisional court hereby established shall extend to all cases which would be properly cognizable by the circuit or district courts of the United States under the Constitution, and to all common-law offenses within the restrictions hereinafter specified."

"10. Civil actions when the amount in controversy is fifty dollars ($50) or over, and in which any of the classes of persons above enumerated in paragraph 8 are parties, or in which the parties litigant by stipulation invoke its jurisdiction, shall be brought in the provisional court: Provided, that, in the determination of all suits to which Porto Ricans are parties, or of suits arising from contracts which have been or shall be made under the provisions of Spanish or Porto Rican laws, the court shall, as far as practicable, conform to the precedents and decisions of the United States courts in similar cases which have been tried and determined in territory formerly acquired by the United States from Spain or Mexico. In all other civil actions the case shall lie within the jurisdiction of the proper insular court as now provided by local law."

By paragraph 11, the losing party is afforded an opportunity *to apply to this [265 court for a "writ of certiorari or other suitable process to review such judgment or decree." At the time this order was issued peace prevailed in Porto Rico, and the courts established under Spanish sovereignty were open.

The plaintiffs contend that the military power, acting by the authority of the President, as Commander in Chief, does not warrant the creation of the United States provisional court.

By the ratifications of the treaty of peace, Porto Rico ceased to be subject to the Crown of Spain, and became subject to the legislative power of Congress. But the civil government of the United States cannot extend immediately and of its own force over conquered and ceded territory. Theoretically, Congress might prepare and enact a scheme of civil government to take effect immediately upon the cession, but, practically, there always have been delays and always will be. Time is required for a study of the situation, and for the maturing and enacting of an adequate scheme of civil government. In the meantime, pending the action of Congress, there is no civil power under our system of government, not even that of the President as civil executive, which can take the place of the government which has ceased to exist by the cession. Is it possible that, under such circumstances, there must be an interregnum? We think clearly not. The authority to govern such ceded territory is found in the laws applicable to conquest and cession. That authority is the military power, under the control of the President as Commander in Chief. In the case of Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164, 14 L. ed. 889, a situation of this kind was referred to in the opinion of the court, where it said; "It [the military authority] was the government when the territory was ceded as a conquest, and it did not cease as a matter of course, or as a necessary consequence of the restoration of peace. The President might have dissolved it by withdrawing the army and navy officers who administered it, but he did not do so. Congress could have put an end to it, but that was not done. The right inference from the inaction of both is that it was meant to be continued until it had been 266] legislatively changed. *No presumption of a contrary intention can be made. Whatever may have been the causes of delay, it must be presumed that the delay was consistent with the true policy of the government." Pp. 193, 194. And see Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 How. 176, 15 L. ed. 891, and opinion of Mr. Justice Gray in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 345, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1128, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The authority of a military government during the period between the cession and the action of Congress, like the authority of the same government before the cession, is of large, though it may not be of unlimited, extent. In fact, certain limits, not material here, were put upon it in Doolley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. ed. 1074, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, and Lincoln v. United States, 197 U. S. 419, 49 L. ed. 816, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455, though it was said in the Doolley Case, page 234: "We have no doubt, however, that, from the necessities of the case, the right to administer the government of Porto Rico continued in the military commander after the ratification of the treaty, and until further action by Congress,"—citing Cross v. Harrison, supra.

But, whatever may be the limits of the 53 L. ed.

military power, it certainly must include the authority to establish courts of justice, which are so essential a part of any government. So it seems to have been thought in Leitensdorfer v. Webb, supra. With this thought in mind, the military power not only established this particular court in Porto Rico, but as well a system of courts which took the place of the courts under Spanish sovereignty, and were continued by the organic act. The same course was pursued in the Philippine Islands.

By § 34 of the organic act (31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191) a district court of the United States for Porto Rico was created, and it was provided that the same "shall be the successor to the United States provisional court established by general orders numbered eighty-eight, promulgated by Brigadier General Davis, United States Volunteers, and shall take possession of all records of that court, and take jurisdiction of all cases and proceedings pending therein, and said United States provisional court is hereby discontinued."

*The record shows that, in conformi-[267 ty with this provision, the newly-created district court of the United States for Porto Rico issued an execution upon this judgment of the United States provisional court, and the property was sold upon that execution.

A further contention of the plaintiffs is that the United States provisional court was without jurisdiction because the diversity of citizenship made requisite by the order did not exist. Assuming, without deciding, that this question is open at this time, we are of the opinion that the citizenship of the parties to the action in the United States provisional court was such as to give that court jurisdiction. The plaintiff there was a Spanish subject and the defendant a citizen and a resident of Porto Rico. Taking the second and the tenth paragraphs into consideration, and the classes of persons enumerated in paragraph 8, which included "foreigners," there can be no doubt that the case was within the jurisdiction which the order sought to confer. In view of the whole order, we think that a controversy between a Porto Rican and a Spaniard furnished the diversity of citizenship which the order made jurisdictional. Undoubtedly, one of the main purposes of the establishment of this court was to afford a court where Spanish subjects could obtain justice against Porto Ricans at a time when it might be feared that the embers of the old disputes between Spaniards and Porto Ricans were still aflame.

The plaintiffs, one of whom was the defendant in the action before the United States provisional court, further suggest that that defendant was not served with process, and never appeared, and that the judgment rendered against him by default was a nullity. This point does not appear to be pressed and there is nothing in it. The service was in strict accordance with the procedure established by the court, and by delivering a summons at the usual place of abode of the defendant, into the hands of his wife.

The plaintiffs further contend that, if the United States provisional court had jurisdiction of the case and the parties, *in some way it had lost it, because, in the course of its proceedings, it disregarded certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which were binding upon it. But clearly no such question is open on a collateral attack, such as this is, and we need delay no further upon that point.

There were other questions in the case, which the view we have taken of it render it unnecessary to consider.

We are of the opinion that the judgment of the United States provisional court was not a nullity, and that the sale on execution, under which the defendants claim, conveyed to them a good title. As the court below took the same view, its judgment is affirmed.

By agreement, Nos. 128, 129, 130 abide the result of this case, and corresponding judgments will be entered in them.

MIGUEL TUPIÑO et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
LA COMPAÑIA GENERAL DE TABACOS
DE FILIPINAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 268-274.)

Appeal—amount in dispute—uniting interests of several parties.

The judgment in an action to recover real property in which plaintiff, although claiming under a single title all the land occupied separately by the various defendants, does not allege joint ownership or joint possession or joint action of any kind, the controversy with each defendant relating to a separate and distinct parcel, does not show an amount in dispute sufficient to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, where such judgment, while apparently rendered jointly, so far as the damages are concerned, against all the defendants, runs separately against each defendant for recovery of possession of that part of the land of which he was alleged and found to be in possession, and the whole amount of the damages added to the value of the land in controversy with any of the defendants does not equal the jurisdictional amount. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 560-566, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 148.]

Argued April 14, 15, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the court of First Instance of the Province of Isabela de Luzon for the restoration of possession of certain lands, for damages, and for an injunction against further disturbance of the plaintiff's rights. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 4 Philippine, 33.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Gittings argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William Steele Grey and Justin M. Chamberlin, filed briefs for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Britton, W. A. Kincaid, and J. H. Blount, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error brought this action for the recovery of certain lands, in the court of first instance of the Philippine Islands, against eighty-four persons, who are now the plaintiffs in error. The prayer of the complaint was for restoration of possession, for damages, and an injunction against further disturbance of the plaintiff's right. The court of first instance rendered judgment for the plaintiff, awarding the relief prayed for, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the Philippine Islands. The case is now here upon writ of error, accompanied by a large number of assignments of error. The defendant in error has moved to dismiss the writ for lack of jurisdiction of this court to entertain it, and that motion must first receive consideration.

The jurisdiction of this court is rested by the plaintiffs in error solely upon the ground that the value of the real estate in controversy exceeds the sum of $25,000. Sec. 10 of act approved July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. at L. 691, 695, chap. 1369, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 214. The disposition of the motion to dismiss turns upon the question whether, within the true meaning of the statute, land of the value of $25,000 was in controversy. In the solution of this question it is useful to examine the pleadings, the course of the trial, and the judgment.

NOTE.—As to amount necessary to give United States Supreme Court jurisdiction—see notes to Schunk v. Moline, M. & S. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 256, and Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 12 L. ed. U. S. 169.

270] *The company alleged itself to be the owner of lands known as the Hacienda de San Luis y la Concepción, having certain defined boundaries and an area of some 4,000 hectares. The complaint further alleged "that the defendants above named, for more than one and less than six years ago, illegally seized and continued to hold certain portions of the said property," having an "area of 446 hectáreas, 79 areas, and 4 centiareas as to the fields, and 4 hectareas, approximately, as to the lots on which their houses and warehouses are built, distributed among distinct and separate parcels, but all within the perimeter of the said estate above described; and for a better understanding thereof the following statement is given of the parcels held by each one of the defendants." There then follows eighty-four separate descriptions of the separate holdings of each of the defendants. The case of Miguel Tupiño is agreed upon by the parties as typical of the others, and the allegation with respect to him is: "Miguel Tupiño has a lot of 6 areas with a dwelling and two warehouses thereon, and 2 fields, containing 4 hectareas and 50 areas and 2 hectareas and 25 areas, respectively." Then follows an allegation that "the plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of 9,000 Mexican pesos by reason of the unlawful detention above described," and the complaint closes with the prayer before stated.

Each of the defendants filed separate answers. The answer of Tupiño may be taken as a type. In it he denies the title of the plaintiff and that it suffered the damages alleged; denies, specifically, that the plaintiff had a record title to the portion of the land described as possessed by him; denies that that portion of the land was situated within the boundaries of the Hacienda de San Luis y la Concepción; denies that the plaintiff is the owner of the portion of the land described as possessed by the defendant, or any part thereof, or that the plaintiff has ever been entitled to the possession thereof; denies that the plaintiff has any interest in the 271] portion of the land *described as possessed by the defendant, or ever has had any; denies that the defendant has unlawfully withheld from the plaintiff the portion of land described as possessed by the defendant.

In the opinion of the judge of the court of first instance he describes the defense in part as being "that each and every one of them (the defendants) is the owner of the parcel of land occupied by him, because it has been cultivated and possessed by some of them for more than ten years and by all of them for more than one year."

After the supreme court of the Philippine Islands had rendered its judgment, the defendants made a motion for a rehearing, in which they complained that the court had overlooked an assignment of error in assessing damages jointly against all the defendants, and said, in this connection, "inasmuch as each of said defendants is alleged by plaintiff, and found by the trial court, to be occupying a distinct and separate parcel of land, with no privity or community of interest with his codefendants, and each of said defendants has filed a separate answer for such distinct parcel, and maintained a separate defense."

It is very clear, although the plaintiff claimed under a single title all the land occupied separately by the various defendants, that the action itself was not against the defendants as joint disseisors, but was an action against each of them separately as the holder of a distinct parcel or parcels of land. There was no allegation, in either the complaint or the answer, of joint ownership or joint possession or joint action of any kind. The proceeding, in effect, consisted of eighty-four separate and distinct actions against the eighty-four defendants. The complaint alleged that each defendant was in possession of a separate and distinct parcel of land, described separately, however inadequately. The answer of each defendant, while denying in toto the title of the plaintiff, in other respects related solely to the tract of land alleged to be unlawfully held by that particular defendant. Undoubtedly, where a complaint alleges *a joint entry and [272] ouster, and the answer takes issue, without setting up separate claims to distinct parcels by the several defendants, and the judgment for the recovery of possession is against all the defendants jointly, then the measure of appellate jurisdiction is the value of the whole land. Friend v. Wise, 111 U. S. 797, 28 L. ed. 602, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695. But where the pleadings show that there was no allegation of joint ownership or joint possession, and that the controversy with each defendant related to a separate and distinct lot of land, and the judgment is rendered separately against the defendants, then the measure of jurisdiction on appeal or writ of error is not the value of the whole land, but the value of each part separately. Tupper v. Wise, 110 U. S. 398, 28 L. ed. 189, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26, where it was said: "The rule is well settled that distinct judgments in favor of or against distinct parties, though in the same record, cannot be joined to give this court jurisdiction."

We think that the case at bar falls within the rule of Tupper v. Wise. It appears in point of fact that the value of the whole land which the plaintiff sought to recover in separate parcels from the eighty-four defendants exceeds $25,000. But it also appears that the value of the land in controversy with any one of the defendants is far less than $25,000.

Stopping at this point, it would follow that the writ of error should be dismissed. But the form of the judgment in this case is peculiar and must receive consideration before the motion to dismiss is finally disposed of. The judgment of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands simply affirmed the judgment of the court of first instance. In that court, as there was no formal judgment, the terms of it must be gathered from the opinion of the judge. The opinion concludes as follows:

"I decide: First, that the Compañia General de Tabacos de Filipinas shall be restored by the sheriff or by any of his deputies to the possession of the Hacienda San Luis y la Concepción by giving possession thereof to D. Miguel Macias y Toro, or any other person lawfully representing the said 273]company. . . . *Third, that both the present defendants as well as those declared in default, be required to immediately vacate the said hacienda or be evicted therefrom, together with their houses and warehouses. Fourth, that the preliminary injunction issued on the 15th of November last, and modified on the third inst., be regarded as perpetual from this date, and the injunction bond of $10,000 given is to be canceled after the proper legal formalities. The tobacco in the hands of the receiver will be delivered to the Compañia General, and the bond given by the receiver canceled, after rendition by him of the accounts of his receivership. Fifth, and last, that the defendants present, and those in default, pay the costs and damages in the sum of 9,000 Mexican pesos; and finally, that the said defendants are enjoined absolutely from performing any act hereafter tending in the slightest degree to disturb the possession by the Compañia General of the lands comprised within the hacienda of San Luis y la Concepción. So ordered."

If this language is to be taken as expressing the judgment of the court, it certainly has some tendency to show that the judgment for the restoration of the lands was a joint one against all the defendants. But we are not inclined to scrutinize too strictly the language of a learned judge, trained in another system of jurisprudence than our own; and in view of the separate issues clearly made by the pleadings, and the prayer of the complaint that the plaintiff be restored "to the possession of the various parcels of the said estate above indicated, after the eviction or expulsion therefrom of all the defendants, including the houses and warehouses which they have erected thereon," we construe this judgment to run separately against each defendant for that part of the land of which he was alleged and found to be in possession. It was so treated by the judge of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, in refusing to allow a writ of error. The judgment for damages appears to be, so far as we can see, a joint judgment against all the defendants. But even the whole amount *of the [274 damages, 9,000 Mexican pesos, added to the value of the land in controversy with any of the defendants, does not make a sum exceeding $25,000. We think, therefore, that the writ of error must be dismissed.

It may not be improper to say that if we had jurisdiction on this writ of error we should find grave difficulty in sustaining the joint judgment for damages against all the defendants, if, indeed, we have properly construed it to be joint. But we have no such jurisdiction, and therefore refrain from deciding that point. Doubtless, if there is anything in it, some way may be found, by application to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, to correct the error, if any exists.

Writ of error dismissed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SAMUEL CHILES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 274-279.)

States — power over navy yard — exclusiveness of Federal jurisdiction.

The exclusive legislative power which Congress possesses over the Norfolk Navy Yard excludes the giving of any operation or effect, within the limits of such navy yard, to the provisions of Va. Code 1904, pp. 696, 697, imposing a penalty upon telegraph companies for failure to deliver a message to the addressee.

[For other cases, see States, 87-91, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 168.]

Argued April 20, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

NOTE. — As to state jurisdiction over lands of the United States within the state — see note to Barrett v. Palmer, 17 L.R.A. 720.

On the effect of acquisition of territory by United States on laws and property rights therein — see note to Re Chavez, 80 C. C. A. 457.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of Hustings of the city of Portsmouth, in that state, imposing a penalty upon a telegraph company for failure to deliver a telegram addressed to a person on board a government vessel lying at the Norfolk Navy Yard. Reversed.

See same case below, 107 Va. 60, 57 S. E. 587.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Francis Raymond Stark argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George H. Fearons, Robert M. Hughes, and Rush Taggart, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

It can hardly be successfully contended that the police power of a state can be invoked within the limits of territory not only beyond its jurisdiction, but actually within the jurisdiction and subject to the police power of another government, whether the Federal government or that of another state or country; and, if it cannot, then any default on the part of the plaintiff in error, occurring within such territory, was an extraterritorial default, and one to which the statute could not be held to apply.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

If the constitutional provision that Congress shall have power to exercise exclusive legislation over given territory has any meaning at all, it means, clearly, that, with respect to such territory, the state is forbidden to legislate.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 532, 537, 29 L. ed. 264, 266, 268, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Foley v. Shriver, 81 Va. 568; Mitchell v. Tibbetts, 17 Pick. 298; Com. v. Clary, 8 Mass. 72; Re Ladd, 74 Fed. 41.

Within the Norfolk Navy Yard the state of Virginia could not levy or collect a tax (Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, supra; 5 Ops. Atty. Gen. 316; Bannon v. Burnes, 39 Fed. 892). She could not prescribe or enforce the punishment for a crime committed therein (United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 63, Fed. Cas. No. 14,867; 8 Ops. Atty. Gen. 418; Com. v. Clary and Re Ladd, supra). She could not, except for the express reservation of the right so to do, serve civil process there (14 Ops. Atty. Gen. 426; Martin v. House, 39 Fed. 694). A person residing there is not a "resident" of the state, and, under a provision of the state Constitution requiring that electors shall be residents of the state, would not be entitled to vote (Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St. 316, 2 Am. Rep. 397). "National and 53 L. ed.

municipal powers of government of every description," with respect to this territory, were cut off from the state of Virginia, and "united in the government of the Union" (Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 223, 11 L. ed. 570). As in the case of the District of Columbia, the only government in the navy yard is that of the United States, and the only laws that are or can be enforced there are the laws of the United States. "No portion of the state sovereignty or jurisdiction remained in or over the ceded district. The only sovereignty in the district is that of the United States" (United States v. Williams, 4 Cranch, C. C. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 16,712).

Mr. William D. Stoakley (by special leave) argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power, whether called police, governmental, or legislative, exists in each state, by appropriate enactment, not forbidden by its own Constitution or by the Constitution of the United States, to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within its jurisdiction, and, therefore, to provide for the public convenience and the public good. This power in the state is entirely distinct from any power granted to the general government, although, when exercised, it may sometimes reach subjects over which national legislation can be constitutionally extended.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 297, 43 L. ed. 707, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

Outside of the field directly occupied by the general government, under the powers granted to it by the Constitution, all questions arising within a state that relate to its internal order, or that involve the public convenience or the general good, are primarily for the determination of the state; and its legislative enactments relating to these subjects, and which are not inconsistent with the state Constitution, are to be respected and enforced by the courts of the Union, if they do not, by their operation, directly intrench upon the authority of the United States, or violate some right protected by the national Constitution.

Lake Shore, M. & S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 85.

So long as the state legislation is not in conflict with any law passed by Congress in pursuance of its powers, and is merely intended and operates, in fact, to aid commerce, and to expedite, instead of hindering, the safe transportation of persons and commodities from one commonwealth to another, it is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and will be enforced either as supplementary to partial Federal statutes relating to the same subject, or in lieu of such legislation, where Congress has not exercised its power at all.

Faust v. Cleveland, 58 C. C. A. 194, 121 Fed. 810; Ray, Negligence of Imposed Duties, pp. 483, 484; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 546, 29 L. ed. 272, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005, 1008; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 297, 43 L. ed. 707, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Com. v. Drewry, 15 Gratt. 1; 8 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 774, 775.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, a gunner in the Navy, was stationed on board the U. S. S. Abarenda, which was lying at the Norfolk Navy Yard. A telegram addressed to him aboard the ship was received for transmission at Richmond, Virginia, thence transmitted, so far as appears, with due dispatch, to Portsmouth, Virginia, which adjoins the Norfolk Navy Yard, and is the place to which telegrams directed to the navy yard are commonly sent. The message was never received by the defendant in error. He brought this action in the court of hustings of the city of Portsmouth against the plaintiff in error, the telegraph company, to recover a penalty imposed by the laws of Virginia. The Virginia Code 1904, pp. 696, 697, after providing for a penalty for failure duly to transmit a message, contains the following provision:

"(6)

"It shall be the duty of every telegraph company, upon the arrival of a dispatch or message at the point to which it is to be transmitted, to cause the same to be forwarded by a messenger to the person to whom the same is addressed, or his agent, and, upon the payment of any charges due on this dispatch or message, to deliver it; provided, such person or agent reside within the city or incorporated town in which such station is, or that at such point the regulations of the company require such delivery. 276] *"[It shall also be the duty of such company to forward a dispatch or message promptly, as directed, where the same is to be forwarded. For every failure to deliver or forward a dispatch or message as promptly as practicable the company shall forfeit $100 to the person sending the dispatch or message, or the person to whom it was addressed."

The plaintiff's declaration contained two counts: the first, for failure to transmit the telegram in conformity with the law of Virginia; and the second, for failure to deliver it in accordance with the part of the law just quoted. As there was no proof in support of the first count, and it was apparently not submitted to the jury at the trial, it may pass out of view.

The second count, after alleging the receipt of the message at the point of origin, and its transmission, and receipt at the office at Portsmouth, avers that it was the duty of the telegraph company to deliver it to the plaintiff on the U. S. S. Abarenda at the navy yard as promptly as practicable, and that the defendant failed to perform its duty in that regard, wherefore it became indebted to the plaintiff for the amount of the statutory penalty. There was a demurrer to the declaration, and one of the reasons alleged was "that the place at which the message was to be delivered was on board a government vessel, at a yard which is under the jurisdiction and control of the United States, and neither the state nor this honorable court has jurisdiction to impose any penalty for failure to deliver a message at such place." The demurrer was overruled, and the case was tried before a jury. There was testimony in behalf of the defendant that, seasonably after the message was received at Portsmouth, it was intrusted to a messenger boy for delivery to the plaintiff on board the ship; that it was taken to the gangway of the ship, and there, in accordance with the practice in such cases, delivered to the man on duty at that place, who receipted for it. With the weight of this testimony we have no concern. It also appeared that the message never reached the plaintiff. The defendant requested the presiding judge to instruct the jury, in substance, *that if the default[277 in delivery occurred within the limits of the territory of the Norfolk Navy Yard, plaintiff could not recover by virtue of the Virginia law, which had no authority within those limits. The court declined, under exception, to give this instruction, and the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of the penalty. There was judgment for the plaintiff, which, upon writ of error duly raising the questions which have been stated, was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of the state. Thereupon a writ of error from this court was allowed.

Part of the land composing the Norfolk Navy Yard, formerly known as the Gosport Navy Yard, was once owned by the state of Virginia. Title to the remainder of it was acquired by the United States by purchase from the owners. Title to the land owned by the state was acquired by the United States under the provisions of an act of assembly passed January 25, 1800, which authorized the governor of the commonwealth to convey by deed the title to the state land and "all the jurisdiction which this commonwealth possesses over the public lands commonly called and known by the name of Gosport," reserving only the right of the officers of the state to execute process within the jurisdiction authorized to be ceded. The files of the Department of the Navy contain a deed of Governor James Monroe, dated June 15, 1801, executing in precise conformity with the act the authority which it conferred. The United States had purchased from the owners other land, for the purpose of extending the navy yard. That purchase was recognized by the state of Virginia by an act of assembly passed February 27, 1833, and the governor of the commonwealth was authorized to cede the same jurisdiction, with the same reservation. The files of the Department of the Navy contain also a deed by Governor Littleton W. Tazewell, dated April 1, 1835, fully executing the provisions of the last-named act.

The case does not call for the consideration of the effect of a contract made within the state of Virginia for the seasonable 278 *transmission and delivery of a telegram. The record presents the single question whether a law of the state of Virginia imposing a penalty has any effect or operation within the limits of the navy yard. This question, if not fully raised by the demurrer, was distinctly raised by the request for instructions, which was refused. On one aspect of the evidence it might have been found that the only default of the defendant was entirely within the limits of the navy yard, and the defendant was entitled to an appropriate instruction on the issue thus raised. By the refusal to give the instruction requested, the jury in effect was permitted to find for the plaintiff, even if the default was entirely within the navy yard. We think this was clearly erroneous. By the terms of the Constitution, Congress is given the power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever . . . over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings." Art. 1, § 8, ¶ 17, of the Constitution.

It is apparent from the history of the establishment of the Norfolk Navy Yard, already given, that it is one of the places where the Congress possesses exclusive legislative power. It follows that the laws of the state of Virginia, with the exception referred to in the acts of assembly, cannot be allowed any operation or effect within the limits of the yard. The exclusive power of legislation necessarily includes the exclusive jurisdiction. The subject is so fully discussed by Mr. Justice Field, delivering the opinion of the court in Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995, that we need do no more than refer to that case and the cases cited in the opinion. It is of the highest public importance that the jurisdiction of the state should be resisted at the borders of those places where the power of exclusive legislation is vested in the Congress by the Constitution. Congress already, with the design that the places under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States shall not be freed from the restraints of the law, has enacted for them * (Revised Statutes, title 70, [279 chapter 3, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3625) an extensive criminal code, ending with the provision (§ 5391 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3651]) that where an offense is not specially provided for by any law of the United States, it shall be prosecuted in the courts of the United States, and receive the same punishment prescribed by the laws of the state in which the place is situated for like offenses committed within its jurisdiction. We do not mean to suggest that the statute before us creates a crime in the technical sense. If it is desirable that penalties should be inflicted for a default in the delivery of a telegram occurring within the jurisdiction of the United States, Congress only has the power to establish them.

Judgment reversed.

THAD A. BRYANT, Trustee in the Matter of E. M. Newton & Company, Bankrupts, Appt.,

v.

SWOFFORD BROS. DRY GOODS COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 279-292.)

Federal courts—following local law—conditional sale.

1. Whether a contract under which goods were delivered to the bankrupts was one of conditional sale, and valid without record, are questions on which a court of bankruptcy follows the local law.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. c, 10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conditional sale—right to resell—recording.

2. A contract which gives the purchaser

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 584; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 335; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351.

As to what constitutes a conditional sale—see notes to Sturm v. Boker, 37 L. ed. U. S. 1093, and Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 448.

the right to resell in the ordinary course of business, but provides that title shall remain in the seller until such resale, and that the proceeds derived therefrom, in whatever form existing, shall be the property of the seller, is, in Arkansas, a conditional sale, and valid without record.

[For other cases, see Sale, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — title of trustee.

3. A trustee in bankruptcy has no higher rights than the bankrupts themselves in property delivered to the bankrupts under a contract of conditional sale.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 268-274, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Stipulation — by receiver in bankruptcy — binding effect on trustee.

4. A trustee in bankruptcy is bound by the stipulation of the receiver in bankruptcy, approved by the referee, on the faith of which the bankrupt's conditional vendor surrendered possession, that all the property in dispute should be deemed to have been that delivered under the conditional contract, or to be the proceeds of the resale of property so delivered.

[Stipulations generally, see Stipulation, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 172.]

Argued April 22, 23, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Arkansas, denying the right of a conditional vendor, presented by a petition in intervention, to certain moneys and property in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

See same case below, 83 C. C. A. 23, 153 Fed. 841.

Statement by Mr. Justice Moody:

The record in this appeal, transmitted to this court from the circuit court of appeals, contains the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

1. On July 20, 1904, Ernest M. Newton and John F. Newton, partners as E. M. Newton & Company, merchants at wholesale and retail in Arkansas, and Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company, a corporation, of Kansas City, Missouri, engaged in the wholesale dry goods business, entered into a written contract as follows:

Know all men by these presents: That Mr. E. M. Newton & Company of New Lewisville, Lafayette county, Arkansas, a copartnership composed of E. M. Newton and J. F. Newton, party of the first part, has this day purchased from Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company and said Swofford Bros.

Dry Goods Company, party of the second part, has sold to said E. M. Newton & Company, certain goods upon the following expressed conditions:

1. Said goods shall be selected by said first party from sample or from stock of said second party at Kansas City, Missouri, and same shall be shipped to said first party upon their request to New Lewisville, Arkansas, from which place they shall not be removed without the written consent of said second party, save and except that said first party shall have the right to sell said goods in the ordinary course of business, but not otherwise.

2. Said second party shall prepare at time of shipment full and complete invoices of the goods so sold and selected, and shall deliver copies of said invoices by mail or otherwise to said first party. Such invoices shall consist of itemized list of *the articles[281 so sold and shipped, with the price and value of each article, and shall show also the credit terms upon which the same are sold, and the rate of discount, if any, which is to be allowed upon payment of the purchase price in cash upon delivery or at an earlier date than that specified in said credit terms.

3. The title to and right to immediate possession of all the goods so sold and shipped by said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company and of the proceeds derived from the sale of the same by the first party, whether in cash or note or book account, shall be vested and remain in said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company until the full purchase price and the agreed value of the same shall be paid by said E. M. Newton & Company to said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company in cash; and any and all notes, checks, and accepted drafts shall not be considered as payment, but merely as evidence of indebtedness. And upon taking possession of any notes and book accounts derived by said first party from the sale of said goods or any part thereof, said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company shall have the right to collect the same, either in its name or in the name of E. M. Newton & Company, by suit or otherwise, and in case of disputed notes and accounts against persons of doubtful solvency, said second party may compromise and settle the same, or may extend the time of payment thereof in such manner and upon such terms as may to it seem advantageous, and any new notes taken thereafter, whether in the name of Mr. E. M. Newton & Company, or in the name of said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company, shall be held and considered in all respects the same as the original evidence of indebtedness.

4. This contract and the terms thereof shall apply to all future orders given by the E. M. Newton & Company, and to all future sales and shipments made to them by said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company; so long as any part or portion of the purchase price of the goods sold and delivered hereunder shall remain unpaid, said Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company shall have the right to terminate this contract at any time, and said E. M. Newton & Company may terminate the same at any time by paying 282]in full in cash whatever balance of the purchase price of the goods purchased and shipped shall then remain unpaid. Delivery of the goods, properly packed and marked, to a common carrier at Kansas City, Missouri, consigned to the first party, as above specified, shall be deemed and considered a full and complete delivery thereof by said second party, and all freight and transportation charges shall be paid by said consignees. The acceptance of goods subsequently sold and shipped by the first party, and the placing of the same in their stores and warehouses at New Lewisville, Arkansas, or elsewhere, shall be held and considered sufficient to bring such goods within and under the terms hereof, shall be mentioned or referred to in the order so given or in the invoices given and delivered with each invoice.

Said first party shall keep all goods purchased hereunder properly insured at their expense for the benefit of second party; but the loss or destruction of such goods by fire or otherwise shall not cancel the indebtedness thereof, but said first party shall still remain liable to second party for any part of the purchase price remaining unpaid.

In witness whereof the parties above named have hereunto placed their hands and seals in duplicate this 20th day of July, 1905

E. M. Newton & Co.,

Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co.,

Signed by Wm. Moore, Sec.

2. The contract was not filed or recorded.

3. Pursuant to the contract, and prior to June 30, 1905, the dry goods company delivered to the Newtons goods of the value of $15,369.57. The latter paid on account thereof the sum of $2,059.01. On June 30, 1905, the unpaid balance was $13,310.56.

4. The goods delivered under the contract were placed by the Newtons in their stock with other goods obtained from other parties, but they were of such character and contained such marks as rendered them capable of being identified and *separated. 283]It was contemplated by the parties that the Newtons might sell the goods so delivered in the usual course of their business. The Newtons did not keep separate accounts of their resales of the goods, nor did the dry goods company require them to make reports thereof.

5. On June 30, 1905, when the Newtons were insolvent and the dry goods company knew it, they surrendered to the dry goods company, as belonging to it under the provisions of the contract, goods of the value of $5,337.21, notes to the amount of $1,684.32, and customers' accounts to the amount of $8,277.04. The goods were so surrendered by the Newtons as being the unsold part of those delivered under the contract, and the notes and accounts as representing proceeds of their sales of like goods. Actual possession was taken by the dry goods company.

6. In fact, the goods surrendered to the dry goods company were, with slight exception, goods that had been delivered under the contract; but only about one half in amount of the notes and accounts surrendered represented proceeds of other goods delivered under the contract.

7. On July 3, 1905, three days after the surrender of the property as above mentioned, the Newtons filed their voluntary petition in bankruptcy, were adjudged bankrupts, and Thad. A. Bryant was appointed receiver. In one of the schedules attached to the verified petition in bankruptcy the dry goods company was listed as a secured creditor, with a statement of the facts upon which its rights were based, and recitals of the surrender to it of the goods, notes, and accounts, that the notes and accounts were proceeds of the goods furnished by the dry goods company under the contract and resold by the Newtons to their customers, and that the goods, notes, and accounts were then in possession of that company.

8. After the appointment of the receiver in the bankruptcy proceeding he demanded from the dry goods company possession of the goods, notes, and accounts mentioned. The *demand was refused, but after-284]wards the dry goods company surrendered them to the receiver under a written stipulation that they might be disposed of by him in connection with the sale of the other property in his hands, but that the dry goods company should not be prejudiced thereby, and that the proceeds should be held in lieu of the property so surrendered, to abide the final determination of a court of competent jurisdiction as to the ownership thereof; and, if the dry goods company prevailed, it should have the proceeds free of fees, charges, and expenses. As one of the conditions upon which it was made, it was expressly admitted in this stipulation that the goods, notes, and accounts in controversy were then in the actual, exclusive, and adverse possession of the dry goods company, that the goods were part of those delivered to the Newtons under the contract of July 20, 1904, and that the notes and accounts were proceeds of other goods delivered under that contract. This stipulation was made subject to the approval of the referee in bankruptcy. It was executed by the dry goods company and the receiver, and the referee duly indorsed his approval thereon. Upon the faith thereof the goods, notes, and accounts were then surrendered to the receiver. No fraud or deception was practised by the dry goods company upon the referee or the receiver in connection with the making of this stipulation.

9. Thad. A. Bryant, who had been appointed receiver, was duly selected as trustee. He sold the goods in controversy for $3,135. The notes and accounts were not sold, but, at the time of the hearing of this matter before the referee, he had collected $2,250 on account thereof, and still retained in his hands those that were uncollected. He has kept a separate account of these funds, and held sufficient funds to answer the result of the litigation.

10. The dry goods company thereupon presented its intervening petition, seeking the payment to it of the sums realized as mentioned in the preceding finding, and the restitution to it of the uncollected notes and 285]accounts. The controversy *in the cause was presented by the intervening petition, the trustee's answer thereto, and the reply of the dry goods company.

Conclusions of Law.

1. The contract of July 20, 1904, is a contract of conditional sale, and not of mortgage, and as such was not required by the laws of Arkansas to be filed or recorded.

2. Under the laws of Arkansas the contract was valid as between the parties thereto, notwithstanding the fact that it authorized the vendees to resell the goods delivered thereunder.

3. It was also valid as between the parties thereto not only in respect of such of the goods delivered thereunder as remained unsold when the vendor demanded and secured possession from the vendees, but also in respect of the notes and accounts which represented proceeds of like goods resold by the vendee to their customers, and which could be so identified and segregated.

4. The contract being valid under the local law as between the parties thereto, the trustee in bankruptcy of the vendees cannot avoid or defeat the title of the vendor, who took possession prior to the institution of the proceedings in which the vendees were adjudged to be bankrupts. The trustee has no greater right or title than the bankrupts.

5. Inasmuch as the bankruptcy court obtained from the vendor possession of the notes and accounts in controversy upon the faith of a stipulation made with its approval, and without practice of fraud or deceit, that such notes and accounts were the proceeds of goods covered by the contract of conditional sale, and still holds to such possession, the trustee is estopped from disputing the fact stipulated.

6. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company, the vendor, is entitled to a decree that the trustee in bankruptcy pay to it the sum of $3,135, the proceeds of the goods in controversy, and the further sum of $2,250, the collections of notes and accounts in controversy, made by the trustee prior to the hearing *before the referee, and also for [286 such collections as may have been made since that time, and for the surrender of such of said notes and accounts as may remain uncollected, and for costs. The sums mentioned should be paid in full.

Mr. William H. Arnold argued the cause, and, with Mr. James K. Jones, filed a brief for appellant:

The power of the receiver and of the referee are derived solely from the bankrupt act, and there is nothing in the bankrupt act which will authorize a receiver to enter into an agreed statement of facts pertaining to the case.

Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, 15 L. ed. 164; Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 128, 23 L. ed. 116.

There are a number of decisions of the supreme court of Arkansas sustaining contracts wherein it is stipulated that the title of the property is to remain in the vendor until the price is paid, but these decisions are with reference to such things as machinery, farming implements, live stock, and where it is not agreed that the property shall be resold.

Gibson v. Martin, 38 Ark. 207; McIntosh v. Hill, 47 Ark. 363, 1 S. W. 680; Carroll v. Wiggins, 30 Ark. 402; Simpson v. Shackelford, 49 Ark. 63, 4 S. W. 165; McRea v. Merrifield, 48 Ark. 160, 2 S. W. 780; Cincinnati Safe Co. v. Kelly, 54 Ark. 476, 16 S. W. 263; Edgewood Distilling Co. v. Shannon, 60 Ark. 133, 29 S. W. 147; Dedman v. Earle, 52 Ark. 164, 12 S. W. 330; Ferguson v. Hetherington, 39 Ark. 438; Ames Iron Works v. Rea, 56 Ark. 450, 19 S. W. 1063; Morris v. Cohn, 55 Ark. 401, 17 S. W. 342, 18 S. W. 384; Bank of Little Rock v. Collins, 66 Ark. 240, 50 S. W. 694; Faisst v. Waldo, 57 Ark. 270, 21 S. W. 436.

The doctrine of these cases follows the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 1093, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99.

There is an obvious difference in reserving the title to implements, wagons, gristmills, tools, etc., under such contracts, and gents' furnishing goods or general merchandise, where there can be no question of the identity of the wagons, machinery, etc., but there would always be a question with reference to the identity of general merchandise. The very nature of the goods themselves, added to the power of disposition, as in the case at bar, without being required to keep them separate from other goods, or the proceeds separate from the general stock, ought to bar a recovery in this case.

Lund v. Fletcher, 39 Ark. 334, 43 Am. Rep. 270; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 L. ed. 758, note; Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 32 L. ed. 429, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 65; Griswold v. Sheldon, 4 N. Y. 581; Davis v. Ransom, 18 Ill. 396; Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 100, 26 L. ed. 1080; Second Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. ed. 190.

The decisions of the supreme court of Arkansas, under practically the same conditions as in the case at bar, show that the intervener's contract is fraudulent in law and cannot be sustained.

Lund v. Fletcher, 39 Ark. 335, 43 Am. Rep. 270; Martin v. Ogden, 41 Ark. 192; Fink v. Ehrman Bros, 44 Ark. 310; see also Loving Pub. Co. v. Johnson, 68 Tex. 273, 4 S. W. 532; Phelps v. Murray, 2 Tenn. Ch. 746; Mayer v. Catron (Tenn. Ch. App.) 48 S. W. 255; Wilder v. Wilson, 16 Lea, 548; Arbuckle Bros. v. Kirkpatrick, 98 Tenn. 221, 36 L.R.A. 285, 60 Am. St. Rep. 854, 39 S. W. 3; Star Clothing Mfg. Co. v. Norde-man, 118 Tenn. 384, 100 S. W. 93; Coweta Fertilizer Co. v. Brown, 89 C. C. A. 612, 163 Fed. 162; Re Garcewich, 55 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Re Pekin Plow Co. 50 C. C. A. 257, 112 Fed. 308; Re Fraizer, 117 Fed. 747; Re Carpenter, 125 Fed. 831; Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869; Re Rabenau, 118 Fed. 471; Kellam v. Brown, 112 N. C. 451, 17 S. E. 416; Chickering v. Bastress, 130 Ill. 206, 17 Am. St. Rep. 309, 22 N. E. 542; Ex parte White, L. R. 6 Ch. 397; Drew v. Smith, 59 Me. 393; Gross v. Jordan, 83 Me. 380, 22 Atl. 250; Cleveland Mach. Works v. Lang, 67 N. H. 348, 68 Am. St. Rep. 675, 31 Atl. 20; Dixon v. Blondin, 58 Vt. 689, 5 Atl. 514; Marvin Safe Co. v. Norton, 48 N. J. L. 410, 57 Am. Rep. 566, 7 Atl. 418; Mershon v. Moors, 76 Wis. 502, 45 N. W. 95; Barrett v. Kelley, 66 Vt. 515, 44 Am. St. Rep. 862, 29 Atl. 809.

The title of an assignee under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors under the laws of Arkansas fails whenever it is shown that there is fraud on the part of the assignor in making the assignment.

Hill v. Shrygley, 51 Ark. 59, 9 S. W. 845; Probst v. Welden, 46 Ark. 405; Penzel Grocer Co. v. Williams, 53 Ark. 81, 13 S. W. 736; Lazarus v. Camden Nat. Bank, 64 Ark. 322, 42 S. W. 412.

53 L. ed.

Mr. Ernest S. Ellis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edgar C. Ellis and Webber & Webber, filed a brief for appellee:

Stipulations made during the progress of, or in regard to, litigation, are upheld and favored by the courts.

20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. pp. 622, 657, 662, 663, 666, 668, 669.

The line of discrimination between mortgages and conditional sales cannot be marked out by any general rule; but, in every case, the true nature of the transaction, and the intention of the parties, must be determined by its own circumstances.

Johnson v. Clark, 5 Ark. 321; Porter v. Clements, 3 Ark. 364; Blakemore v. Byrnside, 7 Ark. 505; Stryker v. Hershey, 38 Ark. 264; Hershey v. Luce, 56 Ark. 320, 19 S. W. 963, 20 S. W. 6.

Such an instrument as the one between the Swoffords and Newtons has not only been construed to be a contract of conditional sale in Arkansas, but it has been held legal and binding by the supreme court of that state in Triplett v. Mansur & T. Implement Co. 68 Ark. 230, 82 Am. St. Rep. 284, 57 S. W. 261; see also McRea v. Merrifield, 48 Ark. 160, 2 S. W. 780; Carroll v. Wiggins, 30 Ark. 402; F. J. Dewes Brewery Co. v. Merritt, 82 Mich. 198, 9 L.R.A. 270, 46 N. W. 379; Perkins v. Mettler, 126 Cal. 100, 58 Pac. 384; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 30 L. ed. 285, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51.

In the state of Arkansas, there is no statute either requiring or permitting the filing or recording of conditional-sale contracts.

McRea v. Merrifield, supra; McIntosh v. Hill, 47 Ark. 363, 1 S. W. 680; Simpson v. Shackelford, 49 Ark. 66, 4 S. W. 165.

And, in the absence of such a statute, there is neither necessity nor opportunity for recording. An unauthorized record of such a contract is not notice.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 498.

The trustee is vested with no better right or title to the bankrupt's property than belonged to the bankrupt at the time when the trustee's title accrued.

York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 789.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The merchandise which was delivered by Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Company to E. M. Newton & Company was delivered under the terms of a written contract. That contract provided that the title to the goods until their sale, and to the proceeds derived from their sale, whether in the form of cash, notes, or book accounts, should be and remain in the dry goods company. The contract gave the Newtons the right to sell the goods in the ordinary course of business, but, as has been said, provided that the proceeds of the sale, in whatever form they existed, should be the property of the dry goods company. When the Newtons became insolvent and ceased business, they, in recognition of the obligations due from them under this contract, returned to the dry goods company that part of their goods which remained unsold. The character and marks of the goods rendered them capable of being identified and separated. They turned over at the same time, as and for the notes and accounts representing the proceeds of sales of the company's goods, certain notes and customers' accounts. It was found as a fact that one half in amount of these notes and accounts represented the proceeds of sales of other goods than those delivered under the contract. It, therefore, now appears, if it is competent to show it, that this one 290]half of the *notes and accounts did not belong to the dry goods company, and ought not to have been turned over to it, and that, on the contrary, they should have gone into the estate of the Newtons, who subsequently became bankrupt. Three days after the surrender of this property the Newtons, on their voluntary petition, were adjudged bankrupts, and the appellant was appointed receiver. He demanded of the dry goods company the possession of the goods, notes, and accounts mentioned, but the demand was refused. Subsequently a written contract was entered into between the dry goods company and the receiver, with the approval of the referee. No fraud or deceit induced the making of this contract. By its terms the dry goods company, on its part, surrendered the goods, notes, and accounts to the receiver, and agreed that he might dispose of them in connection with the assets of the estate, and that the proceeds of the property thus disposed of should be held in lieu of it to abide the determination of a court of competent jurisdiction. The receiver, on the other hand, agreed that the goods, notes, and accounts were in the actual and adverse possession of the dry goods company, and that the goods were part of those delivered to the Newtons under the contract between them and the dry goods company, before referred to, and that the notes and accounts were the proceeds of other goods delivered under that contract. Subsequently, the receiver was appointed trustee, and sold the goods, and collected a part of the notes and accounts. The proceeds of the goods and of the collections are held to await the result of this litigation, which is in the form of an intervening petition of the dry goods company.

We think it clear that the contract under which the goods were delivered to the Newtons was one of conditional sale. Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 30 L. ed. 285, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; William W. Bierce v. Hutehins, 205 U. S. 340, 51 L. ed. 828, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524. There is nothing in the nature of this contract which would forbid the parties from entering into it if it is valid by the laws of the state where made, but in bankruptcy the construction and validity of such a contract must be *determined by the [291 local laws of the state. Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481. That such a contract is a conditional sale and is valid without record is the law of Arkansas. Triplett Mansur & T. Implement Co. 68 Ark. 230, 82 Am. St. Rep. 284, 57 S. W. 261. The trustee has no higher rights in this regard than the bankrupt. York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, supra.

It follows that, so far as the identified goods and notes and accounts are concerned, the intervener, the dry goods company, must prevail.

It has turned out, according to the finding of facts, that some small fraction of the goods and about one half of the notes and accounts which were delivered by the Newtons to the dry goods company, as and for the goods, notes, and accounts which were the property of that company, were not in fact such, and the question therefore arises whether, under the circumstances disclosed in the findings, the trustee is entitled to avail himself of these facts. We think it was rightly held by the court below that he was not. There seems to be no reason for a nice consideration of the powers of receivers and trustees. When the receiver was appointed he found all the property in dispute in the hands of the dry goods company, to which it had been delivered by the Newtons, as and for the property of the company, and by which it had been received as its own property. When the receiver made his demand for it the return was at first refused. The parties in the controversy, then being at arms' length, agreed that if the dry goods company would give up the advantages of possession, and, instead of converting the goods, notes, and accounts into cash in its own way and on its own account, permit the receiver to do so, then those goods should be deemed part of those delivered under the contract, and the notes and accounts the proceeds of other goods delivered under the contract. This arrangement was approved by the referee. The trustee has taken the property under it and has never offered to return the property, or 292]*any part of it. The property has in large part been sold or otherwise disposed of in the course of the bankruptcy administration. Under these circumstances we are of opinion that the trustee, the appellant in case, was bound by the agreement of the receiver, that all the property in dispute should be conclusively deemed that which passed under the original conditional contract, or the proceeds thereof.

Judgment affirmed.

JOSEPH WILD & COMPANY, Appts.,
v.
PROVIDENT LIFE & TRUST COMPANY,
Trustee of the Estate of George Watkinson & Company, Bankrupts.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 292-297.)

Bankruptcy — surrender of preference to permit proof of claim.

Payments made on an open account for goods sold and delivered within four months prior to an adjudication in bankruptcy, which are received in good faith, without the creditor's knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, the account being made up of debits and credits, leaving a net amount due from the bankrupt's estate, do not constitute preferences which the creditor is bound to surrender before proving his claim.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 349-357, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No 190.]

Argued April 29, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, disallowing a claim in bankruptcy except upon a surrender of an alleged preference. Reversed.

See same case below, 82 C. C. A. 516, 153 Fed. 562.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Max L. Powell and Harris S. Sparhawk argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The running account between the insolvent and the creditor may be variable, and during insolvency may show at times a diminishing of the estate; but if, in the entirety of the transactions, the estate is enriched, then the payments are not preferential.

Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649.
53 L. ed.

Mr. Arthur G. Dickson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Dickson, Beitler, & McCouch, filed a brief for appellee:

An innocently preferred creditor should not be placed in a worse position than one who had received a guilty preference, as, by the new credits which he had given to his debtor, the creditor had, in effect, returned payments which were otherwise preferential.

McKey v. Lee, 45 C. C. A. 127, 105 Fed. 923, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; Re Ryan, 105 Fed. 760, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; Re Southern Overalls Mfg. Co. 111 Fed. 518, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Kahn v. Cone Export & Commission Co. 53 C. C. A. 92, 115 Fed. 290, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157; Re E. O. Thompson's Sons, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663, affirmed in 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214; Gans v. Ellison, 52 C. C. A. 366, 114 Fed. 734, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Peterson v. Nash Bros. 55 L.R.A. 344, 50 C. C. A. 260, 112 Fed. 311, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; Re Beswick, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

Where credits succeeded payments, and the credits during the period of insolvency exceeded the payments made during the same period, it was not necessary for the creditor to make any surrender before proving his claim.

Re Dickson, 55 L.R.A. 349, 49 C. C. A. 574, 111 Fed. 726, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; C. S. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Schiffer, 52 C. C. A. 249, 114 Fed. 447, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; Kimball v. E. A. Rosenham Co. 52 C. C. A. 33, 114 Fed. 85, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; Re Sagor, 57 C. C. A. 412, 121 Fed. 658, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Yaple v. Dahl-Millakan Grocery Co. 193 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 776, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

In the present case, the first sale was paid for and then there followed a number of sales. If the transactions had stopped there, this case would not be before this court. There was, however, a subsequent payment of a part of the account. This payment did not induce any subsequent credits; it was not so intermingled with other payments and sales as to entitle the creditor to ask that it be taken as part of a continuing transaction by which the estate was benefited. Its only effect was to reduce the estate, to take a part of the assets which then belonged to all of the creditors of the bankrupts, and to give it to one of them. No reasoning, however plausible, can rob this payment of that effect, and it was, therefore, under the bankruptcy act of 1898, a preference.

Gans v. Ellison and Kimball v. E. A. Rosenham Co. supra; Re Colton Export & Import Co. 57 C. C. A. 417, 121 Fed. 663, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14.

Mr Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants, Joseph Wild & Company, offered for proof against the estate of George Watkinson & Company, who had been declared bankrupts, a claim of $2,565.92. The claim was allowed by the referee, but disallowed by the district court, except upon a surrender of an alleged preference of $634.78, which was received within four months of the adjudication. The judgment of the district court was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals.

The facts of the case are simple. The bankrupt because insolvent on or before January 1, 1901, but the claimants had no knowledge of their insolvency during the running of the account hereafter referred to, and the merchandise therein specified was sold and delivered in the ordinary course of business. The appellants sold and delivered merchandise in various items, beginning February 14, 1901, and ending October 8, 1901. The total price of the merchandise thus delivered was $3,377.28. There were payments on account on June 29 and October 10, amounting to $811.36, leaving the net amount by which the bankrupt estate was enriched, $2,565.92. The last payment, on October 10, was $634.78, and was two days after the last sale and delivery of merchandise.

The single question in the case is whether that payment was a preference. It is conceded that it would not be a preference, in view of the other facts in the case, if it had been followed by a sale and delivery of goods of any value, however small. This concession is made necessary by the decision in Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649, which is, in all respects, like the present case, except that two days after the payment which was alleged *to be a preference, merchandise of trifling value was sold and delivered to the bankrupt. But the decision in that case was not rested upon the fact of this slight sale subsequent to the last payment. It was rather put upon the broader principle that all the dealings between the creditor and the bankrupt were after the bankrupt's insolvency, and that their net effect was to enrich the bankrupt's estate by the total sales, less the total payments. The majority of the court thought these facts distinguished the case from Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906, though there was a difference of opinion upon that point. But all doubt was resolved in Yaple v. Dahl-Millikan Grocery Co. 193 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 776, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552, where the precise question which is now here was decided by the court, and it was held, where a creditor has a claim upon an open account for goods sold and delivered during the period of four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy, the account being made up of debits and credits, leaving a net amount due from the bankrupt estate, that payments made under such circumstances did not constitute preferences which the creditor was bound to surrender before proving his claim in bankruptcy.

It follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals was erroneous, and it must be reversed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ST. LOUIS HAY & GRAIN COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 297-302.)

Carriers — charges for permitting re-consignment.

A railway carrier is entitled to some compensation in addition to the actual cost involved in taking loaded cars in transit to the shipper's warehouses at an intermediate point for unloading, inspection, and reloading, and taking away the reloaded cars, whether or not the carrier is under any obligation to extend such a privilege to shippers.

[Reasonableness of carrier's rates, see Carriers, III. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 104.]

Argued March 8, 9, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Illinois for the recovery of an award of the Interstate Commerce Commission in favor of a shipper, based upon the payment of an alleged unreasonable and excessive charge for permitting a reconsignment. Reversed and remanded with instructions to remit the proceedings to the Interstate Commerce Commission for further investigation.

See same case below, 82 C. C. A. 614, 153 Fed. 728.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was an action brought by the defendant in error on an award of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In a general way, the facts are as follows: The St. Louis Hay & Grain Company is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, with its principal office at St. Louis, Missouri, a dealer in hay, in the course of which business it operates two warehouses in East St. Louis, Illinois. The railway company is the owner and operating a line of railway extending from East St. Louis through the eastern district of Illinois to points in Southern states, to which the hay and grain company is engaged in shipping hay. The company buys some hay at its warehouses, brought in from the adjacent country, but a large portion of it is bought at points to the north and west. Some of the hay thus purchased is sent directly through East St. Louis in the cars in which it was originally loaded, but much of it is taken to its warehouses, there unloaded, inspected, and reloaded for the Southern markets. This is called a reconsignment. Taking these cars which are to be reconsigned to the hay and grain company's warehouses, and taking the reloaded cars therefrom, involves the use of the cars for a longer time, and there is some expense in hauling the cars. For this the railway company had been in the habit of charging $4 or $5 a car, equivalent on the average loading to 2 cents per hundred pounds. On an application by the company to the Interstate Commerce Commission it was held, on May 15, 1905 (11 Inters. Com. Rep. 90), that such charge was an excessive and unreasonable charge, and that one half thereof was sufficient. Upon that basis it awarded to [299] the hay and grain company the sum of $1,572.08, one half the sum paid theretofore by it to the railway company. This sum not being paid, the hay and grain company, on January 23, 1906, filed its petition in the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Illinois to recover the amount thus awarded, with interest, and also for an attorney's fee. A trial resulted on June 25, 1906, in a judgment in favor of the hay and grain company for the amount awarded by the Commission, with interest thereon, and also for $350 as an attorney's fee. 149 Fed. 609. On error to the United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit the judgment of the circuit court was, on April 16, 1907, affirmed (82 C. C. A. 614, 153 Fed. 728), whereupon the case was brought here on error.

Messrs. Claudian B. Northrop and Edward C. Kramer argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. P. J. Farrell and L. O. Whitenel argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This case rests on the findings and conclusion of the Interstate Commerce Commission; for while, on the trial in the circuit court, testimony in addition to that which was produced before the Commission was received, yet the finding of the court was that, "from all the evidence heard and adduced on the trial of this cause in this court, the court finds that the said findings of fact by the said Interstate Commerce Commission are supported and justified by the said evidence, and it is ordered that the said findings of fact, as above recited and set out, be and the same are adopted as the special findings of fact of the court, and that the same be set out in the records of this court accordingly."

Nothing was, of course, added in the circuit court of appeals, which merely affirmed the judgment of the circuit court. We *turn, therefore, to the proceedings [300 before the Commission, and there is this finding of fact:

"While the question is perplexing, and while we may not have apprehended all the material points involved, we are strongly of the opinion and find that, taking everything into account, the average additional expense to southern lines in case of reconsigned hay will not exceed that of direct through shipments by more than from $2 to $2.50 per car, which is equivalent upon the average loading of hay to about 1 cent per hundred pounds."

The conclusions, so far as material to this controversy, are thus stated:

"The stopping of a commodity in transit for the purpose of treatment or reconsignment is in the nature of special privilege which the carrier may concede, but which the shipper cannot, in the present state of the law, demand as a matter of lawful right. Diamond Mills v. Boston & M. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 311. Carriers may not, however, discriminate between markets nor between individuals in the granting of such privileges. If this right is given to the markets which compete with East St. Louis in this business by these defendants, it should, prima facie, also be granted to that market. If these defendants allow this privilege to the competitors of the complainant at East St. Louis, they should accord it the same privilege.

"The case shows, although not very clearly, that the defendants concede this privilege at other competing markets, and that a track buyer in East St. Louis itself can send along a car load, which he purchases, but does not unload, without the payment of this charge. It further shows, however, that the right to unload this hay and handle it at its warehouse is of value to the complainant, and that it costs these defendants something to accord that privilege.

"Under these circumstances, we think it is not an undue preference against this complainant if the railroads charge for the privilege what it actually costs them, but we 301] do not think *that they should charge more than the actual cost. The case finds that the fair average cost when the complainant handles its hay through its warehouse, over and above the cost of a through shipment, is from $2 to $2.50 per ear, or approximately 1 cent per hundred pounds. We think, therefore, that this reconsignment charge ought not to exceed the proportional rate by more than one cent, and that the complainant is entitled to recover whatever it has paid in addition to that sum."

It thus appears that the Commission was of the opinion that the shipper could not demand, as a matter of right, the stopping of the hay for the purposes of treatment or reconsignment unless the same privilege was given to other shippers; and that, in granting this privilege, the railway company could only charge the shipper the actual cost. But this privilege involved to the railway company the cost of hauling to and from the warehouses and the use of the car for some hours, perhaps days. The Commission found that $2 or $2.50 per ear, or approximately 1 cent per hundred pounds, was the actual cost to the railway company.

We are unable to concur with the Commission. If the stopping for inspection and reloading is of some benefit to the shipper and involves some service by and expense to the railway company, we do not think that the latter is limited to the actual cost of that privilege. It is justified in receiving some compensation in addition thereto. A carrier may be under no obligations to furnish sleeping or other accommodations to its passengers, but, if it does so, it is not limited in its charges to the mere cost, but may rightfully make a reasonable profit out of that which it does furnish. Especially is this true when, as here, the privilege is in no sense a part of the transportation, but outside thereof. Whether the conclusion of the Commission that the carrier is under no obligations to permit the interruption of the transit is right, and whether it is or is not under such obligation, it is entitled to receive some compensation beyond the mere cost for that which it does.

302] *We have been particular to copy the exact language used by the Commission, for, in another case between the same plaintiff and other railroad companies, involving the charges in a case of reconsignment of hay, decided on December 20 of the same year (St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 486), the Commission made an order dismissing the complaint. It is true that the facts are not precisely like those in this case, but, at the same time, the difference in the conclusions of the Commission is such as seem to suggest that per- 1006 haps, on further examination, the Commission had come to a different conclusion.

The testimony taken before the Commission is not preserved in the record, hence it would be impossible, even if proper, with all the testimony before us, to fix the amount which would be a fair and reasonable charge. All we can do is to reverse the judgments of the Circuit Court and Circuit Court of Appeals, and remand the case to the former court with instructions to send the matter back to the Commerce Commission for further investigation and report.

Reversed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
NATIONAL EXCHANGE BANK OF PROVIDENCE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 302-320.)

Assumpsit — recovering back payments on forged indorsements — demand — notice.

The right of the United States to recover back moneys paid to a bank on pension checks bearing the forged indorsements of the payees is not conditioned either upon demand or the giving of notice of the discovery of the forgeries, since the bank, by presenting the checks for payment, warranted their genuineness, and the United States cannot, especially in view of the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4764, 4765, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3284, 3285, contemplating departmental regulations for establishing the identity of pensioners, be charged with knowledge of their signatures. [For other cases, see Assumpsit, 61-65, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 90.]

Argued and submitted January 25, 26, 1909.
Decided June 1, 1909.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts in favor of the United States in an action to recover back payments upon pension checks bearing forged indorsements, ordered the entry of judgment in favor of defendant. Reversed. Judgment of the Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 80 C. C. A. 632, 151 Fed. 402.

NOTE.—On the right of a drawee of forged check or draft to recover the money paid thereon—see note to First Nat. Bank v. Bank of Wyndmere, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 49.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This action was brought by the United States to recover the sum of payments made at the subtreasury in Boston upon 194 pension checks, the signatures or marks of the persons to whom the checks were payable having been forged. The National Exchange Bank of Boston was originally sole defendant, but in legal effect the National Exchange Bank of Providence was substituted as defendant, and the issues were made up between it and the United States. We shall hereafter refer to that bank as the Exchange Bank.

The cause was tried upon an agreed statement, and the material facts may be thus summarized:

Upon receipt of pension vouchers, regular in form and purporting to be executed by the pensioners named therein,—but which in fact were forgeries,—the United States pension agent at Boston drew the checks in question upon the subtreasury at Boston, aggregating $6,362.07, in favor of the pensioners named in the vouchers, and transmitted such checks by mail directly to the address of each pensioner as given in the vouchers, in accordance with the provision of § 4765, Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3285. Of the persons named in the checks fifteen had died, and the others were the widows of soldiers, who had remarried, and whose right to a pension had ceased, all the names, however, as we have said, having been forged. With but two exceptions the checks were either for $24 or $36.

The checks with the forged indorsements 304] thereon of the *payees were cashed by the Exchange Bank, and immediately indorsed to a national bank in Boston for collection. The checks were presented by the collecting bank at the subtreasury of the United States in Boston. The collecting bank received payment of the same, and accounted for such payment to the Exchange Bank.†

In May, 1897, a special examiner of the Pension Bureau was detailed at Providence to investigate the case of one Mooy, a deceased pensioner, in whose name three of the checks here in question, each for $36, had been issued and paid in 1896. On June 18, 1897, the examiner reported to the bureau the forgery of the name of the deceased payee, and that it had probably been done by one William A. Munson. December 18, 1897, notice was given to the Exchange Bank by the United States attorney at Providence that the indorsements of Mooy's name to said checks were forged, and that at a proper time reclamation would be made for the money paid to the bank upon the checks. The remaining forgeries were discovered at different times during the months of February, March, April, and May, 1898, and in December, 1898, Munson, who was undergoing imprisonment upon a sentence imposed June 22, 1898, for forging a pension check, with which presumably this case is not concerned, admitted that he had forged the signatures of the payees on the checks in suit.

*On July 22, 1898, the United States [305 attorney at Providence made written demand upon the Exchange Bank to be refunded the sums paid, except as to checks aggregating $351.27, for which no demand for repayment was made other than by the bringing of this action. The bank refusing to repay, this action was commenced on August 27, 1901.

Each of the 194 checks was made the subject of two counts. An indebtedness of the defendant bank to the United States was averred in the first count to have arisen from the fact that a described check had been lawfully issued by a United States pension agent, drawn upon the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, that a signature, purporting to be that of the payee, was thereafter forged upon the check, and that the Exchange Bank indorsed said check and presented it for payment to the Assistant Treasurer, who paid the amount thereof. The second count was the common count for money received by the defendant to the use of the United States. In substance, the defenses interposed in the answer of the bank were that, if the facts averred in the declaration were established by the proof, the bank was yet not liable, because the action had not been brought within a reasonable time after the alleged payments of the drafts, nor had prompt notice been given of the discovery of the forgeries. It was also averred that the United States had been negligent in not verifying the signatures of the payees of the checks in suits by comparing them with signatures of the payees in its possession.

Upon the agreed facts the circuit court entered judgment against the bank for the full amount claimed, with interest. The appellate court, however, reversed this judgment, and remanded the cause with direc-

†The payments were made as follows:

During 1886, 1887, and 1888, five checks, each for $36, were paid on account of pension certificate issued in name of Martha Crampton		$180 00
During 1892	$334 80
1893	867 27
1894	1,092 00
1895	1,380 00
1896	1,620 00
1897	888 00
		6,182 07
		$6,362 07

tions to enter judgment for the Exchange Bank (80 C. C. A. 632, 151 Fed. 402); and this writ of error was thereupon prosecuted.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Is the government's right of action defeated by the failure of its agents to give notice to defendant of the forged indorsements immediately upon the discovery thereof?

United States v. National Park Bank, 6 Fed. 852; United States v. National Bank, 2 Mackey, 296; United States v. Onondaga County Sav. Bank, 39 Fed. 259.

Ordinarily no delay is regarded as vital unless it has had the effect of placing the opposite party in a worse condition.

Cooke v. United States, 91 U. S. 389, 402, 403, 23 L. ed. 237, 244, 245; 5 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 546, 547; White v. Continental Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 321, 21 Am. Rep. 612; Continental Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 50 N. Y. 575; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. § 1372.

Mr. Theodore Francis Green argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The bank is not concluded by the fact that it cashed the checks.

Salt Springs Bank v. Syracuse Sav. Inst. 62 Barb. 101; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 96, 112, 29 L. ed. 811, 817, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Howard v. Mississippi Valley Bank, 28 La. Ann. 727, 26 Am. Rep. 105; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 140, 25 L. ed. 807, 808.

The bank, by presentment, did not warrant genuineness.

4 Harvard Law Rev. 301; East India Co. v. Tritton, 3 Barn. & C. 289; Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 Barn. & C. 428; Dedham Nat. Bank v. Everett Nat. Bank, 177 Mass. 392, 83 Am. St. Rep. 286, 59 N. E. 62; Bernheimer v. Marshall, 2 Minn. 84, Gil. 61, 72 Am. Dec. 79; Bank of St. Albans v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 10 Vt. 145, 33 Am. Dec. 188; Story, Promissory Notes, 7th ed. 526, note 1; Goetz v. Bank of Kansas City, 119 U. S. 551, 555, 30 L. ed. 515, 517, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Leather v. Simpson, L. R. 11 Eq. 398; Sheffield v. Barclay [1903] 2 K. B. 580.

In case of a payment under a forged indorsement of commercial paper, the plaintiff, in order to recover, must have given notice of the forgery within a reasonable time after payment.

Cocks v. Masterman, 9 Barn. & C. 902; Mather v. Maidstone, 18 C. B. 294; Wilkinson v. Johnson, supra; Smith v. Mercer, 6 Taunt. 76; Bloomer v. Spittle, L. R. 13 Eq. 427; 2 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 598; United States v. Cooke, 9 Phila. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 14,855; Bank of United States v.

Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. 333, 6 L. ed. 334.

In case of a payment under a forged indorsement of commercial paper, the plaintiff, to recover, must have given notice of the forgery within a reasonable time after its discovery.

Cocks v. Masterman, supra; Mather v. Maidstone, 18 C. B. 274; Wilkinson v. Johnson; Smith v. Mercer, and Bloomer v. Spittle,—supra; 2 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 598; Bank of United States v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. 333, 344, 6 L. ed. 334, 338; United States v. Clinton Nat. Bank, 28 Fed. 357; United States v. Central Nat. Bank, 6 Fed. 134; United States v. Cooke, supra; United States v. National Exch. Bank, 45 Fed. 163; Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33; Raymond v. Baar, 13 Serg. & R. 318, 15 Am. Dec. 603; 3 Kent, Com. 12th ed. 108, 111, *85, note, *86, note b.

A number of cases allowing recovery of money paid under a forged indorsement will be found to conform to the rule that notice must be given within a reasonable time. Several, indeed, expressly recognize the correctness of the principle.

Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill, 287; Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 N. Y. 230; Ellis v. Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. 4 Ohio St. 657, 64 Am. Dec. 610; Frank v. Lanier, 91 N. Y. 112; United States v. National Bank, 2 Mackey, 289; Merchants' Bank v. Marine Bank, 3 Gill, 96, 43 Am. Dec. 300; Goddard v. Merchants' Bank, 4 N. Y. 147, affirming 2 Sandf. 247; Star F. Ins. Co. v. New Hampshire Nat. Bank, 60 N. H. 443; McCall v. Corning, 3 La. Ann. 409, 48 Am. Dec. 454; Wilkinson v. Johnson, supra; Carpenter v. Northborough Nat. Bank, 123 Mass. 66.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

A preliminary matter needs to be noticed. In the opinion of the circuit court of appeals it is said (italics ours):

"The precise form of only one of the so-called checks is shown by the record, as follows:

United States Pension Agency, No. 297,073.
Boston, Mass., Meh. 5, 1892.
Assistant Treasurer of the United States,
Boston, Mass.

Pay to the order of Mahala B. 9492 B81
Jaques

Thirty-six Dollars. $36

36 100 Interior

W. H. Osborne,

U. S. Pension Agent.

Paid Mar. 12, 1892,

Asst. Treas., Boston.

"Indorsements:

Mahala B. Jaques,
Payee.
M. M. Angell.

Pay Nat. Bank of the Republic, Boston, or order, for collection, for account of First National Bank, Providence, R. I.

C. E. Lapham,
Cashier.

Indorsement Guaranteed.

Nat'l Bank of the Republic, Boston.

"This is, however, understood to be a sample of the remaining checks. As they were drawn by the pension agent on the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, the question naturally arises whether, after all, they were anything more than official warrants,—a question which we will turn to later. *It 310] will be observed, however, that no indorsement by the Exchange Bank appears on the sample shown in the record, and whatever indorsement there is is simply 'for collection.'"

The sample check thus referred to is also set out in the opinion delivered in the circuit court. But no such check is in the record, nor is it embraced in the list of checks collected by the Exchange Bank, and for which recovery is sought by the United States. Presumably the stated sample check must have been inadvertently taken from the record in an action against some other bank. At all events, as it is not in argument questioned that the Exchange Bank was the holder of the checks sued for, when they were paid by the United States, we shall assume the correctness of the recital in the agreed statement of facts, that the checks "with the forged signatures thereon were cashed by the defendant, who immediately indorsed the said checks to a national bank in Boston for collection."

The circuit court of appeals reversed the judgment in favor of the United States upon the ground that, by the operation of an exceptional rule, said to prevail, under certain conditions, as to commercial paper, the United States could not recover for the mistaken payments, as there had been unreasonable delay in giving notice to the Exchange Bank after the discovery of the forgeries. The correctness of this action is assailed in the assignments of error, the government contending that the pension checks in question were mere Treasury warrants, not commercial paper in the true sense of that term, and hence not controlled by the so-called exceptional commercial rule; but that, even if the checks were commercial paper, and governed by such rule, mere negligent delay in giving notice of the discovery of the forgery would not prevent recovery unless the Exchange Bank established by proof that it had thereby suffered damage. It is besides claimed that if the agents of the government were negligent in giving notice of the discovery of the forgeries, their laches cannot be imputed to the United States. The Exchange Bank not only traverses *these assignments, but insists[311 that the claim of the United States to recover was rightfully rejected, because the duty was on it not only to give prompt notice of the discovery of the forgeries, but also to discover the forgeries promptly after payment,—a contention which is controverted by the government.

In order to simplify the issue for decision we concede, for the sake of the argument only, that the forged instruments were not official warrants, as contended by the government, but, in a generic sense, are to be classed as negotiable commercial paper, and that, in a case coming within the exceptional rule referred to, the laches of the authorized agents of the government can be imputed to it. But, assuming the instruments to be negotiable paper, the question yet remains whether the right of the United States to recover from the Exchange Bank is controlled or limited by the exceptional rule referred to.

That, in certain classes of cases, an exceptional rule is enforced in England as to commercial paper, by which, under particular circumstances, such paper is taken out of the operation of the general rule relating to the recovery of money paid by mistake, is not subject to question. Price v. Neale, 3 Burr. 1354; Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654; Smith v. Mereer, 6 Taunt. 76; Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 Barn. & C. 428; Coeks v. Masterman, 9 Barn. & C. 902. The decisions referred to, however, show that the exception was limited to cases where the person who paid a forged instrument, and who sought recovery of the amount paid, was charged with knowledge of the genuine signature of the person whose name was forged, and, therefore, was presumed to have been negligent in making the payment. For instance, where one accepted a draft purporting to be drawn upon him by a customer whose signature he was presumed to know, which afterwards turned out to be a forgery. Again, where a draft which purported to have been accepted, and, by the seeming act of acceptance, was made payable at a particular bank, which paid the same for account of its customer, the apparent acceptor, and it afterwards turned *out that the acceptance[312 was a forgery, the exceptional rule was applied.

Several of the English cases above cited were reviewed by this court in Bank of United States v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat.

333, 348, et seq., 6 L. ed. 334, 339. In that case recovery of moneys paid was denied to a bank which had received as genuine notes it had issued, but which had been fraudulently altered as to amount after being put in circulation, the decision having been rested (p. 353) "upon the broad ground that there was an acceptance of the notes as genuine, and that it falls directly within the authorities which govern the cases of acceptance of forged drafts."

The exceptional rule was thus noticed in the opinion delivered in Cooke v. United States, 91 U. S. 389, 396, 23 L. ed. 237, 242:

"It is, undoubtedly, also true, as a general rule of commercial law, that where one accepts forged paper purporting to be his own, and pays it to a holder for value, he cannot recall the payment. The operative fact in this rule is the acceptance, or, more properly, perhaps, the adoption, of the paper as genuine by its apparent maker. Often the bare receipt of the paper, accompanied by payment, is equivalent to an adoption within the meaning of the rule; because, as every man is presumed to know his own signature, and ought to detect its forgery by simple inspection, the examination which he can give when the demand upon him is made is all that the law considers necessary for his protection. He must repudiate as soon as he ought to have discovered the forgery; otherwise he will be regarded as accepting the paper. Unnecessary delay, under such circumstances, is unreasonable; and unreasonable delay is negligence, which throws the burden of the loss upon him who is guilty of it, rather than upon one who is not. The rule is thus well stated in Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 45: 'The party receiving such notes must examine them as soon as he has opportunity, and return them immediately; if he does not, he is negligent; and negligence will defeat his action.'"

313] *Although it has been considered that, in later cases, courts of England have mitigated the strictness of the exception upheld in the cases we have previously cited, and have made the right to recover back embraced in such cases depend somewhat upon the prejudice occasioned by the delay in giving notice (Chitty, Bills, 464), it is certain that the exception has not been extended so as to cause it to include a case like the one before us. Imperial Bank v. Bank of Hamilton [1903] A. C. 49. And, although the courts of some of the states of the Union have limited, restricted, or declined to follow the exceptional rule,—see the subject reviewed in Greenwald v. Ford (1906) 21 S. D. —, 109 N. W. 516, and First Nat. Bank v. Bank of Wyndmere (1906) 15 N. D. 299, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 49, 108 N. W. 546, —we have been cited to no decision of a court of last resort, involving a case like the one before us, where it was held that such a case is controlled by the exceptional rule. True it is, a decision of the supreme court of New York, rendered in 1841 (Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill, 287), involving analogous facts, has, by some text writers, been treated as holding a doctrine which might be considered as establishing that the exceptional rule, as somewhat qualified by the decision in question, would be applicable to a case like the one before us. In the case referred to it was decided that where the bank upon which a draft was drawn paid it in ignorance of the fact that the supposed signature of the person to whom it was payable had been forged, it could not recover back the money without exercising reasonable diligence to give notice after the discovery of the forgery. We think, however, it is apparent that the court considered not that it was applying the exceptional rule, but that it was simply announcing its conception of the general principle as to the right to recover back money paid by mutual mistake. This is evident, since the court, after holding that the case before it was not governed by the exceptional rule, remarked that "where each party enjoys the same chance of knowledge, no case demands anything more than reasonable diligence in giving notice after the discovery of the forgery." No authority, *however, was cited on this proposition, nor was any intimation given by the court as to whether, even if there had been negligence in giving notice, recovery would not be permitted if no damage had been occasioned by the delay to the party to whom the payment had been made. A later case in New York enforced a principle which we deem applicable to the present controversy. The case is White v. Continental Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 316, 21 Am. Rep. 612. The facts were these: A customer of the firm of White & Company drew a draft on that firm for $27. After the delivery of the draft to the payee it was raised to the sum of $2,750. The raised draft came into the possession of the Continental National Bank of New York city, who took the same from a customer, who was credited with and drew the amount. The Continental Bank presented the draft to White & Company, and that firm accepted the same, payable at the Leather Manufacturers' National Bank. When due, the Leather Manufacturers' Bank paid the Continental Bank, and debited the account of White & Company. This payment was made in August. Monthly accounts passed between White & Company and its correspondent by whom the draft had been drawn, but the August account, which was rendered in the early part of September, was not examined. When the next account came along and was examined, the alteration of the draft was discovered, and White & Company, evidently being bound to the Leather Manufacturers' Bank by the payment made by that bank at the request of White & Company, and for their account, notified the Continental Bank, demanded repayment, and, on refusal, brought suit to recover. The trial court enforced the exceptional rule and denied the right of White & Company to recover. The court of appeals, while substantially conceding that, if the forgery had been of the name of the drawer of the draft, White & Company, because of their presumed knowledge of such signature, would have been, by their acceptance, brought within the exceptional rule, decided that the rule was not applicable, because the forgery concerned not the signature, but the body of the draft, of which White & Company were not presumed to have knowledge. 315]*Thus eliminating the exceptional rule, the court held that, as the Continental Bank had presented the forged draft for payment, and had, under the principles of commercial liability, at least impliedly warranted its genuineness, the bank was liable to repay to White & Company. Although resting its conclusion upon the warranty on the part of the Continental National Bank of the genuineness of the instrument which it presented, the court, nevertheless, at the close of the opinion, observed (p. 322):

"But, waiving the question as to the responsibility of the defendant for the genuineness of the instrument, and taking the most favorable view for the defendant, which is to regard it as the case of a mutual mistake, in respect to which neither was in fault, and in that view and upon that theory, the case is within the principles decided in Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 N. Y. 230; Kingston Bank v. Eltinge, 40 N. Y. 391, 100 Am. Dec. 516."

White v. Continental Nat. Bank was cited and the doctrine therein expressed was approved and applied by this court in Leather Mfrs.' Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 128 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 342, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3. The opinion in that case, delivered by Mr. Justice Gray, was announced on October 22, 1888, and was subsequent in date to several decisions of lower Federal courts, cited in the opinion of the court below in this case, and which were deemed to conclusively demonstrate that the United States was not entitled to recover. In the Leather Mfrs.' Bank Case the question for decision was thus stated in the opinion:

"The question, then, is whether, if a bank, upon which a check is drawn, payable to a particular person or order, pays the amount of the check to one presenting it with a forged indorsement of the payee's name, both parties supposing the indorsement to be genuine, the right of action of the bank to recover back the money from the person so obtaining it accrues immediately upon the payment of the money, or only after a demand for its repayment."

The right of action was held to have accrued upon the payment of the money. [316 After distinguishing the case from one which involved the relations of a bank and its depositors, the court said (p. 34):

"But, as between the bank and the person obtaining money on a forged check or order, the case is quite different. The first step in bringing about the payment is the act of the holder of the check, in assuming and representing himself to have a right, which he has not, to receive the money. One who, by presenting forged paper to a bank, procures the payment of the amount thereof to him, even if he makes no express warranty, in law represents that the paper is genuine; and, if the payment is made in ignorance of the forgery, is liable to an action by the bank to recover back the money, which, in equity and good conscience, has never ceased to be its property. It is not a case in which a consideration which has once existed fails by subsequent election or other act of either party, or of a third person; but there is never, at any stage of the transaction, any consideration for the payment. Espy v. First Nat. Bank, 18 Wall. 604, 21 L. ed. 947; Gurney v. Womersley, 4 El. & Bl. 133; Cabot Bank v. Morton, 4 Gray, 156; Aldrich v. Jackson, 5 R. I. 218; White v. Continental Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 316, 21 Am. Rep. 612.

"Whenever money is paid upon the representation of the receiver that he has either a certain title in property transferred in consideration of the payment, or a certain authority to receive the money paid, when, in fact, he has no such title or authority, then, although there be no fraud or intentional misrepresentation on his part, yet there is no consideration for the payment: and the money remains, in equity and good conscience, the property of the payer, and may be recovered back by him, without any previous demand, as money had and received to his use. His right of action accrues, and the statute of limitations begins to run, immediately upon the payment.

"In the case at bar, as in the case last cited, the plaintiff's right of action did not depend upon any express promise by *the defendant after the discovery of [317 the mistake or upon any demand by the plaintiff upon the defendant, or by the depositor or any other person upon the plaintiff; but it was to recover back the money, as paid without consideration, and had and received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use. That right accrued at the date of the payment, and was barred by the statute of limitations in six years from that date."

We are of the opinion that the case before us is directly within the principle governing the ruling made in the case just cited as well as within the doctrine of White v. Continental Nat. Bank, which in effect, as we have shown, was approved by this court in Leather Mfrs.' Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank. The United States is not before us as the acceptor of a draft drawn upon it, and charged with knowledge of the signature of the drawer; nor was it a bank which had paid the check of a depositor, and was charged with knowledge of the signature of such depositor. The forgery here was in the name of the payee, and it is therefore impossible, as it was in the case of White v. Continental Nat. Bank and in the Leather Mfrs.' Bank Case, to bring this cause within the exceptional rule without holding that the United States was charged with knowledge of the signatures of the vast multitude of persons who are entitled under the law to receive pensions. The exceptional rule as to certain classes of commercial paper proceeds upon an assumption of knowledge or duty to know, naturally arising from the situation of the parties, entirely consonant with their capabilities, and in accord with the common-sense view of their relation. To apply the rule, however, to the government and its duty in paying out the millions of pension claims which are yearly discharged by means of checks would require it to be assumed that that was known, or ought to have been known, which, on the face of the situation, was impossible to be known; would besides wholly disregard the relation between the parties, and would also require that to be assumed which the obvious dictates of common sense make clear could not be truth-318]fully assumed. But, conclusive *as are these considerations, the case does not alone depend upon them, since we think legislation of Congress in reason precludes the conception that it was contemplated that the United States (or its agents) had actual knowledge of the signatures of pensioners, and, in paying pensions, was bound to all the world under such an assumption.

By §§ 4764 and 4765, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3284, 3285), it is required before a pension check shall be issued, that vouchers shall be supplied, and the duty is cast upon the Secretary of the Interior of making rules and regulations to establish the identity of the pensioner. As shown by the record, the regulations thus promulgated require vouchers to be signed in duplicate before an officer authorized to administer an oath, or before a fourth-class postmaster. The pensioner is required to exhibit his pension certificate to such officer, and also to sign and make oath to a statement as to his identity, his existing right to the pension, and his postoffice address. The officer is required to certify as to inspection of the pension certificate; that the pensioner was fully identified; that he had signed the duplicate receipts; and the address of the pensioner is to be stated in the certificate. These requirements are incompatible with the assumption that the government was chargeable with knowledge of the identity, continued existence, and right to pensions, or with the signatures, of those entitled to receive pension moneys. The requirement by the government of proof, for its own protection, affords no ground for the contention that, as to any action taken as the result of the furnishing of such proof, the government is estopped as to third parties from showing that the proofs furnished were false and fraudulent, and that the government had been deceived thereby. To so hold would be to say that, from the act of exerting a precaution against fraud, there arose a presumption by which the fraud could be successfully accomplished. This would be the case if it were now held that, because by forged vouchers the government was deceived into acting, third parties had a right to rely upon the integrity of the proof, and to estop the government as though *representations as to the verity of[319 such proof had been made by it to such third parties. The rights, therefore, of the bank as the apparent acquirer of the pension checks are to be governed by the nature and character of the instruments, and cannot be enlarged so as to relieve the bank from the obligation of warranty implied in the presentation of checks and the collecting of the amount. The subject is aptly illustrated in the opinion of Coxe, Judge, in United States v. Onondaga County Sav. Bank, 39 Fed. 259, affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit in 12 C. C. A. 407, 26 U. S. App. 377, 64 Fed. 703.

As the nature of the forgery did not cause the case to be controlled by the exceptional rule, and as the Exchange Bank, when it presented the checks and obtained thereon the money of the United States, by operation of law warranted the genuineness of the instruments which it thus presented and upon which it asked and received payment, it follows that the case in substance is accurately portrayed in observations made by the court of appeals of New York in the White Case, at pages 320, 321:

"The facts which disentitled the defendant to receive the money, and in ignorance of which it was paid, were those presumed to be within the knowledge of the defendant, and not of the plaintiffs. The defendant, in receiving the money and in disposing of it, did not act upon the faith of any admission by the plaintiffs, express or implied, of any fact which they now controvert in prosecuting this action. There was, therefore, no want of good faith, no negligence, or even want of ordinary care on the part of the plaintiffs in the payment of the money. The defendant, in the entire transaction, acted upon other evidence of its right to the money than the statement or actions of the plaintiffs, and, in dealing with the bill and with the money, its avails, acted upon the apparent title and genuineness of the instrument, and the responsibility of those from and through whom it received the bill. The plaintiffs, therefore, owed no duty to the defendant in respect to the forgery, 320]*which invalidated the bill and its title to the moneys represented by it."

Under these conditions the warranty of genuineness implied by the presentation and collection of the checks bearing the forged indorsement having been broken at the time the checks were cashed by the United States, and the cause of action having therefore then accrued, the right to sue to recover back from the Exchange Bank was not conditioned upon either demand or the giving of notice of the discovery of facts which, by the operation of the legal warranty, were presumably within the knowledge of the defendant.

The conclusion to which we have thus come renders it unnecessary to consider whether, if the facts presented merely a case of mutual mistake, where neither party was in fault, and reasonable diligence was required to give notice of the discovery of the forgery, if there was lack of such diligence, it would operate to bar recovery by the United States, although the Exchange Bank was not prejudiced by the delay.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be reversed and the judgment of the Circuit Court affirmed. //

And it is so ordered.

OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, Limited, Plff. in Err.,
v.

NEVADA N. STRANAHAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 320-343.)

Aliens — exclusion — power of administrative officers.

1. Congress, in the exercise of its authority over foreign commerce and of its 53 L. ed.

power to regulate immigration, could lawfully enact the provisions of the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012), § 9, which make it unlawful to bring into the United States any alien afflicted with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease, provide for the exacting of a penalty for bringing in an alien so afflicted, authorize the refusal of clearance papers to a vessel while any such fine imposed upon it remains unpaid, and confide the enforcement of the law to administrative officers.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Right to jury trial — criminal proceeding — penalty for bringing in diseased aliens.

2. Empowering the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to exact a money penalty for bringing into the United States an alien afflicted with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease, in violation of the act of March 3, 1903, § 9, when the official medical examination at the port of arrival shows that the alien was suffering from the disease at the time of embarkation, the existence of which might have been detected by a competent medical examination then made as the statute requires, does not render such statute open to the objection that it defines a criminal offense, and authorizes a purely administrative officer to determine whether the defined crime has been committed, and, if so, to inflict a punishment. [For other cases, see Jury, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Action — civil or criminal — enforcing penalty.

3. The enforcement of the exaction of $100 which the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is authorized by the act of March 3, 1903, § 9, to impose for violations of its provisions against bringing into the United States aliens afflicted with loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases is not necessarily governed by the rules controlling in criminal prosecutions merely because such exaction is a penalty.

[For other cases, see Action or Suit, 7-9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegating judicial power to administrative officers.

4. Congress could constitutionally empower the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to enforce, without invoking the judicial power, the penalty imposed by the act of March 3, 1903, § 9, for bringing into the United States an alien afflicted with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease, when the official medical examination at the port or arrival discloses that such alien was suffering from the disease at the time of embarkation, the existence of which might have been detected by a competent medical examination then made as the statute requires.

NOTE.—On the right to trial by jury—see notes to Supreme Ct. Justices v. United States, 19 L. ed. U. S. 658; Eilenbecker v. District Ct. 33 L. ed. U. S. 801; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shane, 39 L. ed. U. S. 727; and Perego v. Dodge, 41 L. ed. U. S. 113.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 167-171, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law—due process of law—notice or hearing.

5. Making the official medical examination at the port of arrival conclusive for the purpose of imposing the penalty, enforceable by refusing clearance papers until paid, which is authorized by the act of March 3, 1903, § 9, for violating its provisions by bringing into the United States an alien afflicted with a loathsome or contagious disease from which he was suffering at the time of embarkation, the existence of which might have been detected by means of a competent medical examination then made, does not render such statute repugnant to U. S. Const., 5th Amend., as taking property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 764-767, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 509.]

Argued January 11, 12, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action to recover back a penalty paid to the collector of customs of the port of New York for bringing into the United States an alien afflicted with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease. Affirmed.

See same case below, 155 Fed. 428.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Lucius H. Beers and William G. Choate argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The provision of the 5th Amendment to the Constitution left Congress with no powers to authorize any court or officer to take property without giving the owner previous notice and an opportunity to be heard.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 46, 50, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 903, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Central R. Co. v. Wright, 207 U. S. 127, 52 L. ed. 134, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 463; Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 386, 52 L. ed. 1103, 1112, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 424; Cooper v. Board of Works, 14 C. B. N. S. 180; R. v. The Chancellor, 1 Strange, 557.

1014

Even in tax cases, where beyond question Congress can leave the determination of the fact on which the liability depends to an executive officer, and where, from reasons of public policy, the most summary proceeding is allowable, the absence of notice and an opportunity to be heard is fatal.

Londoner v. Denver, supra.

It cannot be urged, in support of the provisions of circular 58, that officials, as a matter of grace or favor, might have extended the time, for the provisions of the circular are clear.

Stuart v. Palmer, supra; Security Trust & S. V. Co. v. Lexington, 203 U. S. 323, 333, 51 L. ed. 204, 208, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The fines were imposed in some cases without any previous notice, and in all cases without any adequate opportunity to be heard.

Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 378, 52 L. ed. 1103, 1109, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 436, 45 L. ed. 1165, 1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Section 9 of the immigration act of 1903 violates art 3 of the Constitution relating to the judiciary, and it also violates the 5th Amendment relating to the taking of property without due process of law, because it authorizes the taking of the property of the plaintiffs in error without a judicial trial.

Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 237, 41 L. ed. 140, 143, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 977; United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 291, 48 L. ed. 979, 984, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; United States ex rel. Anderson v. Burke, 99 Fed. 895.

In cases which arose, under the customs laws and under the immigration laws, for the recovery of penalties by civil action, it has been held in both cases that some of the provisions relating to trial for crimes apply to such actions.

Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 634, 29 L. ed. 746, 752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

If Congress itself is without power to punish directly and without judicial trial, then, obviously, it cannot empower an executive officer to punish without such a trial.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 377.

The distinction between the power to regulate, which may be given by Congress to an executive officer, and the power to punish, violations of statute, which must remain with the courts, is well illustrated by Union

214 U. S.

Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

These cases are clearly distinguishable from cases where this court has sanctioned the taking of property by the government without a judicial trial, and has placed the determination of the fact on which liability rests on an executive officer, because all of these cases rest upon the existence of an imperative necessity for prompt and summary determination, while that necessity does not exist here.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 282, 15 L. ed. 372, 376; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 593, 26 L. ed. 253, 256; Passavant v. United States, 148 U. S. 214, 220, 37 L. ed. 426, 428, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; Helwig v. United States, 188 U. S. 605, 47 L. ed. 614, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Clay v. Swope, 38 Fed. 396; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Re Rapier, 143 U. S. 110, 134, 36 L. ed. 93, 102 Sup. Ct. Rep. 374; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

A suit for a penalty for an act prohibited by a statute of the United States is a criminal prosecution within the meaning of the 6th Amendment. It is not the form, but the nature of the action, which determines whether it is criminal or civil.

Iowa v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 3 L.R.A. 554, 37 Fed. 497; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 633, 634, 29 L. ed. 746, 752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 480, 37 L. ed. 1150, 1151, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. 70; Com. v. Certain Intoxicating Liquors, 115 Mass. 142; Com. v. Certain Intoxicating Liquors, 122 Mass. 11; State v. Dent, 29 Kan. 418; Schiek v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, 49 L. ed. 99, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 585; United States v. Nash, 111 Fed. 525.

Assistant to the Attorney General Ellis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry L. Stinson, Winfred T. Denison, and E. P. Grosvenor, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The subject of immigration is a part of the power over foreign commerce which is expressly assigned to Congress by art. 1, § 8, of the Constitution.

Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 659, 35 L. ed. 1146, 1149, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 290, 48 L. ed. 979, 983, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Head Money

Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 580-595, 28 L. ed. 798-803, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 12 L. ed. 702; Immigration Comrs. v. North German Lloyd, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 550; New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. ed. 383, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87.

It is also a part of the inherent control of the sovereign over its boundary line.

Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 32 L. ed. 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams and Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, supra.

Within such fields acts of Congress are constitutional, unless they fall under some specific prohibition of the Constitution.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 353, 356, 47 L. ed. 492, 500, 501, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 108, 34 L. ed. 128, 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 285, 45 L. ed. 802, 863, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

Repeated decisions of this court have recognized the unusual completeness of this power acquired by Congress from these two sources, and have expressed the reluctance of the courts to interfere in questions arising in the administration of the laws passed by Congress in the exercise of the power.

United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 289, 48 L. ed. 979, 983, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, supra; Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamataya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 86, 97, 47 L. ed. 721, 724, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 493, 48 L. ed. 525, 534, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Fong Yue Ting v. United States; Chinese Exclusion Case; and Lottery Case,—supra; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 310, 329, 34 L. ed. 674, 680, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103.

Section 9 does not create an offense, within the meaning of the word "crime" as used in the constitutional provisions, requiring a jury trial.

Schiek v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, 67, 49 L. ed. 99, 101, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 585; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 481, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 549, 552, 32 L. ed. 223, 226, 227, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 425, 29 L. ed. 89, 92, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Taylor v. United States, 3 How. 197, 210, 11 L. ed. 559, 564; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 141, 38 L. ed. 385, 390, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

The fact that the section used the word "fine" instead of the word "penalty" does not necessarily indicate an intention to create a crime, for the words "fine" and "penalty" are interchangeable.

Cunard S. S. Co. v. Stranahan, 134 Fed. 318; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 7th ed. p. 17, note.

There are many familiar statutory precedents for penalties to be recovered civilly as debts.

Werckmeister v. American Tobacco Co. 207 U. S. 375, 52 L. ed. 254, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 538, 21 L. ed. 908, 912; Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 542, 20 L. ed. 491, 493; Proctor v. People, 24 Ill. App. 599; Ferguson v. People, 73 Ill. 559; United States v. Mundell, 1 Hughes, 423, Fed. Cas. No. 15,834; United States v. Younger, 92 Fed. 672; Stearns v. United States, 2 Paine, 311, Fed. Cas. No. 13,341; People v. Girard, 73 Hun, 457, 26 N. Y. Supp. 272, affirmed in 145 N. Y. 105, 45 Am. St. Rep. 595, 39 N. E. 823; Fielding v. LaGrange, 104 Iowa, 530, 73 N. W. 1038; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 562, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1113, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 7th ed. pp. 16, 32, §§ 956, 990; Moller v. United States, 6 C. C. A. 459, 13 U. S. App. 472, 57 Fed. 495.

In committing the enforcement of the provisions of § 9 to an administrative or executive officer, Congress did not violate the provision of the Constitution relating to the judicial power.

Bartlett v. Kane, 16 How. 269, 14 L. ed. 933; Passavant v. United States, 148 U. S. 214, 221, 37 L. ed. 426, 429, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; Origet v. Hedden, 155 U. S. 228, 236, 39 L. ed. 130, 133, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Doll v. Evans, 9 Phila. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 3,969; Clay v. Swope, 38 Fed. 396; Com. v. Byrne, 20 Gratt. 165; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Ju Toy, supra; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 170, 48 L. ed. 917, 921, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamataya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 98, 47 L. ed. 724, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Chinese Exclusion Case, supra; United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 48 L. ed. 979, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193, 46 L. ed. 1121, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; Fok Yung Yo v. United States, 185 U. S. 296, 46 L. ed. 917, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686;

Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 39 L. ed. 1082, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 140, 38 L. ed. 385, 390, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; McGehee, Duc Process of Law, pp. 375, 376; State v. French, 71 Ohio St. 186, 104 Am. St. Rep. 770, 73 N. E. 216, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 948.

Congress may certainly delegate to others powers which it may rightfully use itself.

United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291, 10 L. ed. 968; Gratiot v. United States, 4 How. 80, 11 L. ed. 884; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, supra; Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 84, 47 L. ed. 79, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Story, Const. § 528; Baldwin, American Judiciary, p. 24.

Within the marginal area between the powers it is competent for Congress to make such distribution as it deems reasonable, for its objects and its decisions, at least within that area, are not to be disturbed by the courts.

Cary v. Curtis, 3 How. 236, 11 L. ed. 576; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 284, 15 L. ed. 372; Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 606, 32 L. ed. 1075, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 415, 421-423, 4 L. ed. 579, 603, 605; Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46, 88, 51 L. ed. 956, 970, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655.

Obviously the administrative power is more appropriately and freely available in questions involving public rights than in questions of private right between man and man.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 283, 284, 15 L. ed. 372, 377, 378; Goodnow, Comparative Administrative Law, p. 384.

The general objects to which § 9 is subsidiary have already been held to be of such public necessity as to justify the destruction, without judicial proceeding, of the very highest right of a citizen; namely, citizenship itself,—a right beside which the alleged right of judicial trial as a condition to the imposition of a hundred dollar penalty is insignificant.

United States v. Ju Toy, supra; Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 609, 32 L. ed. 1068, 1076, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 722, 37 L. ed. 905, 916, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States; and Japanese Immigration Case,—supra; Re Howard, 63 Fed. 263; Re Sing Lee, 54 Fed. 334; United States v. Sing Tuck, supra.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372, as to deprivation of property is even more extreme than the Ju Toy Case as to deprivation of liberty; for, in that case, the court upheld the taking of property to the extent of $1,374,199.65 my purely administrative process, and without any notice or hearing whatever.

Other cases incident to the raising of revenue for the support of government are the following, involving summary infringement of the ordinary individual rights as practically necessary to the interests of the public.

Bartlett v. Kane, 16 How. 263, 272, 14 L. ed. 931, 934; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 310, 34 L. ed. 674, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 429, 43 L. ed. 224, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232-239, 33 L. ed. 892-896, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Origet v. Hedden, supra; Hilton v. Merritt, 110 U. S. 97, 28 L. ed. 83, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; United States v. Leng, 18 Fed. 15; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335; United States v. Tiffany, Treas. Dec. No. 27,754; Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 34 L. ed. 196, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Cary v. Curtis, 3 How. 236, 11 L. ed. 576; North German Lloyd S. S. Co. v. Hedden, 43 Fed. 17; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 389, 51 L. ed. 1098, 1105, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 688.

The power of Congress to use exclusively administrative agencies over the importation of goods is equally well established, even when the purpose is not revenue.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, supra.

The extent to which Congress may dispose of private interests by summary administrative process in support of the power as to national banks is illustrated by a line of cases in which the court sustained the right of the Comptroller of the Treasury to appoint receivers of national banks, and levy assessments upon their stockholders, without prior judicial ascertainment.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 168; United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216; Bushnell v. Leland, 164 U. S. 684, 41 L. ed. 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Young v. Wempe, 46 Fed. 354.

The latest case upon this general subject is in respect to the power over the Indians.

United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 53 L. ed.

205 U. S. 80, 51 L. ed. 718, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

The right of the administrative officers to exclude persons from use of the mails is undoubted.

Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789.

In the subject of patents, the administrative power was sustained, and for the same reason.

United States v. Duell, 172 U. S. 576, 583, 43 L. ed. 559, 562, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 83, 20 L. ed. 485, 486; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875; State v. French, 71 Ohio St. 186, 104 Am. St. Rep. 770, 73 N. E. 216, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 948.

Section 9 does not violate the due process clause of the 5th Amendment.

Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71, 83, 84, 47 L. ed. 79, 85, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 294, 50 L. ed. 762, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459; Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 541, 52 L. ed. 327, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 658; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, ante, 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Davis v. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 249, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

In the cases before circular 58, the determination of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that the facts warranted the imposition of a penalty was arrived at with due process of law.

Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamataya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 86, 101, 7 L. ed. 721, 726, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 497, 48 L. ed. 525, 536, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 310, 323, 34 L. ed. 674, 678, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Origet v. Hedden, supra; Re Moy Quong Shing, 125 Fed. 643; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 594, 26 L. ed. 253, 256; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, supra; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 313; Glidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255, 258, 47 L. ed. 798, 801, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574;

Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 32 L. ed. 405, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Any proceeding reasonably necessary and appropriate to the situation is due process of law.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 58, 47 L. ed. 70, 74, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, supra; Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 265, 289, 27 L. ed. 552, 562, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 107, 24 L. ed. 616, 620.

In the cases after circular 58, the determination of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that the facts warranted the imposition of a penalty was arrived at with due process of law; the regulations provided for fourteen days' notice.

Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Johnson v. Hunter, 127 Fed. 223; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 192, 46 L. ed. 1113, 1120, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Huling v. Kaw Valley R. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 559, 32 L. ed. 1045, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 314, 318, 43 L. ed. 460, 461, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

Congress had the power to make the payment of the penalty a condition of obtaining clearance.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; United States ex rel. Wilson v. The William, 2 Hall, Am. L. J. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 16,700; Hendriks v. Gonzalez, 14 C. C. A. 659, 35 U. S. App. 127, 67 Fed. 351; Cunard S. S. Co. v. Stranahan, 134 Fed. 318.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The steamship company sought the recovery of money paid to the collector of customs of the port of New York which was exacted by that official under an order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. The findings of the court, the ease by stipulation having been tried without a jury, leave no doubt that the money was paid to the collector under protest, and involuntarily. We say this because the findings establish that the company was coerced by the certainty that, if it did not pay, the collector would refuse a clearance to its steamships plying between New York city and foreign ports at periodical and definite sailings, whose failure to depart on time would have caused not only grave public inconvenience from the nonfulfilment of mail contracts, but besides would have entailed upon the company the most serious pecuniary loss consequent on its failure to carry out many other contracts.

Both the Secretary and the collector were expressly authorized by law, the one to impose and the other to collect the exactions which were made. The only question, therefore, is whether the power conferred upon the named officials was consistent with the Constitution. The provision under which the officials acted is § 9 of March 3, 1903, entitled, "An Act *to Regulate the Im-[330 migration of Aliens into the United States." 32 Stat. at L. chap. 1012, p. 1213. Light to guide in an analysis of the contentions concerning the asserted repugnancy of the section to the Constitution will be afforded by giving at once the merest outline of some of the comprehensive provisions of the act of which it forms a part.

The act excludes from admission into the United States, among other classes, those afflicted "with a loathsome or with a dangerous contagious disease." Sec. 2. It prohibits the importation of persons for immoral purposes or of persons to perform labor or service of any kind, skilled or unskilled, by previous solicitation or agreement. Secs. 3 and 4. It imposes the duty on the master of any vessel having on board alien immigrants to deliver to the immigrant officer at the port of arrival lists made at the port of embarkation. Sec. 12. These lists are required to be verified by the oath of the master of the vessel, taken before the immigrant officer at the port of arrival, to the effect that the surgeon of the vessel, who sails therewith, has physically and orally examined each alien, and that, from such examination by the surgeon, and from his own investigation, the officer of the ship believes that no one of the listed persons is disqualified by law from entering. This list is also required to be verified by the affidavit of the surgeon, and, in case no surgeon sails with the ship, it is required that the owner of the vessel employ at the port of embarkation a competent surgeon to make the examination. Secs. 13 and 14. Upon the arrival of a vessel in the United States, for the purpose of verifying the lists, immigration officers are authorized to board the vessel, inspect the immigrants, and to disembark them for further inspection and medical examination, the disembarkation for such purposes not to be considered as a landing within the United States. The medical examination, the statute provides, shall be made by medical officers of the United States Marine Hospital Service assigned to such duty, and upon them is imposed the obligation of certifying, "for the information of the immigration officers and the boards of special *inquiry[331 hereinafter provided for, any and all physical and mental defects or diseases observed by said medical officers in any such alien." In case of controversy concerning the right of an alien to land, full provision is made for the taking of testimony, and ultimately, where a right to land is challenged, for a determination of the question by boards of inquiry which the statute creates. Secs. 16, 17, 24. The cost of maintenance pending investigation or treatment of an alien found to be within the prohibited class or classes is cast upon the vessel and its owners, and the duty of returning at its cost such immigrant to the port from which he came is also cast upon the ship or its owner. Sec. 19. The performance of the duties which the act imposes are sanctioned in some cases by the creation of a criminal responsibility, and in others by the imposition of penalties recoverable in civil actions. Thus, among others, it is made a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, for any person to bring into or land, or attempt to do so, any alien not duly admitted by an immigrant inspector or not lawfully entitled to enter. Sec. 6. It is made a misdemeanor, punishable upon conviction by fine and imprisonment, to land any alien without complying with the requirements for examination by medical officers as contemplated in the statute. Secs. 17 and 18. And it is also made a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, to knowingly aid or assist or conspire to procure or permit the entry of an alien into the United States contrary to the regulations which the statute provides. Sec. 38. Further, it is made a misdemeanor to refuse to discharge the duty of returning an immigrant, and power is given to refuse clearance to the vessel. Sec. 19. And a penalty, recoverable by civil action, is authorized for violations of § 4, relating to the importation of aliens under previous contract. Section 9, which, as we have said, is here involved, is as follows:

"That it shall be unlawful for any person, including any transportation company other than railway lines entering the United States from foreign contiguous territory, or the owner, master, agent, or consignee 332] of any vessel, to bring to the *United States any alien afflicted with a loathsome or with a dangerous contagious disease; and, if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury [Secretary of Commerce and Labor] that any alien so brought to the United States was afflicted with such a disease at the time of foreign embarkation, and that the existence of such disease might have been detected by means of a competent medical examination at such time, such person or transportation company, or the master, agent, owner, or consignee of any such vessel, shall pay to the collector of customs of the customs district in which the port of arrival is located the sum of one hundred dollars for each and every violation of the provisions of this section; and no vessel shall be granted clearance papers while any such fine imposed upon it remains unpaid, nor shall such fine be remitted."

The express prohibition against bringing into the United States alien immigrants afflicted with "loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases," which the section contains, is so apparent, and the power to enact the prohibition so obvious, that we dismiss these subjects from further consideration. The exaction which the section authorizes the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to impose, when considered in the light afforded by the context of the statute, is clearly but a power given as a sanction to the duty which the statute places on the owners of all vessels, to subject all alien emigrants, prior to bringing them to the United States, to medical examination at the point of embarkation, so as to exclude those afflicted with the prohibited diseases. In other words, the power to impose the exaction which the statute confers on the Secretary is lodged in that officer only when it results from the official medical examination at the point of arrival not only that an alien is afflicted with one of the prohibited diseases, but that the stage of the malady, as disclosed by the examination, establishes that the alien was suffering with the disease at the time of embarkation, and that such fact would have been then discovered had the medical examination been then made by the vessel or its *owners, as the statute requires. We 333 think it is also certain that the power thus lodged in the Secretary of Commerce and Labor was intended to be exclusive, and that its exertion was authorized as the result of the probative force attributed to the official medical examination for which the statute provides, and that the power to refuse clearance to vessels was lodged for the express purpose of causing both the imposition of the exaction and its collection to be acts of administrative competency, not requiring a resort to judicial power for their enforcement. While we have said that the conclusions just stated are clearly sustained by the text, yet, if ambiguity be conceded, it is dispelled and the same result is reached by a consideration of the report of the Senate committee on immigration, where the provisions originated, and which we have a right to consider as a guide to its true interpretation. The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 40 L. ed. 771, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 495, 48 L. ed. 525, 535, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349. In that report it was said:

"Notwithstanding the explicit prohibition of the present law, it has been found impossible to prevent the steamship companies from bringing diseased aliens to our ports. Once on this side, every argument and influence that can be used is resorted to, either to effect the landing of such aliens or their treatment in the hospital as a preliminary to such landing. Expert medical testimony is secured to attack the diagnosis of the examining surgeon and even to question the contagious nature of the disease. Pitiableness is told of the separation of parents from young children to induce officers to relax in the discharge of their plain duty. Great charitable organizations intervene, and even political influence is invoked for the same purpose, the steamship companies themselves, either covertly or openly, displaying a spirit of resistance to the law. If all of these obstacles to the execution of the law fail of their purpose, and the alien afflicted with tuberculosis, favus, or trachoma is sent back, still, by the wilful or indifferent defiance of this sanitary law, the design sought by its passage is defeated, for hundreds may possibly 334] have been—indeed, *almost certainly have been—exposed to the disease in the steerage on the way over, may have been affected by it, and landed before it has reached a stage of development sufficiently advanced to be detected by the medical inspector.

"Section 10 of the measure under consideration [which, in the final enactment, became § 9 of the law] therefore imposes a penalty of $100, to be imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury (now Secretary of Commerce and Labor) for each case brought to an American port, provided, in his judgment, the disease might have been detected by means of medical examination at the port of embarkation. This sufficiently guards the transportation lines from an unjust and hasty imposition of the penalty, insures a careful observance of the law, and leaves in their own hands the power to escape even a risk of the fine being imposed, since they can refuse to take on board even the most doubtful case until certified by competent medical authority to be entirely cured." 57th Cong. 1st sess. S. Rept. No. 2119, p. viii.; 57th Cong. 2d sess. S. Doe. No. 62.

Resting, as the statute does, upon the authority of Congress over foreign commerce and its right to control the coming in of aliens into the United States, and to regulate that subject in the fullest degree, reserving for future consideration the particular contentions advanced at bar by the plaintiff in error, it may not be doubted that it is not open to discussion that the statute, as thus construed, was within the power of Congress to enact. In Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, considering the subject, it was said (pp. 492, 493):

"Whatever difference of opinion, if any, may have existed or does exist concerning the limitations of the power resulting from other provisions of the Constitution, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, it is not to be doubted that from the beginning Congress has exercised a plenary power in respect to the exclusion of merchandise brought from foreign countries; not alone directly, by the enactment of embargo statutes, but indirectly, as a necessary result of provisions contained in tariff legislation. It has also, in other than tariff *legislation, exerted a police power over foreign commerce by provisions which, in and of themselves, amounted to the assertion of the right to exclude merchandise at discretion.

"As a result of the complete power of Congress over foreign commerce, it necessarily follows that no individual has a vested right to trade with foreign nations, which is so broad in character as to limit and restrict the power of Congress to determine what articles of merchandise may be imported into this country, and the terms upon which a right to import may be exercised. This being true, it results that a statute which restrains the introduction of particular goods into the United States from considerations of public policy does not violate the due process clause of the Constitution."

In United States ex rel. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 48 L. ed. 979, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719, in the course of an opinion considering the act here involved, and holding it valid in so far as it provided for the exclusion of anarchists, it was said (pp. 289, 290):

"Repeated decisions of this court have determined that Congress has the power to exclude aliens from the United States; to prescribe the terms and conditions on which they may come in; to establish regulations for sending out of the country such aliens as have entered in violation of law, and to commit the enforcement of such conditions and regulations to executive officers; that the deportation of an alien who is found to be here in violation of law is not a deprivation of liberty without due process of law, and that the provisions of the Constitution securing the right of trial by jury have no application."

The whole subject was again reviewed in United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644, where, in upholding the validity of the Chinese exclusion act, it was observed that the power of Congress to deal with the admission of aliens, and to confide the enforcement of such laws to administrative officers, was, in view of the previous cases, no longer open to discussion.

We come to consider the specific grounds which are relied *upon to remove the [336 case from the control of these general principles.

1. It is insisted that, however complete may be the power of Congress to legislate concerning the exclusion of aliens, and to intrust the enforcement of legislation of that character to administrative officers, nevertheless the particular legislation here in question is repugnant to the Constitution because it defines a criminal offense, and authorizes a purely administrative official to determine whether the defined crime has been committed, and, if so, to inflict punishment. Conclusive support for the legal proposition upon which this contention must rest, it is insisted, results from the ruling in Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, 41 L. ed. 140, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 977, where it was said (p. 237):

"We regard it as settled by our previous decisions that the United States can, as a matter of public policy, by congressional enactment, forbid aliens or classes of aliens from coming within their borders, and expel aliens or classes of aliens from their territory, and can, in order to make effectual such decree of exclusion or expulsion, devolve the power and duty of identifying and arresting the persons included in such decree, and causing their deportation, upon executive or subordinate officials.

"But when Congress sees fit to further promote such a policy by subjecting the persons of such aliens to infamous punishment at hard labor, or by confiscating their property, we think such legislation, to be valid, must provide for a judicial trial to establish the guilt of the accused. No limits can be put by the courts upon the power of Congress to protect, by summary methods, the country from the advent of aliens whose race or habits render them undesirable as citizens, or to expel such if they have already found their way into our land and unlawfully remain therein. But to declare unlawful residence within the country to be an infamous crime, punishable by deprivation of liberty and property, would be to pass out of the sphere of Constitutional legislation unless provision were made that the fact of guilt should first be established by a judicial trial. *It is not consistent with the theory of our government that the legislature should, after having defined an offense as an infamous crime, find the fact of guilt and adjudge the punishment by one of its own agents."

But, in so far as the case of Wong Wing held that the trial and punishment for an infamous offense was not an administrative, but a judicial, function, it is wholly inapposite to this case, since, on the face of the section which authorizes the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to impose the exaction which is complained of, it is apparent that it does not purport to define and punish an infamous crime, or indeed any criminal offense whatever. Clear as is this conclusion from the text of § 9, when considered alone, it becomes, if possible, clearer when the section is enlightened by an analysis of the context of the act and by a consideration of the report of the Senate committee to which we have previously made reference. We say by an analysis of the context of the act, because, as we have previously stated, its various sections accurately distinguish between those cases where it was intended that particular violations of the act should be considered as criminal and be punished accordingly, and those where it was contemplated that violations should not constitute crime, but merely entail the infliction of a penalty, enforceable in some cases by purely administrative action and in others by civil suit. We say also by a consideration of the report of the Senate committee, since that report leaves no doubt that the sole purpose of § 9 was to impose a penalty, based upon the medical examination for which the statute provided, thus tending, by the avoidance of controversy and delay, to secure the efficient performance by the steamship company of the duty to examine in the foreign country, before embarkation, and thereby aid in carrying out the policy of Congress to exclude from the United States aliens afflicted with loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases as defined in the act. The contention that because the exaction which the statute authorizes the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to impose is a penalty, *therefore its enforcement is [338 necessarily governed by the rules controlling in the prosecution of criminal offenses, is clearly without merit, and is not open to discussion. Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, ante, 720, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474.

2. But it is argued that even though it be conceded that Congress may, in some cases, impose penalties for the violation of a statutory duty, and provide for their enforcement by civil suit instead of by criminal prosecution, as held in Hepner v. United States, nevertheless that doctrine does not warrant the conclusion that a penalty may be authorized, and its collection committed to an administrative officer without the necessity of resorting to the judicial power. In all cases of penalty or punishment, it is contended, enforcement must depend upon the exertion of judicial power, either by civil or criminal process, since the distinction between judicial and administrative functions cannot be preserved consistently with the recognition of an administrative power to enforce a penalty without resort to judicial authority. But the proposition magnifies the judicial to the detriment of all other departments of the government, disregards many previous adjudications of this court, and ignores practices often manifested and hitherto deemed to be free from any possible constitutional question.

Referring in Bartlett v. Kane, 16 How. 263, 14 L. ed. 931, to the authority of Congress to confide to administrative officers the enforcement of tariff legislation, it was said (p. 272):

"The interference of the courts with the performance of the ordinary duties of the executive departments of the government would be productive of nothing but mischief; and we are satisfied that such a power was never intended to be given to them. Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 499, 10 L. ed. 561."

And in the same case, in considering the nature and character of a penalty of 10 per cent which the tariff act of 1842 (5 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 270) authorized administrative officers to impose in cases of undervaluation, it was said (p. 274):

"An examination of the revenue laws upon the subject of levying additional duties, in consequence of the fact of an undervaluation *by the importer, shows that they were exacted as discouragements of fraud, and to prevent efforts by importers to escape the legal rates of duty. In several of the acts this additional duty has been distributed among officers of the customs upon the same conditions as penalties and forfeitures. As between the United States and the importer, . . . it must still be regarded in the light of a penal duty."

See also Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372.

In Passavant v. United States, 148 U. S. 214, 37 L. ed. 426, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572, the authority of Congress to delegate to administrative officers final and conclusive authority as to the valuation of imported merchandise, accompanied with the power to impose a penalty for undervaluation, was reiterated, and the doctrine of Bartlett v. Kane was applied. And the same principle was upheld in Origet v. Hedden, 155 U. S. 228, 39 L. ed. 130, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

In accord with this settled judicial construction the legislation of Congress from the beginning, not only as to tariff, but as to internal revenue, taxation, and other subjects, has proceeded on the conception that it was within the competency of Congress, when legislating as to matters exclusively within its control, to impose appropriate obligations, and sanction their enforcement by reasonable money penalties, giving to executive officers the power to enforce such penalties without the necessity of invoking the judicial power.

It is insisted that the decisions just stated and the legislative practices referred to are inapposite here, because they all relate to subjects peculiarly within the authority of the legislative department of the government, and which, from the necessity of things, required the concession that administrative officers should have the authority to enforce designated penalties without resort to the courts. But over no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over that with which the act we are now considering deals. If the proposition implies that the right of Congress to enact legislation is to be determined, not by the grant of power made *by the Constitution, but by consider-[340] ing the particular emergency which has caused Congress to exert a specified power, then the proposition is obviously without foundation. This is apparent, since the contention then would proceed upon the assumption that it is within the competency of judicial authority to control legislative action as to subjects over which there is complete legislative authority, on the theory that there was no necessity calling for the exertion of legislative power. As the authority of Congress over the right to bring aliens into the United States embraces every conceivable aspect of that subject, it must follow that, if Congress has deemed it necessary to impose particular restrictions on the coming in of aliens, and to sanction such prohibitions by penalties enforceable by administrative authority, it follows that the constitutional right of Congress to enact such legislation is the sole measure by which its validity is to be determined by the courts. The suggestion that, if this view be applied, grave abuses may arise from the mistaken or wrongful exertion by the legislative department of its authority, but intimates that, if the legislative power be permitted its full sway within its constitutional sphere, harm and wrong will follow, and therefore it behooves the judiciary to apply a corrective by exceeding its own authority. But, as pointed out in the passage previously quoted from Bartlett v. Kane, supra, and as often since emphasized by this court (McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 561), the proposition but mistakenly assumes that the courts can alone be safely intrusted with power, and that hence it is their duty to unlawfully exercise prerogatives which they have no right to exert, upon the assumption that wrong must be done to prevent wrong being accomplished.

3. It is urged that the fines which constituted the exactions were repugnant to the 5th Amendment, because amounting to a taking of property without due process of law, since, as asserted, the fines were imposed, in some cases, without any previous notice, and in all cases without any adequate notice or opportunity to defend. Stated in the 341] briefest form, *the findings below show that on the arrival of a vessel, if the examining medical officers discovered that an immigrant was afflicted with one of the prohibited diseases, the owner of the vessel was notified of the fact, and, indeed, that the steamship company had at the place where the examination was made what is known as a landing agent, whose business it was to keep informed as to the result of medical examinations, and to know when an immigrant was detained by the medical officers because afflicted with a prohibited disease. The findings also established that, where a fine was imposed under § 9 by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, it was only done after the transmission to that official of the certificate of the examining medical officer that a particular alien immigrant had been found to be afflicted with one of the prohibited diseases, and that the state of the disease established in the opinion of the medical officer that it existed at the time of embarkation, and could then have been detected by a competent medical examination. Prior to a certain date the action of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, imposing a fine, was notified to the steamship company, and demand of payment was practically at once made. After a certain date, by what is known as circular No. 58, the same process was followed as to the imposition of the fine, but a period of time—fourteen days—was allowed to intervene between the notice given of the imposition of the fine and its final and compulsory exaction. As to the action of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor before the promulgation of circular No. 58, the court below found that no adequate opportunity was afforded the vessel or its owner to be heard, and, as to the notice given after the promulgation of circular No. 58, it was found that the fourteen days allowed by that circular, and the practice under it, "did not afford the plaintiff a reasonable opportunity to obtain evidence from the port of embarkation and to be heard upon the question whether a fine should be imposed." Much contention is made in argument concerning these findings, it being insisted that there is conflict between them, and different 342] views are taken as to *which of the findings should, under the circumstances of the case, be treated as dominant. But into that controversy we do not think it necessary to enter, since, as previously pointed out, it is evident that the statute unambiguously excludes the conception that the steamship company was entitled to be heard, in the sense of raising an issue and tendering evidence concerning the condition of the alien immigrant upon arrival at the point of disembarkation, as the plain purpose of the statute was to exclusively commit that subject to the medical officers for which the statute provided. We shall, therefore, test the soundness of the proposition we are considering upon that assumption.

In view of the absolute power of Congress over the right to bring aliens into the United States we think it may not be doubted that the act would be beyond all question constitutional if it forbade the introduction of aliens afflicted with contagious diseases, and, as a condition to the right to bring in aliens, imposed upon every vessel bringing them in, as a condition of the right to do so, a penalty for every alien brought to the United States afflicted with the prohibited disease, wholly without reference to when and where the disease originated. It must then follow that the provision contained in the statute is of course valid, since it only subjects the vessel to the exaction when, as the result of the medical examination for which the statute provides, it appears that the alien immigrant afflicted with the prohibited malady is in such a stage of the disease that it must, in the opinion of the medical officer, have existed and been susceptible of discovery at the point of embarkation. Indeed, it is not denied that there was full power in Congress to provide for the examination of the alien by medical officers, and to attach conclusive effect to the result of that examination for the purposes of exclusion or deportation. But it is said the power to do so does not include the right to make the medical examination conclusive for the purpose of imposing a penalty upon the vessel for the negligent bringing in of an alien. We think the argument rests *upon a distinction [343 without a difference. It disregards the purpose which, as we have already pointed out, Congress had in view in the enactment of the provision; that is, the guarding against the danger to arise from the wrongful taking on board of an alien afflicted with a contagious malady, not only to other immigrant passengers, but ultimately, it might be, to the entire people of the United States,—a danger arising from the possible admission of aliens who might contract the contagion during the voyage, and yet be entitled to admission because apparently not afflicted with the prohibited disease, owing to the fact that the time had not elapsed for the manifestation of its presence. In effect, all the contentions pressed in argument concerning the repugnancy of the statute to the due process clause really disregarded the complete and absolute power of Congress over the subject with which the statute deals. They mistakenly assume that mere form, and not substance, may be made by the courts the conclusive test as to the constitutional power of Congress to enact a statute. These conclusions are apparent, we think, since the plenary power of Congress as to the admission of aliens leaves no room for doubt as to its authority to impose the penalty, and its complete administrative control over the granting or refusal of a clearance also leaves no doubt of the right to endow administrative officers with discretion to refuse to perform the administrative act of granting a clearance, as a means of enforcing the penalty which there was lawful authority to impose.

There are many other propositions urged in argument which we do not deem it necessary to specifically notice, as in effect they are all disposed of by the considerations which we have stated.

We have not considered the questions which would arise for decision if the case presented an attempt to endow administrative officers with the power to enforce a lawful exaction by methods which were not within the competency of administrative duties, because they required the exercise of judicial authority.

Affirmed.

344]*INTERNATIONAL MERCANTILE MARINE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

NEVADA M. STRANAHAN. (No. 510.)

SAME

v.

SAME. (No. 511.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 344.)

These cases are governed by the decision in Ocean Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, ante, p.

[Nos 510, 511.]

Argued January 11, 12, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review judgments in favor of the defendant in actions to recover back sums paid as penalties to the collector of customs of the port of New York for bringing into the United States aliens afflicted with loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases. Affirmed.

See same case below, 155 Fed. 428.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs Lucius H. Beers and William G. Choate argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Assistant to the Attorney General Ellis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry L. Stimson, Winfred T. Denison, and E. P. Grosvenor, filed a brief for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, ante, 1013.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These writs of error are prosecuted to obtain the reversal of judgments entered in favor of the United States in actions brought to recover back sums paid as penalties imposed and collected under authority of § 9 of the immigration act of March 3, 1903. [32 Stat. at L. 1215, chap. 1012.] One action concerned penalties exacted before, and the other related to a penalty which attached after, the promulgation by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor of a certain rule of procedure known as circular No. 58. As the controversies in these cases are of the same nature as that presented by the record in Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, No. 509, just decided [214 U. S. 320, ante, 1013, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671], and as the principles which controlled the decision in that case are here absolutely decisive, the judgments in these cases must be, and they are, affirmed.

WEEMS STEAMBOAT COMPANY[345 OF BALTIMORE CITY, Petitioner,

v.

PEOPLE'S STEAMBOAT COMPANY, William D. Carter, President, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 345-359.)

Waters — riparian rights — wharfing out.

1. Riparian proprietors in Virginia have the right to build out private wharves so as to reach the navigable waters of the stream. [For other cases, see Waters, 87-100, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Wharves — right to use.

2. The owner or lessee of the exclusive right to use a wharf on a navigable stream need not permit its use by others upon payment of reasonable compensation therefor because there is no other wharf at that port, or because such use is convenient, and has been permitted by the former owner or lessor.

[For other cases, see Wharves, III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 181.]

NOTE.—On the right to erect wharves, see notes to Madison v. Mayers, 40 L.R.A. 635, and Ex parte Easton, 24 L. ed. U. S. 373.

Argued April 26, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin the use of certain wharves on the Rappahannock river, in that state, of which the complainant was the owner or lessee. Reversed with directions to grant the injunction.

See same case below, 82 C. C. A. 276, 152 Fed. 1022.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The complainant (the above-named petitioner) commenced this suit in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Virginia against the defendant 346]the People's *Steamboat Company and its officers and agents, for the purpose of obtaining an injunction restraining the corporation defendant from using certain wharves on the Rappahannock river, in the state of Virginia, of some of which the complainant was the owner in fee, and of others the lessee of the exclusive use from the owners. The complainant contended that it had the exclusive right to the use of such wharves, either as owner or lessee, and that the defendant illegally, and against the will of the complainant, insisted upon using them to carry on its business, although offering to pay the complainant what was the reasonable value of the defendant's use of such wharves.

The corporation and the individual defendants filed joint and separate answers, setting up a claim of right to the use of such wharves upon compensation being made therefor, and the case came before the court on motion of complainant for a temporary injunction, as prayed for in the bill of complaint. The court, without then passing upon any other question, ordered that the matter be referred to a special master for the purpose of taking such evidence as might be submitted to him by either party, or which he might find necessary to take, bearing upon the title to the several wharves mentioned in complainant's bill and claimed by complainant, and to ascertain what rights passed to complainant with the acquisition of such wharves, and whether or not the wharves were public or private wharves. Pursuant to this order of reference, hearings were had before the master, who returned the evidence taken before him with his opinion in favor of granting the injunction as prayed for by the complainant, on the ground that the wharves in question were private wharves, owned or leased by the complainant, who had the exclusive right to their use. The facts found by the master were not overruled, but his conclusions of law were not concurred in by the court, and the preliminary injunction was refused. The case was then submitted to the court for trial upon all the evidence taken, and the bill was dismissed with costs. 141 Fed. 454.

53 L. ed.

*The complainant appealed from the [347] decree of dismissal to the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, where it was affirmed upon the opinion of the circuit court.

The complainant then applied to this court for a writ of certiorari to bring the case here, which petition was granted, and the case has been submitted to this court upon the briefs of respective counsel.

Messrs. George Weems Williams and St. George R. Fitzhugh argued the cause, and, with Mr. Nicholas P. Bond, filed a brief for petitioner:

The wharf property of the plaintiff is not, by virtue of the fact that it was used by it as a common carrier for its business as such, public for all purposes, but only public in the sense that the plaintiff could not lawfully discriminate against members of the public desiring to use its property to transact business with it as a common carrier.

Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 199 U. S. 279, 50 L. ed. 192, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91.

The right of a riparian owner to erect wharves is property.

1 Farnham, Waters, § 66, p. 297, § 110, pp. 509, 510, § 112, p. 523, § 113b, pp. 533, 534; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; R. v. Russell, 6 Barn. & C. 566; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 64, 65, 21 L. ed. 798, 801, 802; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 27 L. ed. 584, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 445, 446, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1039, 1040, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 23, 17 L. ed. 29; Norfolk City v. Cooke, 27 Gratt. 435; Alexandria & F. R. Co. v. Faunce, 31 Gratt. 764; Hardy v. McCullough, 23 Gratt. 262.

The statutes of Virginia and the decisions of its courts govern in the determination of the rights of a riparian owner in the navigable waters of that state.

Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 24-26, 38 L. ed. 331, 340, 341, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157.

The wharf owner may determine who shall have the privilege of using his wharf.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast

Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. ed. 1135, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 627, 6 C. C. A. 495, 15 U. S. App. 173, 57 Fed. 673.

The fact that public roads were open to certain of the wharves in controversy after their construction does not alter the character of those wharves.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. supra; Exterkamp v. Covington Harbor Co. 104 Ky. 796, 47 S. W. 1086; Brisbane v. St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. 23 Minn. 129; California Nav. & Improv. Co. v. Union Transp. Co. 126 Cal. 433, 46 L.R.A. 825, 58 Pac. 936; Irwin v. Dixon, 9 How. 33, 13 L. ed. 35.

Even if the wharves had been so located that the public authorities might have objected to the maintenance of the same, that, of itself, would have furnished no authority or justification to the defendants to use the wharves.

Davenport & N. W. R. Co. v. Renwick, 102 U. S. 180, 26 L. ed. 51; Gerrish v. Union Wharf, 26 Me. 384, 46 Am. Dec. 568; Coney v. Brunswick & F. S. B. Co. 116 Ga. 222, 42 S. E. 498; Wetmore v. Brooklyn Gas-light Co. 42 N. Y. 384.

Neither the legislature nor the courts can compel the owners of the wharves on the Rappahannock to devote them to the public use any further than such owners see fit, without taking the wharves from their owners by condemnation, and making adequate compensation.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Interstate R. Co. 108 Va. 502, 62 S. E. 369.

A wharf owner can prevent persons from using his wharf for purposes of their own.

Coney v. Brunswick & F. S. B. Co. supra; Mills v. Evans, 100 Iowa, 712, 69 N. W. 1043; see also Bogert v. Haight, 20 Barb. 251.

A common carrier has the right to select its agencies for conducting its business, and to decline to allow other carriers the use of its terminal facilities.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 137, 65 Fed. 39.

A wharf owner may revoke a license to use his property.

New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. 649, 21 L. ed. 220; Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co.; Coney v. Brunswick & F. S. B. Co.; and Bogert v. Haight.—supra; Heaney v. Heaney, 2 Denio, 625; Swords v. Edgar. 59 N. Y. 31, 17 Am. Rep. 295; O'Neill v. An- nett, 27 N. J. L. 290, 72 Am. Dec. 364; 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 64; 1 Farnham, Waters, p. 562.

Mr. William D. Carter argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ellerbe W. Carter, filed a brief for respondents:

If the plaintiff owns a wharf, it is as a riparian proprietor, and not because it is a common carrier, that it is permitted to hold, maintain, and enjoy the same.

Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. 184 U. S. 77, 86, 46 L. ed. 440, 444, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 23, 17 L. ed. 29.

Equity and justice require that the appropriate rules of law be made to apply to every riparian proprietor alike. One riparian proprietor who has exercised his privilege of constructing a wharf may enjoy his structure in his own way, and put the wharf to his own use alone, or to his own use collectively with others, provided the uses are restricted and location and surrounding circumstances permit such use without injury to the public.

Dutton v. Strong, supra; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. ed. 1135, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745.

The title to navigable waters, and to the soil under water in navigable rivers, is and must be held in perpetual trust for the public as beneficiary.

Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 410, 10 L. ed. 997, 1012; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248; Shepard's Point Land Co. v. Atlantic Hotel, 132 N. C. 517, 61 L.R.A. 937, 44 S. E. 39; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 71, 74, 15 L. ed. 269, 270.

But though his domain stops at low-water mark, the riparian proprietor (and he alone) may build out a wharf structure in aid of navigation.

Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 153 Ala. 409, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 352, 44 So. 976; 1 Farnham, Waters, p. 227, § 113b; Dutton v. Strong and Yates v. Milwaukee, supra.

In the building of a wharf under Va. Code, § 998, the riparian proprietor exercises an inherent privilege which he enjoys under the law. Whether he makes of his wharf a private "staith" or a public facility depends mainly on the use to which it is subsequently put. He may charge for the use of his wharf, but the charge must be reasonable if he serves the general public.

Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 27 L. ed. 584, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Riddick v. Dunn, 145 N. C. 31, 58 S. E. 439; Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, supra; Gibler v. Terminal R. Asso.

203 Mo. 208, 101 S. W. 37, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1194.

The rule must be the same as to the impartial reception and handling of freight at a wharf or "station" provided for the handling of freight as at a "baggage room," provided and equipped for the handling of baggage.

Hart v. Atlanta Terminal Co. 128 Ga. 754, 58 S. E. 452; Tift v. Southern R. Co. 123 Fed. 789.

Every such wharf is irrevocably affected with a public interest ab condide, no matter how often it may be conveyed and pass from vendor to vendee.

Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798.

The Weems Steamboat Company is tenant of the public, both as to shore and channel at Tappahannock.

New Orleans v. Louisiana Constr. Co. 140 U. S. 654, 35 L. ed. 556, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. supra.

A private wharf, when maintainable at all, must be devoted habitually to private business.

Dutton v. Strong, supra.

The wharf is a public wharf because there is no other wharf in the port.

Dutton v. Strong; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co.; and Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg—supra; Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 627, 6 C. C. A. 495, 15 U. S. App. 173, 57 Fed. 673.

Wharves exist, not to prop a monopoly, but as aids to commerce.

The Kate Tremaine, 5 Ben. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 7,622; Barrington v. Commercial Dock Co. 15 Wash. 170, 33 L.R.A. 116, 45 Pac. 748; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, supra.

The conduct of the Weems Steamboat Company discloses a policy tending to close monopoly.

Pocahontas Coke Co. v. Powhatan Coal & Coke Co. 60 W. Va. 508, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 268, 116 Am. St. Rep. 901, 56 S. E. 264, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 667; Mines v. Scribner, 147 Fed. 927; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540, John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24.

If the wharf be a "station," as contended, it is admittedly a "public station."

Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 199 U. S. 296, 50 L. ed. 200, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Hart v. Atlanta Terminal Co. supra.

Can the boat of the respondents, having on board prospective passengers who wish to pass over the petitioner's wharf, expecting to pay for the privilege, be denied the privilege? 53 L. ed.

lege of landing because of an arbitrary discrimination against the vehicle, or against its owner as the agent of the passenger desiring to land at the wharf?

Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. 107 Ga. 636, 46 L.R.A. 431, 34 S. E. 372.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

It appears that the complainant herein is a corporation of *the state of Maryland[352 and the defendant is a corporation of the state of Virginia, the individual defendants being officers or agents of such corporation and citizens of the same state. The complainant has been for a long time engaged in the business of transportation of passengers and freight between Baltimore and various landings or places on the Rappahannock river, in the state of Virginia, and for many years has been the owner or lessee of the wharves on that river, mentioned in the bill of complaint. Some time before the commencement of this suit the defendant began the transportation of passengers and freight between Fredericksburg and Urbanna, in Virginia, and along the Rappahannock river, in that state, stopping at the same wharves on that river as complainant, and engaged in the same business. In order to transact its business it made use of the wharves owned or leased by the complainant, in spite of the opposition of complainant, and against its protests, although defendant offered to make compensation for the reasonable value of the use which it made of such wharves in the prosecution of its business, which offers were refused by the complainant, and it notified the defendant to desist from the use of the wharves owned or leased by it. The action of the defendant in making use of the wharves of complainant was based upon the contention that the defendant had the legal right to do so, inasmuch as, in many cases, there were no other wharves at such places where the defendant desired to land, and that it was necessary to use such wharves in order that defendant might prosecute its business of transporting passengers and freight to and from the various landings on the river, and because the wharves had, for many years, been used by the public.

It was proved before the master (and we take the facts in the case as found by him) that the complainant was the owner in fee of five different wharves along the banks of the river and of the land under the water where the wharves were built; also that the complainant was the lessee of eight wharves owned by different persons who had, prior to the commencement of this *suit, leased[353 their exclusive use to the complainant, and that it was during the time of the existence of the leases that the defendant entered upon and used the wharves for its own purposes. The master reported that there was no evidence of any prior dedication of any of such wharves to the public, either those owned by or leased to complainant, and, of course, none of any acceptance thereof by the public authorities, nor was there any evidence of any condemnation of any of such wharves on the part or in behalf of any public authority; that the wharves were private wharves, either owned by the complainant in fee or leased by it, for its exclusive use, from the owners in fee of such wharves. The most that can be said is that, in some cases, the former owners of the wharves now owned by the complainant, as well as the lessors of the wharves before they leased the same, and while owners thereof, had built them and had permitted the public to use them, and had frequently received compensation for such use, and in many cases the use had been without compensation. After the sales of the wharves and after the execution of the leases, neither the former owners nor the lessors made any claim to the use of the wharves or to any right to permit others to use them, either with or without compensation, and the complainant formally notified the defendant that the complainant refused to permit such use any longer. It appeared that public roads had been made from the surrounding country to the places where these private wharves had been built, sometimes before the building of the wharves, and sometimes the roads had been laid out after such wharves had been built. The use that had been made of the wharves after they had been built and prior to the purchase or leasing by the complainant was nothing more than such as was founded upon a mere license on the part of the owners and without any dedication of the wharves to the public or any acceptance on the part of the public further than by indiscriminate user, and with no taking or condemnation of the right to use the wharves as public wharves. The title to the wharves as private property remained 354] unaffected in any way, and there was nothing to prevent the withdrawal of license to use at any time. In some cases the wharves were the only ones that had been built at the places where such wharves existed, and the use of such wharves was convenient for the transaction of the defendant's business.

The complainant is in the actual possession of all the wharves, those which it has purchased and those which it has leased, and its title and right to the exclusive possession of all of them is recognized and assented to by both grantors and lessors, and not one of them makes any claim of any interest in the wharves as against complainant.

The circuit court, in speaking of the facts as found by the master, said:

"While the said thirteen wharves involved in this proceeding by no means include all the wharves or stopping places for vessels on the river, it may be said that they embrace the important wharves from which passenger and freight business is chiefly procured in passing up and down the river, and that the business from said wharves is large. With possibly a single exception, these wharves are at the termini of public highways in the counties in which they are respectively built; the character of the business consists of passenger travel and merchandise received over said wharves, consisting of the general products of the country; and they are the usual shipping places of persons living in the immediate neighborhood of the wharves, and of the inhabitants of the country for some distance in the interior. That at said wharves United States postoffices are established, at which the mail of the people for the surrounding country is procured; and that, as to the wharves leased as aforesaid, the same were leased upon a rental of a commission of 10 per cent of all freight charges and passenger fares collected by the complainant at said wharves, the owner of said wharves maintaining an agent there to assist in mooring the vessels of the complainants making landings there, and in receiving and forwarding freight therefrom, and at some of the wharves sail vessels from time to time moor and *lade and un-[355 lade, making proper compensation to the owners of the wharves for their use."

With reference to these facts the circuit court said that "while the special master is doubtless correct in his findings as to the actual ownership of the property rights in said wharves, namely, that they are the individual property of the several owners thereof, and, as such, pass regularly by the laws of descent and purchase, it by no means follows that said wharves are private . . . [quoad] the public; that is, either the citizens desiring to use the wharves to reach the means of transportation upon and over said river, or owners of such methods of transportation plying the waters of said river; the obligation upon each being to render and pay to the wharf owner reasonable wharfage and charges for the use of his property, under such proper and reasonable regulations as might be imposed either by law or by the owner of the property."

The rights of a riparian owner upon a navigable stream in this country are governed by the law of the state in which the stream is situated. These rights are subject to the paramount public right of navigation.

The riparian proprietors have the right, among others, to build private wharves out so as to reach the navigable waters of the stream. Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 23, 17 L. ed. 29; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 699, 27 L. ed. 584, 587, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 445, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1039, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 158 U. S. 349, 368, 42 L. ed. 497, 504, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. The courts of the state of Virginia affirm the same rights of the riparian proprietor. Norfolk City v. Cooke, 27 Gratt. 430, 435; Alexandria & F. R. Co. v. Faunce, 31 Gratt. 761, 765. If the wharf obstructs navigation or the private rights of others, or if it encroach upon any public landing, the wharf may be abated. Va. Code 1887, § 998. A private wharf on a navigable stream is thus held to be property which cannot be destroyed or its value impaired, and it is property the exclusive use of which the owner can only be deprived in accordance with established law; and if necessary that it or 356] any part of it* be taken for the public use, due compensation must be made. The owner of a private wharf on a navigable stream does not, on that account only, hold it by a different title from the owner of any other property which he may use himself or permit others whom he may select to use, while, at the same time, denying its use by anyone else.

The case of Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 127, 24 L. ed. 77, 84, has, in our judgment, no bearing upon the question before us. In that case and in those cited therein the discussion was in regard to the right of owners of property of the nature described to charge what they pleased for the doing of the business in which they were engaged. Their property was being used with their consent by, and its use devoted to, the public, to any extent desired, and the only question was in regard to the compensation which they were entitled to ask for the business thus done. The complaint was that the charges were too great and were a violation of a law of the state, and were not reasonable, and the answer made by the owners of the property was that it was their private property, and they had the right to charge what they pleased. The court said, "As you have devoted your property to a use in which the public has an interest, you have granted to the public an interest in that use, and the right, on the part of the state, to regulate charges which you shall make, to the end that they shall be just and reasonable." If the owner of one of these wharves had devoted it to the public use, and permitted the public to use it as it desired, and demanded compensation for such use, the question as to the amount of such compensation might be raised, as in the Munn class of cases, to be determined with reference to the reasonableness of the charge. But this is no such case. The legislature has passed no law regarding rates, if that were material, and the reasonableness of the charge is not under consideration. The right to use the property has been withdrawn by the owner as to the public in general, including defendant. The only question is whether a third person has the right to use a private wharf on tendering reasonable compensation *therefor, because[357 there is no other wharf at the place, or because it would be more convenient to such third person to use it, or because the former owner of the wharf had permitted the public to use it, although the present owner refused to consent to such use. There is no more reason why such property should be held subject to the right of others to use it against the will of its owner than there is for any other kind of property to be so held.

The question as to the right of the owner to exclude others from the use of a private wharf on a navigable stream has been very recently decided by this court in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. ed. 1135, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745, and the right of such owner to exclude any or all other persons from the use of such wharves was affirmed. The owner was not, it was also said, compelled to use the wharf exclusively for his own business or else to throw it open for the use of everyone; that he could not only use it himself and permit some others to use it, but might, at the same time, exclude still others to whom he did not choose to grant such right. The case was not decided with reference to the existence of another wharf in the harbor. No such matter was adverted to.

And so in regard to the use of a private wharf by the public, with or without compensation to the owner. The public can obtain no adverse right as against such owner by mere user. To obtain it there must be an intention on the part of the owner to dedicate the property to the use of the public, and there must be an acceptance of such dedication on the part of some public authority, which may sometimes be implied (but not in such a case as this), and, in the absence of such dedication and acceptance, the use will be regarded as under a simple license, subject to withdrawal at the pleasure of the owner. Harris v. Com. 20 Gratt. 833; Gaines v. Merryman (1898) 95 Va. 660, 29 S. E. 738; Irwin v. Dixon, 9 How. 10-32, 13 L. ed. 25-35. The rights of the public must have been obtained by an adverse user so as to take away from the owner the ordinary rights of ownership. In this case there was never anything but a mere 358]*license. The mere fact that there may be no wharf in the particular place other than that owned by the complainant, and also the fact that the use of such wharf is very convenient or even necessary for the defendant in order to prosecute its business as a competitor of complainant, together with the fact that the former owners had permitted the public upon occasions to use the wharf, furnish not the slightest reason for holding that the wharf of complainant is held on the condition that it must continue to permit others to use it upon compensation, when they desire to prosecute their own business of transporting passengers or freight on the river. It was found by the master that there had never been any abandonment of the right of exclusive enjoyment of any of the wharves, and they were assessed for taxation to the owners, and taxes paid on them by the owners.

Mr. Justice Bradley in Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 699, 27 L. ed. 584, 587, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732, remarked (obiter) that whether a private wharf might be maintained as such where it is the only facility of the kind in a particular port or harbor might be questioned. He recognized the law to be that there might be a private wharf in a navigable stream, and that the owner, in permitting its temporary use by another, would be at liberty to make his own bargain for such use. The remark was made with reference to the amount of the charges for wharfage, and the justice doubted the right, under the circumstances stated, of the owner of a wharf to make such charges as he chose, without reference to their being reasonable. It is another matter, however, to say that the owner of a private wharf must permit its use by the public simply because the wharf he has built or purchased is the only wharf in the port, or because the public had theretofore been permitted to use the wharf, with only the rights of a licensee.

We see no sufficient reason for subjecting a private wharf to the public use, which may frequently include that of a competitor with the owner, simply because there is no other wharf at the place. A public wharf, it is 359]presumed, may be built, or, *if there be no place for one, the private wharf might be taken by public authority for the public use, upon compensation being made for the taking of the property.

We are of opinion that the decree of the court below is erroneous, and it is therefore reversed, with directions to enter a decree for an injunction, as prayed for in the bill of complaint.

So ordered.

ALLEN R. ENGLISH and Honora English,
His Wife, Appts.,
v.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA at the Relation and to the Use of VICTOR S. GRIF-FITH,† Treasurer and Ex Officio Tax Collector in and for the County of Pima, in the Territory of Arizona.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 359-365.)

Pleading—admission by failure to deny.

1. An allegation in the complaint in an action to collect a delinquent special assessment; that defendants' property was contiguous to the improvement, must be taken as true, where not denied by the answer.

[For other cases, see Pleading, 149-162, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal—from territorial court—error in construing statute.

2. There is no such manifest error as calls for reversal of the judgment below by the Federal Supreme Court in a decision of the territorial supreme court that the method of collecting delinquent taxes, prescribed by Ariz. Laws 1903, No. 92; viz., a suit by the county tax collector in the name and for the use of the territory, is made applicable to delinquent special assessments for public improvements by reason of the provisions of §§ 84, 96, of that act, requiring, respectively, that the clerks of county boards of supervisors shall make correct lists of all tracts on which back taxes shall be due, and that all back taxes of whatever kind shall be collected by the tax collector under the authority of such statute.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4994, 4995; Courts, VII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal—from territorial court—review of facts.

3. Findings of a territorial supreme court that commissioners appointed in a street-improvement proceeding examined the locality of such improvement, ascertained to what extent the public would be benefited, and to what extent there would be benefits to property, found the amounts that the property would be benefited, and apportioned and assessed such amounts on the several parcels of land in the proportion of which they were severally benefited, and that no lot was assessed for a †Substituted for John W. Bogan, as his successor in office.

NOTE.—As to review by United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

greater amount than it was actually benefited,—foreclose any contention in the Federal Supreme Court that the assessment was made according to the front-foot rule, and not upon the basis of benefits.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4879-4888, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts—following territorial decisions—statutory construction.

4. The Federal Supreme Court will adopt the view of the officers concerned with the administration of the law respecting a public improvement, concurred in by the court in which condemnation proceedings were conducted, and apparently, also, by the territorial supreme court, as to which of two sections of the Arizona Revised Statutes governs the appointment of commissioners, where the statute will bear that construction, although plausible objections may be urged against it.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public improvements—notice.

5. Notice of the meetings of the common council on proceedings to confirm a special assessment for a public improvement is not essential, where notice was given of the meetings of the commissioners appointed to make such assessment.

[For other cases, see Public Improvements, II. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public improvements—notice—waiver.

6. No objection to the failure to give notice of the meetings of the common council upon proceedings to confirm a special assessment for a public improvement is available to a property owner who, after appearing before the commissioners appointed to make the assessment, and making a protest solely for the purpose of saving the right of review, interests himself in the sale of, and assists in disposing of, the bonds issued to pay for the improvement.

[For other cases, see Public Improvements, II. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 180.]

Submitted April 26, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Pima County, in that territory, in favor of the territory in a suit to collect a delinquent special assessment for a street improvement. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.) 89 Pac. 501; on rehearing (Ariz.) 90 Pac. 601.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. C. Baker and Marcus A. Smith submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. James Reilly was on the brief.

Mr. Samuel L. Kingan submitted the cause for appellee:

The facts certified by the lower court are conclusive on this court, and the only question to be determined here is whether the facts so found support the judgment or decree.

Marshall v. Burtis, 172 U. S. 634, 635, 43 L. ed. 580, 581, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Crowe v. Trickey, 204 U. S. 234, 51 L. ed. 458, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; San Pedro & C. del. A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 131, 36 L. ed. 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

In special assessment proceedings, but one notice to the owner of the property assessed is required.

Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 41, 37 L. ed. 641, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

The question of benefits, and the property to which these benefits extend, is, of necessity, a question of fact.

Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 353, 31 L. ed. 766, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921.

While it is true that the ruling of the supreme court of the territory on a construction of local statutes does not in any way preclude this court from reviewing it, yet such construction is always entitled to great respect.

Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 679, 39 L. ed. 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 479, 51 L. ed. 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Lewis v. Herrera, 208 U. S. 314, 52 L. ed. 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.

Where the statute provides a special remedy it excludes every other.

Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 238, 22 L. ed. 82; Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; State v. Norton, 63 Minn. 497, 65 N. W. 935; Thomson v. People, 184 Ill. 17, 56 N. E. 383; McSherry v. Wood, 102 Cal. 651, 36 Pac. 1010; New Whatcom v. Bellingham Bay Improv. Co. 18 Wash. 181, 51 Pac. 360; Annie Wright Seminary v. Tacoma, 23 Wash. 109, 62 Pac. 444; Alley v. Lebanon, 146 Ind. 125, 44 N. E. 1003.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the district court of Pima county, Arizona, by the territory of Arizona, to collect a delinquent special assessment levied by the city of Tucson on the property of appellants for the payment of the improvement of Congress street in that city. The assessment was levied under the provision of chapter 2 of title 11 of the Revised Statutes of the territory. The territory obtained judgment for the amount of the assessment, $12,533.75, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory.

The contentions that appellants made in the supreme court of the territory, as far as appears from its opinion, were: (1) That the territory, at the relation of the treasurer and ex officio tax collector of Pima county, had no right to bring this suit, but that such right was in the city tax collector; (2) (a) that the assessment was erroneous because the cost of the improvement was divided "by the arbitrary front foot rule," and that the assessment was made upon that basis, and not the basis of benefits derived from such improvement; (b) the committee appointed under the act to make the assessment took into consideration the value to appellants of a certain narrow strip of land lying between the lot of appellants and Congress street, left open and unoccupied in the widening and improvement of the street; (3) that the appellants had no notice, actual or constructive, when the common council would act upon the report of the committee; (4) that the property was not subject to special assessment, because appellants' property was not contiguous to the improvement made. The supreme court of the territory decided all of the contentions against appellants, the last one on the ground that the complaint alleged that appellants' property was contiguous to the [361]improvement, "which allegation was not denied by the answer. That contention, therefore, we may take no further notice of.

The first contention is repeated here, and it invokes our construction of the statutes of the territory against that made by the supreme court. If there were doubt, we should certainly lean to the construction given by the supreme court. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 479, 51 L. ed. 1143, 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695. But we think there is no doubt. There is no dispute as to the proceedings taken, so far as they could vest authority in the relator Bogan, as county tax collector, to bring this suit. The dispute turns upon the law. Paragraph 483 of the Revised Statutes of the territory, as amended in 1897, provides that "it shall be the duty of the collector of special assessments, within such time as the common council may provide, but in no event later than the 21st of December of the year in which such assessment was made, to make a report in writing to the general officer of the county authorized by the general revenue law to sell for taxes due the county and territory, of all the lands, town lots, and real property upon which he shall be unable to collect special assessments, with the amount due of special assessments and unpaid thereon, together with his warrant or a brief description of the nature of the warrant received by him, authorizing the collection thereof; . . . that he is unable to collect the same or any part thereof, and that he has given notice required by law that said warrants have been received by him for collection." It is further provided that the report, when made, shall be prima facie evidence that all of the forms and requirements of the law have been complied with, and that the special assessments mentioned in the report are due and unpaid. "And in any action before any court, wherein the question of the validity of such assessment is an issue, no defense or objection shall be made or heard which might have been interposed in the proceedings for the making of such assessment or the application for the confirmation thereof." It is provided in the next section that the county collector shall incorporate said list with the county "delinquent list, and [362] "shall sell such delinquent city property at the same time and in the same manner for such city delinquent special assessment as real property is required to be sold by law for county and territorial delinquent taxes." The supreme court said that "this section, construed alone, might well be considered as excluding any other method of collecting delinquent special assessments." But the court further said that paragraph 488 should be considered. That paragraph reads as follows:

"The general revenue laws of this territory in reference to proceedings for the collection of delinquent taxes on real property, the sale thereof, the executions of certificates of sale and deeds thereon, the force and effect of such deeds and sales; and all other laws in relation to the enforcement and collection of delinquent taxes and redemption of tax sales, except as herein otherwise provided, shall be applicable to proceedings to collect such special assessments."

The court pointed out that the act 92 of the Laws of 1903 repealed the general revenue law of the territory in reference to proceedings for the collection of delinquent taxes, and substituted for a sale of the property by the tax collector a suit by that officer in the name and for the use of the territory. The court said: "Unless, therefore, the act of 1903 applies to delinquent special assessments, there would be no method provided by the existing statutes for the sale of delinquent city property for delinquent special assessments." And the court concluded that §§ 84 and 96 of the Acts of 1903 make "the method of collecting delinquent taxes provided for in the act applicable to all delinquent taxes which may appear on the roll." Section 84 provides:

"Within sixty days after the taking effect of this chapter, and every year thereafter, within thirty days after the settlement of the tax collector, the several clerks of the county boards of supervisors in each county in this territory shall make, in a book to be called the 'back-tax book,' a correct list in numerical order of all tracts of 363]land and town lots on which *back taxes shall be due in such county, city, or town, setting forth opposite each tract of land or town lot the name of the owner," etc.

Section 96 reads as follows:

"All back taxes, of whatever kind, appearing due upon delinquent real estate, shall be extended in the 'back-tax book' made under the chapter and collected by the tax collector under authority of this chapter."

Appellants contest the construction made by the supreme court of the territory, but we have said that, unless in a case of manifest error, this court will not disturb a decision of the supreme court of a territory construing a local statute. Fox v. Haastick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457. There is certainly not manifest error in the ruling in the present case. Indeed, we see no reason to doubt its correctness.

Of the second contention of appellants, that the assessment was made according to the "arbitrary front foot rule," and not upon the basis of benefits derived from the improvement, the supreme court said that even if the record showed that the committee, in the respects named, had improperly assessed the property, that appellants, not having followed the remedy given by the statutes for a revision of the assessments, were precluded from complaint, citing Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 550, 30 L. ed. 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234.

But, be this as it may, it was certainly decided in Stanley v. Albany County, that the question of special benefit and the property to which it extends is, of necessity, a question of fact, and the supreme court found that the commissioners appointed examined the locality of the improvement, ascertained to what extent the public would be benefited and to what extent there would be benefits to property, and found also the amounts that the property would be benefited, "apportioned and assessed such amounts so found to be a benefit to the property upon the several lots, plots, tracts, and parcels of land, in the proportion of which they were severally benefited by such improvements." It was further found that no lot was assessed for a greater amount 364]than it was actually *benefited. It may be that it is an answer to appellants' contention, and counsel recognize that it may be an answer, that appellants did not avail themselves of the remedy afforded by the law; that is, did not appeal from the order of the city council confirming the assessment. The finding of the court, however, is undoubtedly an answer to the contention if 53 L. ed.

the commissioners were legally appointed. Of this there is a diversity of views between appellants and appellee, the appellants contending that paragraph 471 (§ 7) of the Revised Statutes of the territory controls. It provides that the common council shall appoint three of its members, or any three competent persons, to "make examinations of the premises to be affected, and make an assessment of the improvements contemplated." The appellee contends that paragraph 471 is not applicable, but that paragraph 467 controls. By that paragraph, when the improvements contemplated "require the taking or damaging of property, the proceedings for making just compensation therefor shall be the same as provided in title 21" of the Revised Statutes. Such proceedings were taken, and, in course of them, the court appointed commissioners who, we have seen, examined the locality of the improvements and assessed the amount due from the property benefited. That this was the legal course to pursue was the view of the officers concerned with the administration of the law, including the court in which the proceedings for condemnation of the property were conducted, and, it may be inferred, was also the view of the supreme court of the territory. The statute will bear that construction, and, even if plausible objections can be urged against it, under the authorities which we have cited, we would not be justified in pronouncing it incorrect.

It is assigned as error that the trial court erred in not finding that no notice was given of the meetings of the common council upon the confirmation proceedings. The statute does not provide for notice of the meeting of the common council. It does provide for a notice of the meeting of the commissioners, and this notice was given, and it is found by the supreme *court that Al-[365]len H. English appeared, through his attorney or agent, and made a formal protest against his assessment, but did not produce any witnesses nor did he specify any ground of objection. The law charged appellants with notice that the report would be presented to the common council, and the report was actually filed with the common council a few days after the hearing. We think they were bound to take notice of this action. Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 469, 46 L. ed. 1253, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908. See Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. The record shows, besides, that English was a promoter of the improvement. It is true that he appeared before the commissioners and protested against his assessment, but he not only gave no reason for the protest, but his attorney expressly stated that the "protest was made for the sole purpose of saving the question of review," and that he "did not wish to intimate that he had any objection, but wanted to save his right in case he should have any." And it is found by the court that he knew of the enactment of the ordinance providing for the collection of the assessments and the issuing of bonds to pay for the improvement, that he interested himself in the sale of the bonds, and assisted in disposing of the same. There is, therefore, ground for the contention that such conduct constituted a waiver of all objections to the assessments. It certainly precludes him from saying that he had no notice of the proceedings before the common council. Wright v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Appellants pleaded that there was another action pending for the collection of the assessment against them, brought by the city of Tucson; and though conceding that the pleas were defective, urge that they were sufficient to put the court upon notice that the pending suit was not brought by the real party in interest, and that such party was the city of Tucson. The contention, however, is but a phase of the question that the general revenue law of the territory was not repealed. There are other contentions, but they are without substantial merit.

Judgment affirmed.

366]*EXPANDED METAL COMPANY and Henry Chess, Walter Chess, and Harvey B. Chess, Copartners as Chess Brothers, Petitioners,

v.

EUGENE S. BRADFORD, Joseph C. Millichamp, N. J. Schmucker, Jr., and N. J. Schmucker. [No. 66.]

GENERAL FIREPROOFING COMPANY, Petitioner,

v.

EXPANDED METAL COMPANY.
[No. 606.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 366-386.)

Patents — process — invention — anticipation.

1. A substantial improvement in the art of making expanded sheet metal, involving patentable invention, is disclosed by the Golding patent 527,242, for a process by which the metal is first simultaneously cut and stretched so as to produce a series of half-diamond meshes, which are completed by a second similar operation, coördinating with the first, although the slitting and stretching of the sheet at the same time was not new.

[For other cases, see Patents, V. b, 7; V. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Patents — specification — description — process.

2. The failure to describe a complete mechanism in the specifications of a patent for a process is not material if enough is disclosed to indicate to those skilled in such matters the mechanism whereby the method of the patent can be put into operation.

[For other cases, see Patents, VII. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Patents — process — mechanical operation.

3. The patentability of processes is not restricted to those involving chemical or other similar elemental action, but an invention or discovery of a process or method involving mechanical operations and producing a new and useful result is within the scope of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4886, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3382, securing protection to the inventor of "any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof."

[For other cases, see Patents, V. b, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 66 and 606.]

Argued March 18, 19, 1909. Decided June 1, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, sustaining the validity of the Golding patent, 527,242, for an improvement in the method of making expanded sheet metal. Reversed. Also

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Ohio, holding the same patent invalid. Affirmed.

See same case below in No. 66, 77 C. C. A. 230, 146 Fed. 984; in No. 606, 164 Fed. 849.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ernest Howard Hunter argued the cause and filed a brief for the Expanded Metal Company:

The invention consisted in the discovery of the method, not in any particular means for practicing it. Every true method or art is one which must be independent of particular means. Instruments must be used to apply it to practice, but the invention must reside in the method, and not in the instruments.

1 Robinson, Patents, 250, § 167.

Golding's invention did not consist in a machine or manufacture, but in a new process in the art of expanding metal; and, if it is not patentable as such, his improvement cannot be protected under the patent laws of this country.

NOTE.—On patents for processes, see notes to Evans v. Eaton, 4 L. ed. U. S. 433, and Corning v. Burden, 14 L. ed. U. S. 683.

Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U. S. 788, 24 L. ed. 141; Boulton v. Bull, 2 H. Bl. 496; Bowling v. Billington, 7 Pat. Off. Rep. 191.

Complainant's patent does not attempt to cover a "principle."

Boulton v. Bull, supra.

The decision in Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745, did not establish the doctrine that patentable processes were limited to those involving chemical reactions or elemental changes.

Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co. 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. ed. 968, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Simonds Rolling-Mach. Co. v. Hathorn Mfg. Co. 90 Fed. 201; Melvin v. Thomas Potter Sons & Co. 91 Fed. 151; Kahn v. Starrells, 68 C. C. A. 82, 135 Fed. 532; R. Thomas & Sons Co. v. Electric Porcelain & Mfg. Co. 111 Fed. 923; Baker Lead Mfg. Co. v. National Lead Co. 135 Fed. 546; Kirchberger v. American Acetylene Burner Co. 124 Fed. 764; American Tube Works v. Bridgewater Iron Co. 65 C. C. A. 636, 132 Fed. 16; Shepard v. Excelsior Steel Furnace Co. 69 C. C. A. 591, 137 Fed. 399; John R. Williams Co. v. Miller Du B. & P. Mfg. Co. 107 Fed. 290; Peters v. Union Biscuit Co. 120 Fed. 679; Re Weston, 17 App. D. C. 431, 94 Off. Gaz. 1786; Re Wagner, 22 App. D. C. 267, 105 Off. Gaz. 1873; Ex parte Patterson, 116 Off. Gaz. 2533; Dowling v. Billington, 7 Pat. Off. Rep. 191; Patentable Processes, 19 Harvard Law Rev. 30.

The doctrine that processes involving mechanical operations, as distinguished from chemical reactions or elementary changes, are unpatentable, is foreign to the patent jurisprudence of other nations.

Clothworkers of Ipswich Case, Goodb. 252, 1 Am. & Eng. Pat. Cas. 6; Boulton v. Bull, Davies, Pat. Cas. 162; R. v. Wheeler, 2 Barn. & Ald. 350; Boulton v. Bull, 2 H. Bl. 493; Jones v. Pearce, 1 Webster, Pat. Cas. 123; Russell v. Cowley, 1 Webster, Pat. Cas. 459; Walton v. Potter, 1 Webster, Pat. Cas. 585; Gibson v. Brand, 1 Webster, Pat. Cas. 627; Reynolds v. Amos, 3 Pat. Off. Rep. 215; Dowling v. Billington, supra; Tubes v. Perfecta Seamless Steel Co. 20 Pat. Off. Rep. 77; Gammons v. Battersby, 21 Pat. Off. Rep. 322; Boulton v. Adjustable Cover & B. Co. 22 Pat. Off. Rep. 593.

Where the court has to deal with a device which has achieved undisputed success and accomplishes a result never attained before, which is new, useful, and in large demand, it is generally safe to conclude that the man who made it is an inventor.

O'Rourke Engineering Constr. Co. v. McMullen, 88 C. C. A. 115, 160 Fed. 938.

Messrs. Thomas W. Bakewell and Frederick P. Fish argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. Hayward Fairbanks, filed a brief for the General Fireproofing Company:

In a method claim, in order that it may be held patentable, the patentee must have incorporated some novelty of operation which was previously unknown in the art to which his invention belongs, and this must be something different from the mere mode of operation of apparatus with which an old method is put into practice.

Corning v. Burden, 15 How. 252, 14 L. ed. 683; Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Burr v. Duryee, 1 Wall. 570, 17 L. ed. 657; Fuller v. Yentzer, 94 U. S. 288, 24 L. ed. 103; Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 553, 42 L. ed. 1142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 227, 37 L. ed. 1061, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; Wing v. Anthony, 106 U. S. 142, 146, 27 L. ed. 110, 111, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37, 23 L. ed. 200; Miller v. Force, 116 U. S. 22, 27, 29 L. ed. 552, 554, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Dreyfus v. Searle, 124 U. S. 60, 31 L. ed. 352, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Crescent Brewing Co. v. Gottfried, 128 U. S. 158, 32 L. ed. 390, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Ansonia Brass & C. Co. v. Electrical Supply Co. 144 U. S. 11, 36 L. ed. 327, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Lovell Mfg. Co. v. Cary, 147 U. S. 623, 37 L. ed. 307, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; MacKay v. Jackman, 20 Blatchf. 466, 12 Fed. 615; Brainard v. Cramme, 20 Blatchf. 530, 12 Fed. 621; Hatch v. Moffitt, 15 Fed. 253; Excelsior Needle Co. v. Union Needle Co. 23 Blatchf. 147, 32 Fed. 221; Wells Glass Co. v. Henderson, 15 C. C. A. 84, 34 U. S. App. 19, 67 Fed. 930; International Tooth-Crown Co. v. Bennett, 72 Fed. 169; Strom Mfg. Co. v. Weir Frog Co. 75 Fed. 279; Travers v. Hammock & Fly-Net Co. 78 Fed. 638; Gindorff v. Deering, 81 Fed. 952; Ryneer Co. v. Evans, 83 Fed. 696; American Strawboard Co. v. Elkhart Egg-Case Co. 84 Fed. 960; Stokes Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Heller, 96 Fed. 104; Dodge Mfg. Co. v. Ohio Pulley Works, 101 Fed. 586; Dodge Mfg. Co. v. Collins, 46 C. C. A. 53, 106 Fed. 935; Ballou v. Edward A. Potter & Co. 88 Fed. 786; Busch v. Jones, 184 U. S. 598, 46 L. ed. 707, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

In every method or process case which has received the favorable action of the Supreme Court, the claim in question has called for or contained some elemental action, chemical or otherwise, or patentable novelty has been found in the use of one of the agencies of nature, and the action or agency was then new in the particular art to which the invention in question belonged.

Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U. S. 780, 24 L. ed. 139; Tilghman v. Proctor, 102 U. S. 707, 26 L. ed. 279; New Process Fermentation Co. v. Maus, 122 U. S. 413, 30 L. ed. 1193, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1304; Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co. 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. ed. 968, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Telephone Cases (Dolbear v. American Bell Teleph. Co.) 126 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 863, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

The United States courts have drawn careful and accurate distinctions between the various subject-matters of invention. Thus, a claim for a machine could not be construed as covering a method, and vice versa. Nor could a claim for a method be construed as covering a product. And thus it was that the United States courts have defined what is or is not patentable as a method or process, whereas no such necessity ever existed under the laws and practice of the English courts. Consequently, in that particular question, the English decisions are not in point.

Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Merrill v. Yeomans, 94 U. S. 568, 24 L. ed. 235; James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 356, 376, 26 L. ed. 786, 793; Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, 98 U. S. 126, 25 L. ed. 77.

The distinction in principle between inventions of processes and inventions of machines is, however, as well established in Great Britain as in this country.

Neilson v. Thompson, Webster, Pat. Cas. 275; Crane v. Price, 4 Mann. & G. 580; Tilghman v. Proctor, 102 U. S. 707, 26 L. ed. 279; R. v. Wheeler, 2 Barn. & Ald. 349; Cannington v. Nuttall, L. R. 5 H. L. 205.

The decisions of the French courts also harmonize in principle with those of the United States, although the same distinction obtains in the law of France respecting claims.

Pouillet's Traité Théoretique et Pratique des Brevets d'Invention, 1906, pp. 30-33.

The complainant's patent is not of the nature which can be aided by proof of commercial success. The success was due to the merit of the machine; the patent for the machine is not in issue; and no amount of commercial success of the machine can prove that a patent for the method or function of the machine is patentable.

Duer v. Corbin Cabinet Lock Co. 149 U. S. 223, 37 L. ed. 710, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. 112, 22 L. ed. 566.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases involve opposing decisions as to the validity of letters patent of the United States No. 527,242, dated October 9, 1894, *granted to John E. Golding for [374 an alleged improvement in the method of making expanded sheet metal. In case No. 66, here on writ of certiorari to the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, sustaining the patent, was reversed, and the patent held invalid. The opinion of the circuit judge sustaining the patent is found in 136 Fed. 870. The case in the court of appeals is found in 77 C. C. A. 230, 146 Fed. 984. After the decree in the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, the Expanded Metal Company having filed a bill against the General Fireproofing Company in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, the case was heard and the patent held invalid on the authority of the case in the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit. 157 Fed. 564. The circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit reversed the United States circuit court for the northern district of Ohio, and held Golding's patent valid and infringed. 164 Fed. 849. These writs of certiorari bring these conflicting decisions of the courts of appeal here for review.

The patent in controversy relates to what is known as expanded sheet metal. Expanded metal may be generally described as metal openwork, held together by uncut portions of the metal, and constructed by making cuts or slashes in metal and then opening them so as to form a series of meshes or latticework. In its simplest form, sheet metal may be expanded by making a series of cuts or slits in the metal in such relation to each other as to break joints, so that the metal, when opened or stretched, will present an open mesh appearance. It may be likened to the familiar woven wire openwork construction, except that the metal is held together by uncut portions thereof, uniting the strands, and the whole forms a solid piece.

In the earlier patents different methods are shown for cutting the metal, which cuts were afterwards opened by a separate operation of pulling or stretching. These crude methods *are shown in the earlier [375 American and English patents which appear in the record. While nothing more than such methods was accomplished in the art there was little general or commercial use for expanded metal.

It was apparent that if a method could be devised by which the metal could be simultaneously cut and expanded, such method would be a distinct advance in the art, and this record discloses that the desirable result of simultaneously performing these operations was accomplished in the Golding and Durkee patent No. 320,242. In that patent the operation was performed by means of knives arranged in a step order, the sheet to be fed obliquely. The inventors described the Golding and Durkee method as follows:

"The process consists in the employment of a flat piece of metal of any desired size, and beginning at one side and corner and making an incision within the side of the metal, thus forming a strand which is simultaneously pressed away from the plane of the metal in a direction at or near a right angle, the position the strand assumes depending upon the distance it is moved from the plane of the metal. a in the drawing shows the first cut made. The next step in this process is to make additional incisions, as is shown at c, b, and d, further within the plate of metal, and leaving uncut sections at the ends of the cuts, and simultaneously with the cutting the strands are pressed away from the plane of the metal at the angle and to the desired position, as above described. Thus each row of meshes is simultaneously cut and formed from a blank piece of metal without buckling or crimping the blank. In the act of cutting and forming the meshes, the finished article is contracted in a line with the cuts or incisions, and consequently it is shorter in this direction than the piece from which it was cut, but it is greatly lengthened in a line at an angle to the plane of the original sheet, plate, or blank."

The result was to produce expanded metal, as shown in this figure:

erally known as expanded sheet metal, it has been customary to first cut the slits in the sheet metal at short distances apart, and to open the metal at the cuts thus formed by bending the severed portions or strands in a direction at right angles substantially to the plane of the sheet. It has also been made by simultaneously cutting and opening the metal by means of cutters set off or stepped relatively so to make the slashes or cuts in different lines in the manner set forth in patents No. 381,230 or No. 381,231, of April 17, 1888. In both of these methods the product is somewhat shorter and materially wider than the original sheet, but practically no stretching or elongation of the metal forming the strands is caused.

"In my present invention I seek to avail myself of the ability of the metal to stretch or distend as well as of its ability to bend under strain or pressure, and the invention consists in the improved method of making expanded metal viz., by simultaneously cutting and opening or expanding the metal at the cuts by stretching the severed portions."

*In the method further described in [377 the specifications, the expanded metal is shown to be made by the use of knives making a series of slits in a straight line at equal distances apart across the sheet, and, at the same time, carrying downward the severed portions of the metal. And this operation is performed by bending the severed portion at a time when its ends are securely attached to the main sheet, thereby expanding the sheet without materially shortening it. The sheet is then fed forward, and the slitting and stretching operation is repeated in such 376] *With this patent as the advanced state of the art, Golding set about making further improvements, and the result was the patent in suit. The specifications of the patent in suit state:

"In the manufacture of what is now generally known as expanded sheet metal, it has been customary to first cut the slits in the sheet metal at short distances apart, and to open the metal at the cuts thus formed by bending the severed portions or strands in a direction at right angles substantially to the plane of the sheet. It has also been made by simultaneously cutting and opening the metal by means of cutters set off or stepped relatively so to make the slashes or cuts in different lines in the manner set forth in patents No. 381,230 or No. 381,231, of April 17, 1888. In both of these methods the product is somewhat shorter and materially wider than the original sheet, but practically no stretching or elongation of the metal forming the strands is caused."

made back of the portion unsevered by the preceding operation, or, in other words, as the specification states, the slits and unsevered portions alternate in position in each successive operation, the bends given to the severed portions or strands being in direction at right angles to the plane of the sheet, there is no contraction in the length of the metal, and the expansion is obtained by the stretching, distension, or elongation of the severed strand. This patent contains the single claim, which is as follows:

"The herein-described method of making open or reticulated metal work, which consists in simultaneously slitting and bending portions of a plate or sheet of metal in such manner as to stretch or elongate the bars connecting the slit portions and body of the sheet or plate, and then similarly slitting and bending in places alternate to the first-mentioned portions, thus producing the finished expanded sheet metal of the same length as that of the original sheet or plate, substantially as described."

It is thus apparent that the method covered by the claim of the patent is accomplished by the two operations indicated and performed in the manner pointed out in the specifications. The first operation of cutting, bending, and stretching the strands simultaneously produces a series of stretched loops or half diamonds. Thus:

378]*This series of half diamonds is then supplemented by the second operation, which consists in making a second series of cuts and expansions for stretching the strands back of and opposite the parts of the metal left uncut by the first operation. The result is that the series of one-half diamonds is converted into the series of full diamonds and because of the manner in which the stretching is done, while the ends of the strands are still firmly attached to the sheet, there is no material shortening of the length of the sheet. Thus:

What has Golding accomplished by this alleged improvement? These records leave no doubt that there are substantial advantages in the method of the patent in suit. As the sheet is not shortened, the completed product is regular *in form and ready[379 for many uses to which the shortened sheet of the old method could not be put. The metal worked upon can be much heavier than that which could be successfully manipulated by the old process. The meshes are formed in a uniform and regular way, so that a line drawn through their intersections in one direction is at right angles with a line drawn through their intersections in the other direction. There is no irregularity in the width of the strands. Put to the test of actual use, this record discloses that while the method of the Golding and Durkee patent is still in use in some places in this country, the method disclosed in the patent in controversy is largely in use in the United States, Great Britain, and Continental Europe; that it has greatly increased the use of expanded metal in this country, and opened new fields for use where sheets of a regular shape can be used to a greater advantage than they could be when made under the old process.

The learned circuit court of appeals for the third circuit seems to have regarded the invention as consisting merely of the improvement of the process in the manufacture of expanded metal by stretching certain portions of the metal when the slit is cut and the mesh is opened. A broad claim of that character was made in the Patent Office, and the file wrapper and contents show that it was disallowed by the examiner. The claim in its present form, framed by the examiner as sufficient to cover the real invention of the patent, was accepted by the applicant, and is now the claim of the patent.

If all that Golding did was to show a method of simultaneously cutting and stretching the metal, the examiner was doubtless right in holding it to have been anticipated by former inventions, notably the patent to Ohl, No. 475,700, and in a degree in the previous patents to Golding and to Golding and Durkee.

But the patent in suit, embraced in the claim allowed, shows more than a mere method of making open meshes by simultaneously cutting and stretching the metal. It shows a method by which the metal is 380] first cut and stretched in the *manner indicated to make the half diamond, and then a second operation, co-ordinating with the first, and completing the mesh by the manner in which it is performed in connection with the first. It is the result of the two operations combined which produces the new and useful result covered by the claim allowed in the Patent Office, and, which, when read in connection with the specifications, shows substantial improvement in the art of making expanded metal work.

But it is said that the patent in suit discloses no means of practically operating the method shown, and therefore, as said by the learned judge in the third circuit, "it is but the expression of a happy thought;" but the requirement of the patent law, in order to make a method or process patentable, is that the patent shall indicate to those skilled in the art the adaptation of means to put it into practice.

We think this record amply discloses, while no complete mechanism is pointed out in the specifications, enough to indicate to those skilled in such matters a mechanism whereby the method of the patent can be put into operation. As said by Judge Seversen, delivering the opinion of the court in No. 606, in the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit:

"But here the inventor has gone on to point out that the slitting and bending is to be done by a stationary cutter under the sheet, and upper cutters to co-operate in shearing the slit. These upper cutters are so constructed as to bend down the strand to the proper distance. It is not stated just what the form shall be, but only ordinary skill in mechanics would suggest that the outer side of the cutter might be beveled or a shoulder might be formed thereon to carry down the strand when severed.

"Mechanism for the shifting of the sheet and of the knives was already in use in machines for expanding metal, and, indeed, was common in the mechanical arts. Moreover, experts have here testified that these devices could be arranged by any skilful mechanic, and we have no reason to doubt it." [164 Fed. 853.]

Golding testifies that he at first executed his process by *hand. Other witnesses, [381] skilled in the art, say that they could do likewise from the information found in the patent.

The important thing in this patent is a method of procedure, not the particular means by which the method shall be practised. Golding's machine patent was not applied for for more than a year and a half after the issue of the patent in suit.

It is suggested that Golding's improvement, while a step forward, is nevertheless only such as a mechanic skilled in the art, with the previous inventions before him, would readily take; and that the invention is devoid of patentable novelty. It is often difficult to determine whether a given improvement is a mere mechanical advance, or the result of the exercise of the creative faculty amounting to a meritorious invention. The fact that the invention seems simple after it is made does not determine the question; if this were the rule, many of the most beneficial patents would be stricken down. It may be safely said that if those skilled in the mechanical arts are working in a given field, and have failed, after repeated efforts, to discover a certain new and useful improvement, that he who first makes the discovery has done more than make the obvious improvement which would suggest itself to a mechanic skilled in the art, and is entitled to protection as an inventor. There is nothing in the prior art that suggests the combined operation of the Golding patent in suit. It is perfectly well settled that a new combination of elements, old in themselves, but which produce a new and useful result, entitles the inventor to the protection of a patent. Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580-591, 26 L. ed. 1177-1181.

To our minds, Golding's method shows that degree of ingenuity and usefulness which raises it above an improvement obvious to a mechanic skilled in the art, and entitles it to the merit of invention. Others working in the same field had not developed it, and the prior art does not suggest the combination of operations which is the merit of Golding's invention.

It is lastly contended, and this is perhaps the most important question in the case, that 382]in view of the former declaration *and opinions of this court, what is termed a process patent relates only to such as are produced by chemical action, or by the operation or application of some similar elemental action, and that such processes do not include methods or means which are effected by mere mechanical combinations, and a part of the language used in Corning v. Burden, 15 How. 252, 14 L. ed. 683, and Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745, is seized upon in support of this contention. We have no disposition to question the decision in those cases.

An examination of the extent of the right to process patents requires consideration of the object and purpose of the Congress in exercising the constitutional power to protect, for a limited period, meritorious inventions or discoveries. Section 4886 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3382) provides:

"Any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof . . . may . . . obtain a patent therefor."

This is the statute which secures to inventors the right of protection; and it is not the province of the courts to so limit the statute as to deprive meritorious inventors of its benefits. The word "process" is not used in the statute. The inventor of a new and useful art is distinctly entitled to the benefit of the statute as well as he who invents a machine, manufacture, or composition of matter. The word "process" has been brought into the decisions because it is supposedly an equivalent form of expression, or included in the statutory designation of a new and useful art.

What, then, is the statutory right to a patent for a "process" when the term is properly considered? Curtis, in his work on the Law of Patents, says:

"A process may be altogether new, whether the machinery by which it is carried on be new or old. A new process may be invented or discovered, which may require the use of a newly-invented machine. In such a case, if both the process and the machine were invented by the same person, he could 383]take separate *patents for them. A new process may be carried on by the use of an old machine in a mode in which it was never used before. . . . In such a case, the patentability of the process in no degree depends upon the characteristic principle of the machine, although machinery is essential to the process, and although a particular machine may be required." Curtis, Patents, 4th ed. § 14, note,

In Robinson on Patents, vol. 1, § 167, it is said:

"While an art cannot be practised except by means of physical agents, through which the force is brought in contact with or is directed toward its object, the existence of the art is not dependent on any of the special instruments employed. It is a legal, practical invention in itself. Its essence remains unchanged, whatever variation takes place in its instruments, as long as the acts of which it is composed are properly performed."

And Walker on Patents, 4th ed. § 3, states that valid process patents may be granted for "operations which consist entirely of mechanical transactions, but which may be performed by hand or by any of several different mechanisms or machines."

It is undoubtedly true, and all the cases agree, that the mere function or effect of the operation of a machine cannot be the subject-matter of a lawful patent. But it does not follow that a method of doing a thing, so clearly indicated that those skilled in the art can avail themselves of mechanism to carry it into operation, is not the subject-matter of a valid patent. The contrary has been declared in decisions of this court. A leading case is Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U. S. 780, 24 L. ed. 139, in which this court sustained a process patent involving mechanical operations, and in which the subject was discussed by Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court. On page 787 that learned justice said:

"That a process may be patentable, irrespective of the particular form of the instrumentalities used, cannot be disputed. . . . Either may be pointed out; but, if the patent is not confined to that particular tool or machine, the use of the others would be an infringement, the general process being the *same. A process is a mode of [384] treatment of certain materials to produce a given result. It is an act, or a series of acts, performed upon the subject-matter to be transformed and reduced to a different state or thing. If new and useful, it is just as patentable as is a piece of machinery. In the language of the patent law, it is an art. The machinery pointed out as suitable to perform the process may or may not be new or patentable, whilst the process itself may be altogether new, and produce an entirely new result. The process requires that certain things should be done with certain substances, and in a certain order; but the tools to be used in doing this may be of secondary consequence."

This clear and succinct statement of the rule was recognized and applied (Mr. Justice Bradley again speaking for the court) in the case of Tilghman v. Proctor, 102 U. S.

707, 26 L. ed. 279. In the course of the opinion the learned justice tersely says:

"A machine is a thing. A process is an act, or a mode of acting. The one is visible to the eye,—an object of perpetual observation. The other is a conception of the mind,—seen only by its effects when being executed or performed. Either may be the means of producing a useful result."

That this court did not intend to limit process patents to those showing chemical action or similar elemental changes is shown by subsequent cases in this court.

In Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707, the opinion was written by the same eminent justice who wrote the opinion in Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. supra, and, delivering the opinion of the court, he said:

These cases [158 U. S. 68, and Wicke v. Ostrum, 103 U. S. 461, 26 L. ed. 409] assume, although they do not expressly decide, that a process, to be patentable, must involve a chemical or other similar elemental action; and it may be still regarded as an open question whether the patentability of processes extends beyond this class of inventions."

And added these significant words:

"Where the process is simply the function 385] or operative effect *of a machine, the above cases are conclusive against its patentability; but where it is one which, though ordinarily and most successfully performed by machinery, may also be performed by simple manipulation, such, for instance, as the folding of paper in a peculiar way for the manufacture of paper bags, or a new method of weaving a hammock, there are cases to the effect that such a process is patentable, though none of the powers of nature be invoked to aid in producing the result. Eastern Paper Bag Co. v. Standard Paper Bag Co. 30 Fed. 63; Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Waterbury, 39 Fed. 389; Travers v. American Cordage Co. 64 Fed. 771. This case, however, does not call for an expression of our opinion upon this point, nor even upon the question whether the function of admitting air directly from the train pipe to the brake cylinder be patentable or not, since there is no claim made for an independent process in this patent, and the whole theory of the specification and claims is based upon the novelty of the mechanism."

And the same learned justice wrote the opinion of the court in Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co. 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. ed. 968, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698, and sustained a process patent. If, by any construction, that process could be said to involve a "chemical or other similar elemental action," no stress was laid upon that 53 L. ed.

fact. This court, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Waite, sustained a patent in the Telephone Cases, 126 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 863, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778, for a method of transmitting electrical undulations similar in form to the vibrations of the air accompanying vocal sounds, and at the same time the patent for the apparatus by which the method was operated was sustained.

In Leeds & C. Co. v. Victor Talking Mach. Co. decided at this term, 213 U. S. 301, 318, ante, 495, 500, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495, 500, this court said: "A process and an apparatus by which it is performed are distinct things. They may be found in one patent; they may be made the subject of different patents."

We therefore reach the conclusion that an invention or discovery of a process or method involving mechanical operations, *and producing a new and useful re-[386 sult, may be within the protection of the Federal statute, and entitle the inventor to a patent for his discovery.

We are of opinion that Golding's method was a substantial improvement of this character, independently of particular mechanisms for performing it, and the patent in suit is valid as exhibiting a process of a new and useful kind.

As to the infringement, little or no question was made in case No. 606. In case No. 66 the circuit court held that there was some evidence of infringement, enough, at least, to warrant the decree sustaining the patent and awarding an accounting. With this conclusion we agree. It follows that the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (No. 66) should be reversed, and that of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit (No. 606) should be affirmed, and the cases remanded to the Circuit Courts of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Northern District of Ohio, respectively, for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Decrees accordingly.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Complainant,

v.

JOSEPH F. SHIPP et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 386-438.)

Contempt—murder of prisoner pending his appeal.

1. The sheriff and night jailer in charge of a prisoner under sentence of death in a state court are chargeable with contempt of the mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States, staying all proceedings pending an appeal from an order of a Federal circuit court, denying relief by habeas corpus, where such officials made no preparation to prevent the murder of the prisoner by a mob, actuated by the intent to prevent the delay attendant upon such appeal, although such action was reasonably to be anticipated, and made no effort to resist the mob, to save the prisoner, or to identify the participants in the crime.

[What constitutes contempt, see Contempt, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contempt—murder of prisoner pending his appeal.

2. Participants in the murder of a prisoner under sentence of death in a state court, after an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from an order of a Federal circuit court denying relief by habeas corpus has been allowed and the proceedings stayed, are guilty of contempt of the Supreme Court, where their crime was actuated by the intent to prevent the delay attendant upon such appeal.

[What constitutes contempt, see Contempt, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 5, Original.]

Argued March 2, 3, 1909. Decided May 24, 1909.

INFORMATION charging a contempt of the Supreme Court of the United States in murdering a prisoner under sentence of death in the Criminal Court of Hamilton County, in the State of Tennessee, after his appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from an order of the Circuit Court for the Northern Division of the Eastern District of Tennessee had been allowed and a stay of proceedings ordered. Rule discharged as to a part of the defendants and made absolute as to the others.†

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Attorney General Bonaparte and Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for complainant.

Messrs. James J. Lynch, Moses H. Clift, and Robert B. Cooke argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Judson Harmon, Robert Pritchard, and William D. Spears, filed a brief for defendant Shipp.

Mr. G. W. Chamlee argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. A. Hood, W. H. Cummings, and W. F. Chamlee, filed a brief for defendant Ward.

Mr. T. Pope Shepherd argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Lewis Shepherd and Martin A. Fleming, filed a brief for defendants Nolan, Justice, Padgett, and Mays.

Messrs. G. W. Chamlee, W. H. Cummings, and W. F. Chamlee also filed a brief for defendant Williams.

Messrs. Moses H. Clift and Robert B. Cooke also filed a brief for defendant Galloway.

Messrs. James J. Lynch, Robert B. Cooke, and William D. Spears also filed a brief for defendant Gibson.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an information filed by the Attorney General of the United States against Joseph F. Shipp and twenty-six other defendants, which was dismissed as to eighteen of them and heard as to defendants Shipp, Galloway, Gibson, Nolan, Williams, Justice, Padgett, Mayse, and Ward.

The information charged, in substance, that February 11, 1906, Ed Johnson, a negro, was convicted of rape by the criminal court of Hamilton county, Tennessee, held in Chattanooga, and was sentenced to death; that on March 3, following, Johnson filed a petition for the writ of habeas corpus in the United States circuit court sitting in Tennessee, alleging that, in the trial, he had been deprived of constitutional rights; that on March 10 the petition was dismissed and the writ denied, petitioner being remanded to the sheriff of Hamilton county, to be detained in his custody for ten days, in which to enable petitioner to prosecute an appeal, and, in default of such appeal, to be further proceeded with by the state court under its sentence; that, on March 17, Mr. Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, allowed an appeal from the decision of the circuit court, and on March 19 an order was made by the Supreme Court allowing said appeal; that defendant Shipp, sheriff of Hamilton county, then was at once notified by telegraph of said order, which stayed all proceedings against Johnson, and required Shipp to retain custody of Johnson pending determination of the appeal; that before 6 o'clock in the evening of March 19 a full account of this action of the Supreme Court was published and circulated in the evening papers in the city of Chattanooga; that defendant Shipp was the sheriff of Hamilton county, and defendants Matthew Galloway and Jeremiah Gibson, among others, were his deputies; that the deputies as well as the sheriff were fully advised of the action of the Supreme Court, and were informed and had every reason to believe from current reports and rumors conveyed to them, that an attempt would be made on the evening of the 19th or early in the morning of the 20th, by a mob composed of a large number of armed men, to force an entrance into the county jail for the purpose of taking Johnson therefrom and lynching him; that notwithstanding said information and said reports the sheriff withdrew from the jail early in the evening of the 19th the usual and customary guard, and left in charge thereof only the night jailer,—defendant Gibson—and committed other acts and did other things evincing a disposition on the part of said sheriff to render it less difficult and less dangerous for the mob to prosecute and carry into effect its unlawful design and purpose of lynching Johnson; that about 9 o'clock in the evening of said March 19 defendants and others conspired to break into the jail for the purpose of taking Johnson therefrom and lynching him, with intent to show their contempt and disregard for the above-mentioned order of this court, and prevent it from hearing the appeal of Johnson; that pursuant to this conspiracy, and in order to show their contempt and disregard for said order of this court, between 9 and 12 o'clock in the evening of said March 19, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, defendants, ex-405] cepting Shipp *and Gibson, assembled with others, broke into the jail, took Johnson out by force, and lynched him; that Gibson was the only officer at the jail when the mob broke in, and that, while the mob was in possession of the jail, defendant Shipp arrived, but made no effort to prevent the mob from taking Johnson from the jail; that defendants Shipp and Gibson were in sympathy with the mob while pretending to perform their official duty of protecting Johnson, and that they aided and abetted the mob in prosecution and performance of the lynching; that all of these acts were committed by defendants with the intent upon their part to utterly disregard the above-mentioned order of this court, and to prevent the court from hearing Johnson's appeal.

†Leave granted June 1st, 1909, to present petition for rehearing, see infra, p. 1056.

The answers on questions of fact consisted of a general denial, and, except in the cases of Shipp, Gibson, and Williams, the setting up of an alibi by each defendant. Williams admits that he was at the jail a short time before and at the time Johnson was taken from it by the mob, and that he followed the mob and witnessed the lynching, but denies participating in the acts of the mob.

Certain preliminary questions of law were raised by defendants and passed upon by the court. 203 U. S. 563, 51 L. ed. 319, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 265. It was held that the complaint sufficiently set forth a contempt of this court; that it was unnecessary, for the purposes of this proceeding, to determine whether or not the circuit court had jurisdiction of the habeas corpus proceedings, or whether this court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, as those were questions for this court to determine, and for no other tribunal; and that the answers of the defendants, under oath, disavowing intent, did not purge them.

53 L. ed.

The case then came on to be heard on the question whether the allegations of the information were made out.

*The following is a sufficient résumé[406 of the facts admitted or undisputed:

January 23, 1906, a rape was committed upon a white woman in or near Chattanooga, Hamilton county, Tennessee.

At that time and at all times hereinafter mentioned, defendant Shipp was the duly elected, qualified, and acting sheriff of Hamilton county, Tennessee, and as such sheriff had and exercised full charge and control of the county jail located in Chattanooga, and was the legal custodian, under the laws of Tennessee, of all persons duly committed in said county under the laws of the state to confinement and imprisonment within the jail, and the defendants Matthew Galloway and Jeremiah Gibson were duly appointed, qualified, and acting deputy sheriffs under Shipp.

January 25 Shipp and his deputies arrested Ed Johnson, a negro, in or near Chattanooga, charged with the crime.

Late in the afternoon of the same day Johnson was, by order of the judge of the state criminal court, taken by Sheriff Shipp to Dayton and from there to Nashville, where he was kept until the day of his trial, February 6. Johnson was removed and kept away from Chattanooga during this period because of fear that he would be lynched.

The night of January 25 a large mob attacked the jail at Chattanooga, where Johnson was supposed to be confined.

Three of Shipp's deputies were at the jail, and, with the assistance given them by the police, the chairman of the safety committee, and others, prevented the taking of any prisoners from the jail.

At the suggestion of the deputies the mob appointed a committee to go through the jail and satisfy itself that Johnson was not there.

Even after this committee had reported that the persons whom the mob sought were not in the jail, it was necessary to use force to put the mob out of the jail yard.

The dangerous character of this committee and the mob and their anger at not being able to find Johnson is shown by the *testimony of the prosecuting officer[407 for Hamilton county, the judge of the criminal court of that county, and defendant Galloway.

One other night, about the same time, the officers though there was to be a mob. The militia was called out twice about that time to protect the jail against a mob which sought to take Johnson's life.

January 26 a special grand jury was convened, and the next day indicted Johnson for the crime above referred to.

February 6 Johnson was brought to Chattanooga from Nashville, and his trial commenced that day in the criminal court of Hamilton county. February 9 he was convicted and sentenced to death.

The date of execution was originally fixed as March 13, but, on or about March 11, was changed by the governor to March 20.

No appeal to the supreme court of the state was taken by the lawyers appointed by the court to defend Johnson.

Two daily papers were published in Chattanooga,—the Times, a morning paper, and the News, an evening paper, both having a large circulation. Three competent and leading attorneys had been appointed by the court to defend Johnson, and one of them made a statement, which was published in the Chattanooga Times of February 10, as to the reasons why an appeal was not prosecuted in Johnson's behalf. He depicts the mental strain that he and his associates had been under, and the weight of the burden of the responsibility upon them. He says that when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty "we, as the attorneys, had to settle the question whether the case would be appealed to the supreme court." He asked the trial judge to appoint three other lawyers to counsel and advise with them and help to share the responsibility, and three well-known lawyers were designated, who met with the three counsel for the petitioner and considered the matter.

"We discussed the recent mob uprising and the state of unrest in the community. It 408] was the judgment of all present *that the life of the defendant, even if the wrong man, could not be saved; that an appeal would so inflame the public that the jail would be attacked and perhaps other prisoners executed by violence. In the opinion of all of us a case was presented where the defendant, now that he had been convicted by a jury, must die by the judgment of the law, or else, if his case were appealed, he would die by the act of the uprising of the people.

"In view of all the conditions, it was the unanimous vote that the law ought to be allowed to take its course if Judge McReynolds were satisfied with the verdict, and if he were to approve it and pass judgment of death on it."

He then relates an interview had thereupon with the accused. His right of appeal was explained to him, "that the supreme court met in September next; that an appeal would stay the judgment until that time; that we did not see any reasonable ground to suppose that the supreme court would reverse the sentence, and that we feared an appeal would cause mob violence against him."

"Without giving all that occurred at the jail, he said to us that he did not want to die by a mob; that he would do as we thought best. He said he would go over to the courthouse and tell the judge that he did not have anything more to say than that he was not the guilty man.

"I want the people to know that the foregoing facts moved us to allow the law to take its course under the verdict of the jury and the judgment of Judge McReynolds. Six lawyers settled it in this way after the calmest reflection and under the keenest sense of the great responsibility.

"In view of the awfulness of the crime committed, I beg that the sheriff and every peace officer of Chattanooga and Hamilton county will still try to get all possible further light; and if any person anywhere knows anything whatever tending to show or reflect light on either the guilt or innocence of the *defendant, I beg that such 409 person make known all that he may know to us or to Attorney General Whittaker."

On the afternoon Johnson was convicted he was secretly taken from Chattanooga to Knoxville because of fear of mob violence to him.

From the time the crime was committed until after Johnson's trial the people of Chattanooga were greatly excited over the crime and Johnson's alleged connection with it, and there was great apprehension on the part of the people as well as the officers that attempts would be made to lynch Johnson.

It was because of this intense excitement and the feeling that speedy execution of Johnson might prevent his being lynched that Johnson was so quickly indicted and tried.

While the trial was in progress extra deputies were sworn in and an unusual number of guards were kept around the courthouse and at the jail at night.

Guns to be used in protecting the jail against a mob were purchased.

March 3 Johnson filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the United States circuit court for the northern division of the eastern district of Tennessee.

March 10, 1906, the petition was denied, the circuit court ordering that Johnson be remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Hamilton county, Tennessee, to be detained by him for ten days in which to enable petitioner to prosecute an appeal from said order, and, in default of the prosecution of said appeal within that time, to be then further proceeded with under the sentence.

This order was made public through the press.

Johnson was at Knoxville, where he had been kept since his conviction, for hearing upon his petition, and was taken back to Chattanooga, March 11.

Saturday, March 17, application was duly presented by Johnson to Mr. Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court of the United States (circuit justice of the sixth circuit), at Washington, asking that an appeal be allowed to that court from the order *of the circuit court, denying Johnson's petition for a writ of habeas corpus. This appeal was allowed by Mr. Justice Harlan on the same day.

March 18, the Chattanooga Times published notice that application for said appeal had been made.

The same day Judge Clark, of the United States circuit court, received a telegram from Mr. Justice Harlan, which was communicated to Sheriff Shipp on the afternoon of that day, that he had allowed appeal to accused in habeas corpus case of Ed Johnson; that the transcript would be filed the next day, and motion also be made by Johnson's counsel for formal allowance of appeal by the Supreme Court.

March 19, the Chattanooga Times published news of the allowance of the appeal by Mr. Justice Harlan, in which it said, among other things:

"From these authorities it was learned that the granting of an appeal in a case like this acted to supersede all process in the state courts. No stay is necessary, according to the authorities, and the statute is self-operative. Pending a decision of the appeal there can be no execution by any state authority."

March 19 an order was made by the United States Supreme Court, allowing an appeal to that court from the final order of the circuit court, denying petition for writ of habeas corpus, and directing that all proceedings against the appellant be stayed, and that the custody of appellant be retained pending the appeal.

About 1 o'clock in the afternoon of said March 19 the following telegram was delivered to a telegraph company for transmittal to the addressee:

Washington, March 19, 1906.

To Sheriff of Hamilton county, Tenn., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Supreme Court of United States has allowed Ed Johnson appeal from Judge Clark's order, and directed all further proceedings stayed, and custody of Johnson retained [411] pending *appeal here. See § 766, Revised Statutes of the United States.

James H. McKenney,
Clerk Supreme Court, U. S.

This was received by the telegraph office at Chattanooga about 3:30 on the same afternoon, and delivered between 4 and 5 o'clock on that afternoon.

About 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 19th, Judge McReynolds told Sheriff Shipp that the Supreme Court had granted a stay in the Johnson case, and that thereafter Johnson was a Federal prisoner.

Between 2 and 4 of the afternoon of March 19 the following telegram was received by Judge Clark, and by his secretary communicated to Sheriff Shipp, at the jail, about 5 o'clock that afternoon, with a copy of the statute therein referred to:

Washington, D. C., March 19, 1906.

Hon. C. D. Clark, United States Court, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Court has just allowed appeal in Johnson's case, and ordered all further proceedings against him delayed and custody retained pending appeal here. It will be well to call attention of state officers immediately to § 766 of Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 597.

John M. Harlan.

The statute referred to reads (including the proviso added March 3, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 751, chap. 226]):

"Pending the proceedings on appeal in the cases mentioned in the three preceding sections, and until final judgment therein, and after final judgment of discharge, any proceeding against the person so imprisoned or confined or restrained of his liberty, in any state court, or by or under the authority of any state, for any matter so heard and determined, or in process of being heard and determined, under such writ of habeas corpus, shall be deemed null and void.

"Provided, That no such appeal shall be had or allowed after *six months from [412 the date of the judgment or order complained of."

Shipp understood that thereupon Johnson was held as a Federal prisoner.

There was published and circulated in Chattanooga, in the evening paper published in that city, on March 19, about 4 o'clock, an account of said action of the Supreme Court, under the headlines, "An Appeal Is Allowed. Ed Johnson Will Not Hang Tomorrow." This reads, in part:

"The gallows in the Hamilton county jail has again been disappointed in the case of Ed Johnson, convicted by the state courts of rape, and sentenced to death. The hanging will not take place to-morrow morning, as scheduled."

The news of the action of the court was also posted on a newspaper bulletin.

After hearing of the stay, Shipp says that he made no effort and gave no orders to have deputies or others guard the jail, but left the night jailer, defendant Gibson, there alone.

The county jail at Chattanooga, in which Johnson was confined on the 19th, consisted of four stories, two above ground and two below ground. Entrance to the jail was on the third floor, counting from the bottom. In the front part of the building, on this third floor, was an office section. An iron door led from this section into the jail proper; that is, the protected part of the building, where the prisoners were kept. Johnson was confined on the top floor. To reach him from outside the jail it was necessary to go through the offices, through the iron door between the offices and the jail proper, up a flight of stairs, through a steel-barred door, right behind which was a circular door consisting of heavy steel bars several inches apart, which revolved so as to make a passage. Passing through this circular door one came into a corridor around which were cells having iron doors which could be locked. It was in one of these cells that Johnson was confined.

The jail was located in a populous neighborhood and there were houses around it.

413] *In the evening of the 19th a white male prisoner was removed from the upper floor of the county jail in Chattanooga, leaving only Johnson and a white woman on that floor.

This same man had been removed in the same way at the time of the first attempt to lynch Johnson.

About half-past 8 or 9 that night a number of men entered the jail and went directly and without resistance to the door leading to Johnson's corridor. There is a conflict of evidence as to whether the door leading from the offices to the jail proper was locked during the evening, but, if it was locked when the mob came, it was easily broken down.

Gibson was the only officer there at the time, and he was on the top floor with Johnson.

Keys were obtained from him without resistance, but, as the lock on the door leading to the corridor where Johnson's cell was located had been broken by a member of the mob, the keys would not work.

The mob, with sledge and ax, then began to break the bolts on the corridor door.

About twelve men were actively engaged in breaking down the door and in all subsequent events of the lynching. Some of these men were masked.

A crowd of spectators began to gather around the jail soon after the mob reached it, and continued to gather in and around the jail until Johnson was taken out. This crowd was variously estimated from a few to 150 or more.

It took over an hour to break the bolts on the corridor door.

Two men then went through the circular door and in a few minutes brought Johnson out with his arms tied with a rope.

When Johnson was thus brought out, the dozen men or so composing the mob grabbed him.

This mob took Johnson from the jail to the county bridge over the Tennessee river, which was about six blocks from the jail.

Johnson was taken from the jail a little after 10 o'clock.

From the foregoing it is apparent that there was no interference *or attempt-414 ed interference of any consequence with the mob before it left the jail, and there was none after it left.

The crowd which had gathered around the jail followed the mob down to the bridge.

When the bridge was reached, the mob took Johnson a little beyond an arc light, put a rope around his neck, threw it over a beam, and swung him up.

At the bridge the mob actively engaged in lynching Johnson were close to him and separated by a space from the crowd of spectators.

The first time Johnson was swung up, the rope broke or slipped and he fell. He was swung up a second time and shot. After some shots were fired, Johnson again fell, and while lying on the ground was again shot. It was about ten minutes after the mob had reached the bridge until Johnson was killed.

It is apparent that a dangerous portion of the community was seized with the awful thirst for blood which only killing can quench, and that considerations of law and order were swept away in the overwhelming flood. The mob was, however, willing at the first attempt to accept prompt administration of the death penalty adjudged at a trial conducted according to judicial forms, in lieu of execution by lawless violence, but delay by appeal or writ of error or habeas corpus was not to be tolerated.

Under then-existing statutory provisions appeals might be taken to this court from final decisions of the circuit courts in habeas corpus in cases, among others, where the applicant for the writ is alleged to be restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution or of some law or treaty of the United States, and, if the restraint was by any state court, or by or under the authority of any state, further proceedings could not be had against him pending the appeal. Rev. Stat. §§ 763, 764, 766, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 594, 595, 597; Act of March 3, 1885, chap. 353, 23 Stat. at L. 437, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 595.

In this instance an appeal was granted by this court, and proceedings specifically ordered to be stayed. The persons who hung and shot this man were so impatient for his 415] blood *that they utterly disregarded the act of Congress as well as the order of this court.

As heretofore stated, the defendants to the information remaining to be dealt with on the facts are Shipp, Galloway, Gibson, Nolan, Williams, Justice, Padgett, Mayse, and Ward. Of these, Shipp was the sheriff, and Galloway and Gibson two of his deputies. The others are charged with active participation in the lynching. It is contended that the lynching was not expected to occur on the 19th, and the evidence of the United States district judge and some clergymen and others was given to the effect that they had no such anticipation. The event showed that they were wrong, and it is plain the danger might be very great and yet remain unperceived by the adherents of order and peace.

It will be remembered that the crime was committed on January 23, and Johnson was arrested January 25. That night a mob attacked the jail in which he was supposed to be, and ascertained that he was not there. Johnson was kept in Nashville from that day until his trial commenced, February 6. On his conviction, February 9, he was taken away from Chattanooga, and kept away until March 11, the day after his petition for habeas corpus was denied.

It must be admitted that intense feeling against Johnson existed from the time of the commission of the crime until after his conviction, and that this feeling frequently manifested itself, although Johnson was not in Chattanooga from the time of his arrest until his trial began. The intensity of this feeling, and the great apprehension of the officers of mob violence, is shown in the testimony of defendants' own witnesses, describing the precautions and secrecy exercised by them in the way they took Johnson in and out of Chattanooga, as well as by the fact that they kept him away from Chattanooga from the day of his arrest until March 11, two days before the time set for his execution, with the exception of the three days he was there attending his trial. Undoubtedly the public believed that Johnson would be 416] executed on March 13, *until the reprieve to March 20 was granted on March 11; and, after the petition for habeas corpus was denied by the circuit court, believed that Johnson would then be executed on the 20th.

Sheriff Shipp testifies that inflammatory reports of the habeas corpus proceedings and efforts to appeal the case to the Supreme 53 L. ed.

Court were sent out by the newspapers on March 11, and because of that he had fear of mob violence to Johnson. The efforts made by Johnson's attorneys to obtain an appeal were kept before the public by the newspapers.

March 16 the Chattanooga Times published a statement that a negro attorney had gone to Washington to obtain an appeal from the order denying the petition for habeas corpus. The article said:

People here are decidedly anxious as to whether Johnson is to suffer death for his crime next Monday or escape for an indefinite period by reason of intervention of the court at Washington. More unrest on the subject exists than was anticipated when Johnson was brought back to the county.

"During the recent days of suspense as to his execution, the desire for information has been feverish, and telephones at localities where information has been thought to be obtainable have been kept busy by inquirers."

In the News, published the evening of March 19, there was an editorial reviewing the local proceedings, which concluded:

"All of this delay is aggravating to the community. The people of Chattanooga believe that Johnson is guilty, and that he ought to suffer the penalty of the law as speedily as possible. If by legal technicality the case is prolonged and the culprit finally escapes, there will be no use to plead with a mob here if another such crime is committed. Such delays are largely responsible for mob violence all over the country."

The assertions that mob violence was not expected, and that there was no occasion for providing more than the usual guard *of one man for the jail in Chat-417 tanooga, are quite unreasonable and inconsistent with statements made by Sheriff Shipp and his deputies, that they were looking for a mob on the next day. Officers and others were heard to say that they expected a mob would attempt to lynch Johnson on the 20th. There does not seem to be any foundation for the belief that the mob would be considerate enough to wait until the 20th. If the officers expected a mob at all, as they say that they did, they cannot shield themselves behind the statement that they expected it on the 20th, the day that had been appointed for Johnson to die, and did not expect it the night before. But no orders had been given and nothing had been done up to half-past 8 o'clock on the night of the 19th to protect Johnson from the mob which was, according to their present statements, expected the next day.

Testimony was given by a servant in Shipp's house that, a week before Johnson was lynched, Shipp was heard to say that if the execution were stayed Johnson would be mobbed. This was, however, disputed by Shipp and relatives of his who were there at the time.

On May 28th, at Birmingham, Alabama, defendant Shipp himself, in an interview reported and printed the next morning in the Birmingham Age-Herald, said:

"The first I knew of the mob was through a telephone message I received from the Chattanooga Times office, for they had cut the wires at the county jail immediately upon their arrival. I dressed as quickly as possible and went to the jail, and found a crowd of about seventy-five people around it, most of them being in disguise. I made my way through the crowd into the jail and began remonstrating with them against taking any drastic steps. They seized me and took me upstairs, locking me up in a bath room. The members of the mob told me they meant no violence to me. I argued with them against doing anything at all, since the law had so far taken its proper course. I am frank to say that I did not attempt to hurt any of them, and would not have made such an attempt if I could. 418]*In the first place, I could have done no good, as I was overwhelmed by numbers.

"The Supreme Court of the United States was responsible for this lynching. I had given that negro every protection that I could. For fourteen days I had guarded and protected him myself. The authorities had urged me to use one or two military companies in doing so, but I told them I would land the negro in jail, which I did, individually.

"Many nights before the lynching there had been a sufficient guard around the jail. I had looked for no trouble that night, and, on the contrary, did not look for it until the next day. That night no one was on duty except the jailer, which is the usual guard at our jail, as well as in other counties.

"In my opinion the act of the Supreme Court of the United States in not allowing the case to remain in our courts was the most unfortunate thing in the history of Tennessee. I was determined that the case should be put in the hands of the law, as it was. The jury that tried the negro Johnson was as good as ever sat in a jury box.

"The people of Hamilton county were willing to let the law take its course until it became known that the case would not probably be disposed of for four or five years by the Supreme Court of the United States. The people would not submit to this, and I do not wonder at it.

"These proceedings in the United States Supreme Court recently appear to me to be only a matter of politics. I do not wish to appear in the light of defying the United States court, but I did my duty. I am conscious if it, thoroughly conscious of it, and I am ready for any conditions that may come up."

The testimony of the reporter that Shipp made these statements was corroborated by the evidence of another reporter who interviewed Shipp on the following day regarding them, and is not denied by Shipp except in an immaterial particular. From this it appears that defendant Shipp looked for trouble on the 20th, but, as he says, not that night; that he did not attempt*[419 to hurt any of the mob, "and would not have made such an attempt if I could."

He evidently resented the necessary order of this court as an alien intrusion, and declared that the court was responsible for the lynching. According to him, "the people of Hamilton county were willing to let the law take its course until it became known that the case would not probably be disposed of for four or five years by the Supreme Court of the United States." "But," he added, "the people would not submit to this, and I do not wonder at it." In other words, his view was that because this court, in the discharge of its duty, entered the order which it did, that therefore the people of Hamilton county would not submit to its mandate, and hence the court became responsible for the mob. He took the view expressed by several members of the mob on the afternoon of the 19th and before the lynching, when they said, referring to the Supreme Court, that "they had no business interfering with our business at all." His reference to the "people" was significant, for he was a candidate for re-election, and had been told that his saving the prisoner from the first attempt to mob him would cost him his place, and he had answered that he wished the mob had got him before he did.

It seems to us that to say that the sheriff and his deputies did not anticipate that the mob would attempt to lynch Johnson on the night of the 19th is to charge them with gross neglect of duty and with an ignorance of conditions in a matter which vitally concerned them all as officers, and is directly contrary to their own testimony. It is absurd to contend that officers of the law who have been through the experiences these defendants had passed through two months prior to the actual lynching did not know that a lynching probably would be attempted on the 19th. Under the facts shown, when the sheriff and his deputies assert that they expected a mob on the 20th, they practically concede the allegation of the information that they were informed and had every reason to believe that an attempt 420] would be made on the evening *of the 19th or early on the morning of the 20th.

In view of this, Shipp's failure to make the slightest preparation to resist the mob, the absence of all of the deputies, except Gibson, from the jail during the mob's proceedings, occupying a period of some hours in the early evening, the action of Shipp in not resisting the mob, and his failure to make any reasonable effort to save Johnson or identify the members of the mob, justify the inference of a disposition upon his part to render it easy for the mob to lynch Johnson, and to acquiesce in the lynching. After Shipp was informed that a mob was at the jail, and he could not do otherwise than go there, he did not and in fact at no time hindered the mob or caused it to be interfered with, or helped in the slightest degree to protect Johnson. And this in utter disregard of this court's mandate, and in defiance of this court's orders.

Let us recapitulate the facts bearing immediately on defendant Shipp.

About 9 o'clock on the night of the 19th the judge before whom Johnson was tried, and the attorney who prosecuted him, communicated with Sheriff Shipp at his house, saying that there were persons around the jail who looked suspicious, and suggesting that the sheriff had better go down to the jail.

At that time a report was generally circulated in the city that a mob was at the jail to lynch Johnson.

Shipp lived only a few blocks from the jail. He reached the jail about 9. He was alone. A number of people were in the jail and outside of it when he arrived. He anticipated a mob was inside.

Without stopping to speak to any of these people, he rushed inside of the jail to the foot of the stairs leading to the floor Johnson was on. There he was taken hold of by five or six men and carried upstairs. The men who took hold of him had no firearms.

At first he was put in a bath room, and then was released and stood around near the corridor door, where the mob 421] *work, with three or four unarmed men around him. He made no effort to get away or use force in opposing the mob. He did not attempt to use his pistol or call for help. After the corridor had been broken in, either Shipp or defendant Gibson told the mob which cell Johnson was in. When the mob left the jail with Johnson, Shipp did not follow or make any effort to rescue Johnson or get others to help rescue him. He was not locked up when the mob left the jail, but was left entirely free.

When the crowd following the lynchers was about two blocks from the jail, Shipp came out of the building alone and unguarded. To a request made by a man at that time to go and identify members of the mob, Shipp replied that it would be dangerous and foolish. This request was made before the shooting occurred.

A special deputy met Shipp at the jail just after Johnson had been taken out and before he was shot. Shipp told him that the mob had Johnson. Shipp was quiet, and made no effort to go after the lynchers, or to reach the police or militia or others.

When he reached the jail he could have gone about three blocks to the police station and got the police.

No alarm bell was rung at the courthouse that night, although it was rung the night of the attempted lynching, January 25, and it drew out a big crowd. No attempt was made by Shipp or others to summon a posse. He sent no one after deputies. He made no effort to send anyone for help.

It is testified that some time after the mob had left the jail for the bridge, Shipp sent Galloway and Clark down to the bridge, but he made no effort to go himself.

There was in the crowd around the jail and at the scene of the lynching a substantial number of law-abiding men of good character.

That assistance in suppressing the mob might have been easily obtained if effort had been made is shown by the testimony of the chairman of the board of safety, who testifies that, at the time of the first lynching, in going four or five *blocks to 422 the jail, he gathered about 16 men to help put down the mob.

The militia was drilling on the night of the 19th between 8 and 10:30 in the armory, a well-known place, three blocks from the jail. It was not called upon to assist in suppressing the mob, although it had been called out twice before by the governor, and was bound to respond to another call by him.

The governor had given assurances that any help asked for would be given, and we have no doubt he would have responded, for he would have had the honor of Tennessee in his keeping.

Numerous witnesses testify that no firearms were displayed by the mob except that one of their number was in the office of the jail with a Winchester rifle, and one pistol was exhibited to a reporter when the door was being broken open.

No deputies put in an appearance while the mob was at the jail or during the lynching, except Frank Jones, who approached the jail with a prisoner, but, upon seeing the mob, immediately left with the prisoner, and excepting Matt Galloway, who was seen in the crowd.

From the time he reached there, about 6 o'clock, until the mob came, Gibson was the only officer in charge of the jail. But there was much evidence that customarily many deputies were there nightly, and that several were present on the night of the 19th until just before the irruption of the mob.

Heavy iron chains were sometimes used as additional guards upon circular doors in the jail, such as that leading to Johnson's corridor. These were locked by the prisoners on the inside. During the trial of Johnson these chains were used on the circular doors. But none were on the circular door leading to Johnson's cell on the 19th. It also appears that Johnson's cell door was not locked.

Winchester rifles which were kept to defend the jail against mob violence were, at the time the mob attacked the jail on [423]*the 19th, in a show case in the office. These were taken out of the show case by the mob and unloaded.

Although Shipp was in the midst or near the members of the mob for about an hour when they were in the jail, he did not seek to obtain information so that he could identify any of them, and he testifies that he does not know any member of the mob.

Only one conclusion can be drawn from these facts, all of which are clearly established by the evidence,—Shipp not only made the work of the mob easy, but in effect aided and abetted it.

Gibson is involved in the same condemnation though under less responsibility. We think belief on his part that a mob would attempt to enter the jail and lynch Johnson on the night of the 19th must be presumed.

The day jailer left the jail some time after six o'clock, and transferred the keys to Gibson, the night jailer. Gibson's 15-year-old boy was with him, but went to the opera house at 8:30. Gibson was in charge of the jail more than two hours before the arrival of the mob, and he made no effort to summon assistance to repel the attack, although necessarily he must have known that he alone could only offer slight resistance. Mrs. Baker, a white woman, confined on the same floor with Johnson, testified that Gibson, soon after arriving at the jail, when she had gone down stairs to get a letter written, said to her that a mob was coming, and directed her to go to her room, and when the mob was at the jail came to her door and told her that no one would hurt her. Gibson admits the last statement, but denies the first.

He testifies that when he heard the mob he went into the hospital cell, located on the top floor, and sat down on a lounge, and as soon as the mob got upstairs he handed over to them his pistol and the keys, including a key to the door of Johnson's cell; that he did not try to use the pistol, or to resist the mob by force; that from the top floor he could have gone through the kitchen into the yard and back of the jail, but he *made [424 no effort to do so, although it took the mob some ten minutes after he knew they were there to break through the door between the outer door and the jail proper; that he just gave up and made no effort at all to resist the mob or rescue Johnson after they had left the jail; that although the men were bold in their work, he failed to recognize anyone excepting Nick Nolan.

Galloway was a deputy sheriff from the time Johnson was convicted until after the lynching, and was told by the sheriff after the mob had left for the bridge to go down there, and did so, but Johnson was then dead. He was criminal court deputy, and served criminal court papers and made arrests. But he had no charge of the jail or keeping of prisoners except when officially so assigned. He had no connection with the jail or the prisoners at any time after Johnson was brought from Knoxville on the 10th or 11th of March. He testified that he had heard nothing while attending to his duties that made him think Johnson was in danger; was a member of the Eagle Club, and was there on evening of the 19th, at 7:45, not having heard prior thereto anything about any impending lynching. His first information of the lynching was after 10 o'clock, when he went to the jail at once. There he met the sheriff, who asked him to go to the bridge, which he did, but Johnson was dead. We think Galloway must be acquitted of the charges in the information.

This brings us to a consideration of the case in respect of the six defendants who are charged as members of the mob and participants in its action.

As to Williams and Nolan, there is direct testimony to their participation in the lynching, and we do not think that the evidence relied on to weaken that conclusion is sufficient to do so.

Asto Padgett and Mayse, there is testimony of statements on their part on the afternoon of the 19th and the morning of the 20th, which, if believed, demonstrates their guilt. We have carefully examined and analyzed the evidence to impeach the principal witness to these conversations, and *also to make out abilis, but we can-[425 not accept it as convincing.

We hold that the case as to Justice and Ward fails on the evidence.

In our opinion it does not admit of question on this record that this lamentable riot was the direct result of opposition to the administration of the law by this court. It was not only in defiance of our mandate, but was understood to be such. The Supreme Court of the United States was called upon to abdicate its functions and decline to enter such orders as the occasion, in its judgment, demanded, because of the danger of their defeat by an outbreak of lawless violence. It is plain that what created this mob and led to this lynching was the unwillingness of its members to submit to the delay required for the appeal. The intent to prevent that delay by defeating the hearing of the appeal necessarily follows from the defendants' acts, and, if the life of anyone in the custody of the law is at the mercy of a mob, the administration of justice becomes a mockery. When this court granted a stay of execution on Johnson's application it became its duty to protect him until his case should be disposed of. And when its mandate, issued for his protection, was defied, punishment of those guilty of such attempt must be awarded.

The rule will be discharged as to the defendants Galloway, Justice, and Ward, and made absolute as to the other defendants.

Rule discharged as to defendants Galloway, Justice, and Ward, and made absolute as to defendants Shipp, Gibson, Williams, Nolan, Padgett, and Mayse. Attachments to issue, returnable on Tuesday, June 1.

Mr. Justice Moody did not hear the argument, and took no part in the disposition of the case.

426] *Mr. Justice Peckham, dissenting:

I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court in this case, and I think its importance requires a statement of the reasons for my dissent. In regard to the crime which was perpetrated by the mob upon the person of the negro, there can be but one opinion. I take it that all intelligent and respectable citizens who are cognizant of the facts agree that it was murder, without one extenuating circumstance to relieve its atrocious character. The important question, however, is, first, as to the sheriff,—whether he is guilty of the charge made against him in the information filed in this proceeding. The charge, as contained in the information, upon which such a vast amount of evidence has been taken, is that the sheriff and many other persons conspired together for the purpose of breaking and entering the county jail and taking therefrom the negro Johnson, in order to lynch him, with the intent to thereby show their contempt and disregard of the order of this court, and to prevent the hearing of the appeal.

A careful consideration of the case leaves me with the conviction that there is not one particle of evidence that any conspiracy had ever been entered into or existed on the part of the sheriff, as charged against him. It is not alone that the evidence preponderates in his favor, but it seems to me there is no material evidence against him, certainly none that rises higher than the merest possible suspicion, founded upon evidence of facts which are in themselves wholly inconclusive, and just as consistent with innocence as with guilt. His character is shown by many witnesses to be that of the highest. Not a man in Chattanooga stands better as a man and a citizen than he does. There is not a particle of evidence to the contrary. He has lived an honored and respected citizen of that city since 1874; has held honorable official positions before the one that he now holds, and yet, as an old man, he is adjudged guilty of a contempt of this court, and liable to serve *a dis-427 graceful imprisonment because, as is insisted in this record, he did not do as much towards resisting a lawless mob as this court says he ought to have done.

The crime for which Johnson was convicted was perpetrated on a white schoolgirl on the 23d of January, 1906, and on the 25th of that month Johnson was arrested near Chattanooga and charged with the crime. After being arrested he was taken by the sheriff, by order of the state criminal court, to the jail at Nashville, where he was kept until the day of his trial, February 6. The sheriff was active and intelligent in his efforts to preserve the safety of the negro. No adverse criticism is or can truthfully be made upon his conduct at that time. At the time of the arrest of the negro there is no contradiction in the evidence that there was very great excitement, and a disposition evinced to lynch Johnson at once. A crowd of over a thousand, it is said, surrounded the jail on the night of the 25th of January, where Johnson was supposed to be, but the prisoner was not in the jail, and the deputies of the sheriff (the sheriff himself, having Johnson in custody, was taking him to Nashville) exhorted the mob to disperse, and finally people were sent into the jail on behalf of the mob, and went through it to satisfy themselves that Johnson was not there. The mob thereupon dispersed. On the 26th of January a grand jury was convened and Johnson was indicted, and on the 6th of February he was brought to Chattanooga from Nashville, and his trial was commenced that day in the criminal court. On February 9 he was convicted and sentenced to death. No appeal was taken by the lawyers appointed by the court to defend him from that sentence. The lawyers said they feared the prisoner would be lynched if such an appeal were taken. On his conviction he was taken from Chat-nooga to Knoxville, in the personal custody of the sheriff, to be safe from any possible violence of the mob. No mob, however, appeared, and nothing was attempted. The judge who presided at the trial of the negro, after his conviction, told the sheriff that the prisoner would be entirely safe at Chattanooga. After the trial the excitement decreased very greatly and seemed to disappear entirely. Of this fact there is no contradiction in the evidence. On the 3d of March a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed in the United States circuit court for the northern division of the eastern district of Tennessee on the part of Johnson. On the 10th of March the petition was denied, and the circuit judge ordered that Johnson be remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Hamilton county (at Chattanooga), Tennessee, to be detained by the sheriff in his custody for ten days, in which to permit Johnson to prosecute an appeal from the order, and, in default of the prosecution of such appeal, further proceedings to be taken in the state court of Tennessee, under its sentence. Immediately after this decision Johnson was taken back to Chattanooga, arriving there March 11. Everything was quiet and there was no evidence of excitement, nor of any intention whatever to interfere with the negro. The sheriff kept watch of public sentiment for several days thereafter. He was himself going about through the city, mixing with all manner of crowds, and found not the slightest evidence that would lead any reasonable man to believe that any assault was intended upon Johnson. The sheriff stated that he did some canvassing in his election campaign during this time, and was around in the manufacturing establishments, and saw no excitement and heard no talk of the case during the whole time. There was nothing at all, says the sheriff, that came to his knowledge during this time, that would have put a prudent and careful man on his guard.
428

On the 19th of March, the day preceding the night of the lynching, the same thing was noticed, of a total lack of any evidence of any excitement or of any evidence of an intention to commit any violence. Thus, from the 11th to the 19th of March,—from the time that Johnson was brought back from Knoxville to Chattanooga, after Judge Clark, the United States judge, had denied his petition for habeas corpus,—the city was entirely tranquil, and nothing was done which would have caused any man, even the most circumspect and prudent, to believe that any violence was intended. During the time from the 11th to the 19th of March, there had been no extra guards at the jail because of these facts. No demonstration had been made against the jail, and no threats made against the prisoner that anybody heard. Judge Clark, now deceased, who had been a resident of Chattanooga since 1883, was a witness in this proceeding, and stated that he had never heard anything suggested as to there being any danger to Johnson if the stay of execution were granted in his case. Judge Clark said:

"It strikes me it was absolutely absurd in view of what actually occurred." The judge was also asked whether anything said at the trial of the habeas corpus proceedings on the part of the representatives of the state, or on the part of anyone, caused him to apprehend any mob violence to this man, and the judge said, none in the least. The judge also said that he had asked his secretary on the day that he was at Chattanooga on his way to St. Augustine if he had heard of any suggestions or hints of violence or dissatisfaction with the situation, and the secretary told him that he had not. On the 19th of March, he had, he said, called up some one of the defendant's attorneys and found out that the appeal from the order denying the habeas corpus had been allowed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the judge said to the attorney that he would be there all day at his office and would leave for Florida that night. The judge said the reason he made that announcement was that he had known that Johnson had been taken to another jail prior to this, and that he was brought out of the Knoxville jail when the petition for habeas corpus was brought up before him (Judge Clark). "Therefore," Judge Clark said, "on account of that, after getting Mr. Justice Harlan's telegram, I would have ordered the man to any jail where it was desired to send him . . . if it had appeared that the prisoner was in great or real danger—if that had appeared to me—I am quite sure that I would have made the order of my own motion, or would have called up his attorney and suggested that he make an application for 'his removal.'" [430] The following question was also put to the judge: "Q. Judge Clark, I will ask you if the attorney to whom you talked, or any other attorney for the defendant Johnson, or any other person, suggested to you the necessity or even the propriety of taking steps to protect your prisoner, the Federal prisoner Johnson? A. I never heard the remotest suggestion, and I did not think the man was in any danger. I thought it was simply the noise that is generally made by people who really do not expect to do anything. . . . I will say that I had heard no suggestion and that I had no thought that there was any danger on hand anywhere." If there had been any evidence of danger or the possibility thereof, would not the attorneys of the negro, who were engaged in the prosecution of their habeas corpus proceedings, have responded to the judge, and asked for the removal of the negro to another jail? They did not ask for it because, as is perfectly evident, they shared the general opinion that there was no danger; that the former danger had passed, and there was no reason for further action.

The same kind of evidence was given by the most respectable men in the community, —editors, reporters, railway agents, large employers of men, clergymen, lawyers, doctors, and business men, citizens of the place, and also by the chief of police of the city. Not one of them apprehended danger of mob violence at that time. All of these men were cognizant of the facts as to the prior attempts at lynching and as to the high state of excitement which existed at that time. But they all agreed that such excitement had entirely passed, and that there was not the least danger to be apprehended. One of these ministers, the Rev. Mr. Boswell, had been a resident of the city for nearly four years, and was a member of what is termed the Pastors' Union of Chattanooga. He was also a fraternal delegate from the Pastors' Union to the Central Labor League, composed of delegates from every labor organization in the city, and, as a member of the Pastors' Union, he co-operated with the Central Labor League as a fraternal *delegate. He also preached on an average twice a week in the various shops in the city. He said that at the time of the arrest the public feeling was intense and that it subsided with the beginning of the trial. He was present during most of the trial; that after the trial was over he found no talk that would cause him to apprehend that there might be an attempt to lynch the prisoner. He had, he said, preached a sermon on lynching after the first attempt was made, and had taken the position that it was a violation of good citizenship, and did not mince his words at all, and yet, with all these opportunities to know the state of public feeling, he said that there was nothing that would arouse apprehension on his part, or, so far as he could see, on the part of any prudent man, that there was any lynching threatened. And this, too, after it was known that this court had allowed the appeal from Judge Clark's order. The evidence of the other witnesses was of the same character, and there were unanimous expressions of opinion by the witnesses upon the hearing of this case, that there was no question of danger of mob violence to be apprehended up to the very last moment; and yet counsel for the government have regarded it as part of the evidence of the guilt of the sheriff as a conspirator that he acted as if he did not apprehend any violence, and that he took no steps to prevent it on the day in question. No one else had any idea that there was any danger and no one else was looking for it. The men who testified that there was no apprehension of mob violence were men who were specially cognizant of the state of public opinion at that time. The counsel for the government insisted that it was the duty of the sheriff to have had the jail guarded on that day by extra guards, and that his failure to do so was evidence of his being guilty of the conspiracy as alleged in the information. Although the fact was announced in the morning papers of the 19th that the allowance of the appeal had been granted by this court, there was during the day no evidence of excitement and no hostile demonstration or suspicion of it against the prisoner, and no evidence of any fact going to *show[432 any projected formation of a mob, or the least probability of any lynching or any attempt that night. Under these circumstances, on the 19th of March the sheriff went home about half-past 6 in the evening, leaving things at the jail the same as usual. Suppose, as a matter of judgment, the sheriff should have proceeded as if this almost universal sentiment as to the absence of all danger was erroneous, or not well founded, and that, as matter of good sense, he should have had the jail guarded, is it possible that he can be properly convicted of contempt while he agreed with this public sentiment and acted accordingly? At any rate, he went home as usual, and was sitting at his desk in his home when the telephone sounded, some time about 9 o'clock, and he recognized, upon going to it, the voice of the Attorney General, Whittaker, who asked him if he knew what was going on at the jail, and the sheriff said, "No," and the Attorney General said, "You had better go down there." He went down there as rapidly as he could, running most of the way and walking rapidly for the rest, and, being under the care of a physician for a difficulty of the stomach, he was much exhausted when he arrived at the jail, where a large number of men were assembled, many of them armed, and they immediately surrounded and took possession of him. Many of them were masked and were waiting for their comrades to bring Johnson down. The sheriff expostulated and remonstrated with these men and asked them to desist, when they seized him. He was seized from behind, and he testified that he did not know but that they were going to do him some violence, and he reached back for his gun, which he had in his pocket. They assured him that they did not intend to hurt him, and then they seized and rushed him up the stairs and carried him into a hallway, where he was kept a prisoner until after the crowd had got Johnson and left the jail with him. The sheriff was sixty-three years of age at this time, and, on account of his physical condition, unable in any event to have offered any great resistance. There were at least ten or fifteen of the men around him 433] who were armed, and the *sequel proved that many more in the crowd were also armed. Others were standing back looking on. Whether the sheriff might possibly have been quicker with his gun and taken it out of his pocket and shot some of them is not certain from the evidence, but the odds of even ten or fifteen to one are somewhat large, and that he did not kill, or attempt to kill, any of them, is no evidence whatever of complicity with these miscreants, and certainly no evidence of contempt of this court. It seems to me most extraordinary that even an official under these circumstances can be found guilty of a contempt because in fact he did not resist to the death.

Argument has also been made against the sheriff, based on the fact that, on his way from the house to the jail, he did not seek out the militia, a company of which is said to have been engaged in drilling that night in its drill room, and ask for assistance immediately at the jail. It may be that such would have been a wise course, but he was acting on the spur of the moment and under a call to come immediately to the jail, and he was not sure of what was going on, and, in seeking the aid of the militia, he was not certain to succeed in obtaining immediate assistance. At any rate, the mere fact that he did not think of it or stop to do it is no evidence whatever to show that his failure to seek its aid was criminal. I think the conspiracy part of the information is absolutely without evidence to support it.

It is, however, argued that the sheriff did not otherwise do all that he should have done to prevent this infamous crime, and hence that he is guilty of a contempt. As evidence of this fact the government refers to the interview of the 28th of May between the sheriff and a newspaper reporter in Birmingham. On that day, at the time of the interview, news had been received of the action of this court ordering certain persons to show cause as for contempt. In this interview Sheriff Shipp said that the first he knew of the mob was through a telephone message; that he went to the jail and made his way through the crowd, and remonstrated with them against taking any drastic 434] steps. *They seized him and took him upstairs, locking him in a bath room. The members of the mob told him they meant no violence to him. He argued with them against doing anything at all, since the law had so far taken its proper course, and the interview went on with this statement: "I am frank to say that I did not attempt to hurt any of them, and would not have made such an attempt if I could. In the first place, I could have done no good, as I was overwhelmed by numbers." The sheriff's statement that he made no attempt to hurt any of the mob, and would not have made such an attempt if he could, must be taken with the rest of his statement, in which he said that "in the first place, he could have done no good by it, as he was overwhelmed by numbers." There is no doubt of the truth of that statement. He was one man against, at the very least, ten or fifteen or more resolute men, armed and assembled for the purpose of getting this negro, and surrounded by a still larger crowd in the jail yard, and there is not the slightest evidence that they were unarmed. Their subsequent action shows an unnecessary supply of guns. It is true, the sheriff might possibly have drawn his gun and fired at the masked men as he came into the jail and succeeded in killing one and perhaps more of the members of the mob, but it is absolutely true that it would have done no good even then, because, with such odds against him, his struggles could have resulted only in his being actually overwhelmed and possibly killed, while the negro would not have been saved. The sheriff occupied no vantage ground from which to repel an attack and where his first assailant would stand a good chance of being killed by him. He was not only in the power of the mob who had him in custody, but he was also without anyone to appeal to for aid. Those who were bystanders knew of the sheriff's difficulty without further appeal by him, and yet they seemed to feel no desire to interfere, or else recognized the uselessness at that time of any effort.

The evidence of witnesses for the government showed without contradiction that the sheriff came to the jail running as *fast[435 as he could; that he pushed through the crowd, shoved the men aside, and entered the inside of the inclosure, never stopping at all, and the moment he arrived at the jail door he was set upon and seized by four or five men and overpowered, and he talked to and expostulated with the crowd, trying to reason with them and to get them to stop. When asked if the sheriff made any show of force, the government witness said, "Well, he didn't have any chance to," and the question being repeated, the witness said, "Well, he did, yes, but he was overpowered," that "he resisted their efforts to hold him," by "trying to pull away." (Evidence of Curtis, one of the reporters on the Chattanooga Times, and a witness for the government.) The evidence of another reporter, Mr. Chivington, and a government witness, was to the same effect, that the sheriff was seized by four or five men and overpowered, and carried upstairs, and that he appealed to the mob not to lynch the negro. The witness also said that at this time, just as the sheriff was seized, the witness imagined he saw the sheriff "like he was going to draw a pistol, but before he could move any further there were five or six fellows grabbed him and carried him bodily to the top of the stairs."

All this time there was not an offer from a single man to aid the sheriff when they saw him seized, nor did any of them spread any alarm or ask for any outside aid, and the sheriff says he did not ask for it because he knew it would be useless to make any such appeal to the persons there, and that everyone there knew the situation, and the overwhelming numbers of the crowd surrounding the premises and in the jail.

Of course, as the witnesses heard the sheriff expostulating with and begging the crowd to do no harm to the negro, if there had been the least disposition on the part of anyone to come to his aid the opportunity to do so was quite open and plain.

The appearance of the sheriff after the taking of the negro, and the effect of the whole occurrence upon him is stated in the evidence, about which there is not the slightest contradiction. *He was greatly excited, and almost in a faint. He was as white as a sheet, and said to the witness, "My God! I did everything I could." He also said in the course of the interview with the witness, "My God! they have ruined me." He had all the appearance of a man who was ready to collapse. You could barely understand what he said. His voice was in a tremble, like a voice filled with emotion." This is the evidence of Mr. Horan, and it is nowhere contradicted. And yet the government claims that in such a case the sheriff should be imprisoned for a contempt of this court because he did not do more in the way of resistance to an overwhelming force, and did not foresee with more clearness than any one else what was to happen on the night of the 19th, and take measures accordingly to guard the safety of the negro. It seems to me that the opinion of the court is founded upon this view.

Then, again, this is not a question as to whether possibly the sheriff might have done more than he did. Some men, under such circumstances, might perhaps have earlier attempted to draw their guns, and would possibly only have ceased resistance with their lives. But when one is really overpowered, superior force makes efforts at resistance futile, if not foolish. Other men might do less than this man did and still be absolutely innocent of a contempt. The question is not whether this invalid old man did everything that he possibly could have done up to the last extremity and at the risk of his life in the performance of his duty as sheriff. To be free from any contempt of this court it was not necessary that the sheriff should have stood by the prisoner at the peril of his own life, or that he should have sacrificed it in an unsuccessful attempt against overwhelming odds to prevent the mob from taking the prisoner out of his custody. The sheriff, under circumstances such as are detailed in this case, should be freed from the charge of contempt if he were not guilty of any conspiracy with others to lynch the prisoner, and if he honestly and fairly did what he could in the way of remonstrance and exhortation to prevent the lynching. Being in the power of the mob, he was not *called upon to sacrifice his [437] life in a desperate and hopeless attempt to save his prisoner against odds such as appeared in this case, or else take the risk of being adjudged guilty of a contempt of court. But what could the sheriff have done more than he did do? That he was in the power of these men is absolutely without contradiction from the evidence. If he had had his pockets full of pistols he could have done nothing with them, as the evidence shows, the moment he was seized by the crowd. His statement that the mob took action because of the allowance of appeal by this court, which they thought might involve great delay, and that the mob would not stand for that, is but the expression of an opinion by the sheriff as to the reason for the lynching. He does not and did not pretend to justify the action. In all probability that was the reason,—a dislike of the interference of this court,—a reason utterly without justification and disgraceful to those who entertained it. But the sheriff surely cannot be properly convicted because he simply truthfully stated the sentiments which, in his judgment, actuated the mob. It is not a crime to entertain an opinion as to what moved a mob under these circumstances, nor can this court properly, in my judgment, convict an official of contempt because he stated his belief that the mob acted from this most disgraceful reason. Nor is the opinion, as expressed, the least evidence of the guilt of the sheriff of the contempt with which he is charged, or of any conspiracy to commit it.

In the interview the sheriff also said he had looked for no trouble that night, and, on the contrary, did not look for it until the next day. It will be remembered the next day was the one appointed for carrying into execution the sentence of the state court, and when the day should pass without the sentence being carried into execution the sheriff said afterwards that he apprehended there might be trouble. But that was the next day, and the trouble apprehended would be founded upon the happening of that day, and there was an abundance of time in which to prepare for what might then 438]be attempted. Whatever *the sheriff may have thought of the delay which might be caused by the appeal to this court, or however ill-founded his opinion as to the probable length of that delay, his thoughts on the subject furnish no evidence even tending to show that he conspired with the mob, or that he would not do what he could to protect his prisoner when the exigency arose and the time for action arrived. He may have thought there would be great delay, and for that reason did not wonder the people would hate to submit to it. All this, however, is mere evidence as to what it was supposed a mob might do the next day, but is, as I have repeated already, no evidence of conspiracy on the part of the sheriff to aid the mob, and none that he was guilty of a contempt in not resisting or attacking it up to the point of imperiling his life in a futile attempt to protect his prisoner. It seems to me that the sheriff is being held to a degree of responsibility far beyond any reasonable limit, and not justified by the evidence contained in the record.

The government based its argument for a conviction of the sheriff very largely upon the interview above referred to, and which I have commented on at some length. Strike that out, and there is really nothing whatever on which to base the shadow of a claim for a conviction. For the reasons given I think the interview itself is wholly insufficient as evidence of the guilt of the sheriff, and I think the rule to show cause should be discharged as to him. I also think the evidence is too slight upon which to convict the jailer.

1056

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna concur in this dissent.

On June 1st, 1909, upon motion by defendants for time to present petition for rehearing, defendants were given thirty days in which to prepare and present such petitions, defendants to be released in the meantime on their own recognizance.

*ED JOHNSON, Appt. [485
v.

STATE OF TENNESSEE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 485.)

Appeal — abatement — death of party.

The death of the appellant abates an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from an order of a Federal circuit court denying relief by habeas corpus.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2522-2527, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 2.]

Decided May 24, 1909.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern Division of the Eastern District of Tennessee to review an order denying relief by habeas corpus to a prisoner under sentence of death in the Criminal Court of Hamilton County in that state. Dismissed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE:

Appeal abated by death of appellant, and case dismissed.

NOTE.—On abatement and substitution of parties on writ of error from or appeal to the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 856.

On abatement generally—see note to Green v. Watkins, 5 L. ed. U. S. 256.

214 U. S.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

487]*EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF THE HUDSON OIL & SUPPLY COMPANY, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Prohibition.

Mr. De Lagnel Berier for petitioner.

March 1, 1909. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF FRANK MCWILLIAMS, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Prohibition.

Mr. Richard D. Currier for petitioner.

March 1, 1909. Denied.

SASS & CRAWFORD, Plaintiffs in Error, v. MINNIE THOMAS and Charley Thomas. [No. 112.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—case arising in courts of Indian territory.

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment in the United States Court of Appeals in the Indian Territory, affirming a judgment of the United States Court for the Southern District of that territory, in favor of plaintiffs, in an action of unlawful detainer.

See same case below, 152 Fed. 627, 82 C. C. A. 19.

Messrs. W. A. Ledbetter and S. T. Bledsoe for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. A. C. Cruce and W. I. Cruce for defendants in error.

March 22, 1909. Per Curiam: The Writ of Error is dismissed for want of jurisdiction, on authority of Laurel Oil & Gas Co. v. Morrison, 212 U. S. 291, ante, 517, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394, decided on February 23, last.

53 L. ed.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF THE CONSOLIDATED RUBBER TIRE COMPANY, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for a Writ of Prohibition.

Mr. Charles W. Stapleton for petitioner.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

GILA BEND RESERVOIR & IRRIGATION COMPANY, Appellant, v. W. H. LINN et al. [No. 199, of October Term, 1897.]; GILA BEND RESERVOIR & IRRIGATION COMPANY, Appellant, v. GILA WATER COMPANY [No. 226, of October Term, 1905].

Motions for leave to file petitions for leave to file bills of review in the lower court.

Mr. E. S. Clark for petitioner.

March 15, 1909. Denied.

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. OLLIE M. HENRIE, etc., et al. [No. 648.]

Error to state court—review of facts.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the state of Arkansas to review a judgment affirming, upon remittitur of the damages above $25,000, a judgment of the Circuit Court of Miller County, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in an action for the death of a railway employee while adjusting a coupling. On rehearing in the state court it was contended for the first time that the undisputed evidence showed that the cars were equipped with the automatic couplers required by the Federal safety appliance act, and that it was therefore contributory negligence to go between the cars as the deceased employee did to make the coupling. The court said the objection was raised too late, and, further, that, in any event, there was evidence to sustain a finding that the coupling appliances were in such condition that they could not be operated from the outside.

See same case below, 87 Ark. 443, 112 S. W. 967.

Messrs. James F. Read, James B. McDonough, and Samuel W. Moore for plaintiff in error.

Mr. William H. Arnold for defendants in error.

April 19, 1909. Per Curiam: Writ of Error dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 411, 51 L. ed. 545, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Behn v. Campbell, 205 U. S. 407, 51 L. ed. 859, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Stickney v. Kelsey, 209 U. S. 419, 52 L. ed. 853, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, ante, 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON, & QUINCY RAILWAY COMPANY

v.

EDGAR C. WILLIAMS.

Cases certified — sending up whole case.

Questions which involve the determination of the whole case cannot be sent up to the Federal Supreme Court by a certificate from a circuit court of appeals.

[For other cases, see Cases Certified, III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 154.]

Argued and submitted April 16, 1909. Decided April 26, 1909.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, which, omitting the caption and formal parts, is as follows: "The judgment which the writ of error challenges was rendered after a trial and a verdict of a jury for $5,000 damages. At the trial these facts were conclusively established: The defendant in error was injured by the negligence of the servants of the railway company while he was riding in a caboose of a cattle train under a contract between him and the railway company for the transportation of his cattle at the regular rate, in which contract the railway company had agreed to transport him free, and he had agreed, in consideration of the free transportation, that the railway company should not be liable to him for any injury or damage, from whatever cause, which he might suffer or incur while he was so carried; that the cattle should be in his charge for the purpose of attention and care, and that the railway company should not be responsible for such attention and care, but he should load, unload, water, and feed them. He was not constrained, required, or requested to make this contract, or one of this nature, in order to secure transportation for his cattle by the railway company at the same rate and on the same terms in its care, but he had the option to have them transported at the same rate in the care of the railway company, and to ride on a passenger train from the point of shipment to the destination of the cattle for the regular fare, or to ride free in the caboose car of the cattle train under his contract to hold the railway company exempt from liability for his injuries, and to care for the cattle himself. He freely exercised this option, and chose the latter alternative. The danger of injury to one riding in the caboose of a cattle train is about four times the danger to one riding over the same railroad in the coach of a passenger train. Upon these facts, the railway company, which had pleaded its exemption from liability under the contract, requested the court to instruct the jury to return a verdict in its favor; the court refused; an exception was taken to this ruling; and this ruling and many others have been assigned as errors and are pending in this court for determination.

"And the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit further certifies that other questions of law which relate to the admission of evidence are presented by the assignment of errors in this case, and are pending for the decision of this court, but that the following questions of law are also presented by the assignment of errors, and their decision is indispensable to a determination of this case in this court; and that, to the end that this court may properly decide the issues of law presented, it desires the instruction of the Supreme Court of the United States upon the following questions of law:

"1. In a contract between an owner of cattle and a railway company for the transportation of the cattle at the regular rate, which contains the further agreement that the owner shall be transported on the cattle train free in consideration that he contracts that the railway company shall not be liable to him for any injury or damage which he sustains while he is being so carried, and that he will load, unload, feed, and care for the cattle during the transportation, is his agreement that the railway company shall not be liable to him for any injury or damage which he sustains while being so carried a valid contract?

2. Where the owner of the cattle is not constrained, required, or requested to make the contract described in the foregoing question in order to have his cattle transported at the regular rate, but freely chooses to make such an agreement in preference to contracting for the transportation of his cattle at the regular rate at the risk of the railway company, and riding himself on a passenger train to the destination of the cattle at the regular rate, is his agreement that the railway company shall not be liable to him for any injury or damage which he sustains while being so carried a valid contract?

NOTE.—On the definiteness of question to be certified—see note to Waco Water & Light Co. v. Waco, 31 L.R.A. 392.

"3. Do the facts which were established at the trial, and which are set forth in the statement which precedes these questions, show a valid contract by the owner of the cattle, the plaintiff below, that the railway company should not be liable to him for any injury or damage which he sustained while he was riding in the caboose of the cattle train under the contract specified in the statement?" Dismissed.

Mr. O. H. Dean argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. D. McLeod, H. C. Timmonds, O. M. Spencer, and Hale Holden, filed a brief for the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company.

Mr. John H. Denison submitted the cause for Williams. Messrs. John Hipp and Ralph Talbot were on the brief.

Mr. William E. Fowler also submitted the cause for Williams. Messrs. D. C. Allen, James M. Sandusky, and S. G. Sandusky were on the brief.

Per Curiam:

In the opinion of a majority of the court, this certificate is essentially the same as that disposed of in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 205 U. S. 444, 51 L. ed. 875, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, and it is therefore dismissed on the authority of that decision.

Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting:

When this case was here before I felt doubts, but deferred to the judgment of the majority, as I think one should when it does not seem that an important principle is involved or that there is some public advantage to be gained from a statement of the other side. But it seems to me that the present order is a mistake upon an important matter, and I am unwilling that it should seem to be made by unanimous consent. I think that such questions are to be encouraged as a mode of disposing of cases in the least cumbersome and most expeditious way. The former certificate was thought to invite a consideration of mixed questions of law and fact. However that may have been, the present one puts definite questions of pure law, and I think that those questions should be answered. Even if the third should be objected to, the other two are complete in themselves. It is no objection to a question of law that the case turns upon it. That is the best of reasons for propounding it. The only objection is not to deciding the case here, but to putting questions that turn upon conclusions from evidence, or that present a general statement and ask a judgment with regard to unspecified questions of law.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Moody concur in this dissent.

GEORGE W. THOMAS, Plaintiff in Error, v. SOUTH SIDE ELEVATED RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 157.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Cooke County, in that state, condemning certain real property to the use of an elevated railway company, over the objection that the alleged failure of the company to proceed with the construction of the road within two years after its articles of incorporation were filed defeated its right to exercise the power of eminent domain, and that therefore such taking would be a denial of the equal protection of the laws, and without due process of law, in violation of United States Const. 14th Amendment. The state court held that whether the alleged failure of a railway company to proceed to the construction of its railway in compliance with statute operates to defeat the grant of corporate power could only be determined by a direct proceeding instituted in behalf of the state, and could not be raised and urged by a private individual.

See same case below, 218 Ill. 571, 75 N. E. 1058.

Mr. George W. Thomas, in propria persona.

Messrs. Monroe L. Willard and Cecil Page for defendant in error.

April 26, 1909. Per Curiam*: [497 Writ of Error dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Stevens v. Nichols, 157 U. S. 370, 39 L. ed. 736, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; A. Backus, Jr., & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 51 L. ed. 461, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Tracy v. Ginzberg, 205 U. S. 170, 51 L. ed. 755, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Rusch v. John Duncan Land & Min. Co. 211 U. S. 526, ante, 312, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172.

ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS, & MANITOBA RAILWAY COMPANY and Great Northern Railway Company, Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF MINNESOTA EX REL. CITY OF MINNEAPOLIS. [No. 162.]

Constitutional law—requiring railway company to bridge tracks at intersection of new street.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed, on a second appeal, a judgment of the District Court of Hennepin County, in that state, enforcing by mandamus municipal legislation requiring a railway company to construct at its own expense a bridge to carry over its tracks a street which was not extended over the right of way until after the railroad was built.

See same case below on first appeal, 98 Minn. 380, 120 Am. St. Rep. 581, 108 N. W. 261, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1047; second appeal, 101 Minn. 545, 112 N. W. 1142.

Messrs. Rome G. Brown, William R. Begg, and Charles S. Albert for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Frank Healy and Albert E. Clarke for defendant in error.

April 26, 1909. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed on authority of Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

FIDELITY & CASUALTY COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Plaintiff in Error, v. SOUTHERN RAILWAY NEWS COMPANY. [No. 165.]

Error to state court—Federal question—ruling on evidence.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Jefferson Circuit Court, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action upon an employer's liability insurance policy, over the objection that to admit parol evidence to contradict the written contract, and to substitute therefor the terms of a prior verbal agreement, denied the due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by United States Const. 14th Amendment.

See same case below, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 55, 101 S. W. 900.

Mr. William H. Field for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles F. Taylor for defendant in error.

499] April 26, 1909. Per Curiam*: Writ of Error dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15

Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Burt v. Smith, 203 U. S. 135, 51 L. ed. 126, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 485, 51 L. ed. 893, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Tracy v. Ginzberg, 205 U. S. 170, 51 L. ed. 755, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Thompson v. Kentucky, 209 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 822, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

MICHAEL DONOHUE, Appellant, v. EL PASO & SOUTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 516.]

Estoppel—by permitting expenditures—ejectment or trespass against railway company.

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Charles F. Ainsworth for appellant. Messrs. A. B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and E. E. Ellenwood for appellee.

April 26, 1909. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed. Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 873, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 157, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794.

FRANK J. LOGAN et al., Appellants, v. FARMERS' DEPOSIT NATIONAL BANK OF PITTSBURGH, PA. et al. [No. 745.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which modified a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of West Virginia by rejecting all but $22,500 of a claim against the bankrupt's estate, which had been allowed by the Circuit Court at $100,000.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 465.

*Mr. Hector M. Hitchings for appel-[501]lants.

Messrs. A. Leo Weil and B. M. Ambler for appellees.

April 26, 1909. Per Curiam: Appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, on authority of Coder v. Arts, decided April 5, 1909, 213 U. S. 223, ante, 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF ISAAC HELLER, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Abraham A. Berman for petitioner.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY OF TEXAS et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. S. M. KENNEDY. [No. 817.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Hunt County, in that state, in favor of a railway employee in an action against the railway company for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by its negligence. The Federal question asserted to be involved was the validity, under the due process of law and equal protection of the laws clauses of United States Const. 14th Amendment, of Texas Laws 1905, chap. 163, modifying the common-law doctrine of assumed risk in suits against railway and street railway companies.

See same case below (Tex. Civ. App.) 112 S. W. 339.

Messrs. James Hagerman, J. M. Bryson, and A. B. Browne for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Charles A. Culberson for defendant in error.

May 3, 1909. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

YADKIN RIVER POWER Co., Plaintiff in Error, v. WHITNEY Co. [No. 835.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Montgomery County, in that state, dismissing proceedings to condemn a water power. The Federal question asserted to be involved was the unconstitutionality, under the Federal Constitution, of North Carolina Pub. Laws 1907, chap. 74, taking away the right to condemn water powers.

See same case below (N. C.) 63 S. E. 188.

Messrs. Wm. A. Guthrie and Frederick M. Leonard for plaintiff in error

Messrs. Thomas Patterson. Burton Craige, Thomas J. Jerome, and W. A. Way for defendant in error.

May 17, 1909. Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

GRANITE BITUMINOUS PAVING Co., Appellant, v. JOHN LANDIS et al. [No. 528.]

Federal courts—jurisdictional amount.

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit in equity, brought by a contractor for a public improvement, to enjoin the bringing of suits by abutting owners, pursuant to an alleged conspiracy by which damages for an alleged change of grade are sought, and to foreclose the liens of the special tax bills upon the several abutting lots, none of which bills is for an amount equal to $2,000.

53 L. ed.

Messrs. Edward P. Johnson and *W. [505] L. Sturdevant for appellant.

No appearance for appellees.

May 17, 1909. Per Curiam: The Circuit Court properly held that it had no jurisdiction, for want of the jurisdictional amount, and its decree dismissing the bill is affirmed with costs.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF HENRY C. PEARSON, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Messrs. Charles F. Carusi, C. D. Pennebaker, and Eugene A. Jones for petitioner.

No opposition.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM J. TOBIN, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson for petitioner.

No opposition.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF ANTON KRISTIANSON, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson for petitioner.

No opposition.

June 1, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY Co., Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 179.]

Principal and surety—liability of surety on official bond.

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Montana, in favor of the United States in an action against the surety on the bond of an Indian agent, in which defendant set up the defenses that the vouchers rejected as containing material misrepresentations also contained some correct items, which reduced the actual loss to the United States to less than $2,000, that the bond contained conditions in excess of the statutory requirements, and that the agent had been indicted and convicted for his malfeasance in office.

See same case below, 80 C. C. A. 446, 150 Fed. 550.

Messrs. Milton S. Gunn and J. Kemp Bartlett for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Russell for defendant in error.

May 24, 1909. Judgment affirmed by an equally divided court, and cause remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Montana.

511]*BERNARR McFADDEN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 720.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 165 Fed. 51.

Mr. Henry M. Earle for petitioner.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

March 1, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. DANIEL J. RIMEB et al. [No. 730.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

March 1, 1909. Granted.

GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOHN F. DEVINE, Administrator, etc. [No. 731.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. G. W. Kretzinger for petitioner.

Mr. Edward Maher for respondent.

March 8, 1909. Denied.

LAWRENCE JOHNSON & Co., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 733.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 728.

Messrs. Howard T. Walden and Henry J. Webster for petitioners.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

March 8, 1909. Denied.

512]*DOWAGIAC MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Petitioner v. McSHERRY MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al. [No. 734.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. See same case below, 89 C. C. A. 26, 160 Fed. 948, on rehearing, 89 C. C. A. 512, 163 Fed. 34.

Messrs. Fred L. Chappell and Morison R. Waite for petitioner.

Messrs. E. E. Wood and Joseph Wilby for respondents.

March 8, 1909. Denied.

RUBBER TIRE WHEEL COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY et al. [No. 736.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 53 C. C. A. 583, 116 Fed. 363.

Messrs. F. P. Fish, Thomas W. Bakewell, Border Bowman, Charles W. Stapleton, and Clarence P. Byrnes for petitioners.

Mr. H. A. Toulmin for respondents.

March 8, 1909. Denied.

PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. ALLEN-LANE Co., et al. [No. 688]; PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. ALLEN-LANE Co. et al. [No. 689]; PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. MELVILLE L. COBB et al. [No. 690]; PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. MELVILLE L. COBB et al. [No. 691]; PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. GEORGE S. ROSENCRANTZ et al. [No. 692]; PATRICK LENNOX, Petitioner, v. GEORGE S. ROSENCRANTZ, et al. [No. 693].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 114.

Mr. John P. Leahy for petitioner.

Messrs. William H. Dunbar and Frederick P. Fish for respondents.

March 15, 1909. Denied.

THIRD NATIONAL BANK OF CINCINNATI et al., Petitioners, v. ZELLA CONAWAY, Administratrix, etc., et al. [No. 738.] [513]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 26.

Mr. George M. Hoffheimer for petitioners.

Mr. John Bassel for respondents.

March 22, 1909. Denied.

FRANK J. LOGAN et al., Petitioners, v. FARMERS' DEPOSIT NATIONAL BANK OF PITTSBURGH, PA. et al. [Nos. 745, 746.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari herein. See same case below, 168 Fed. 465.

Messrs. Hector M. Hitchings and Reese Blizzard for petitioners.

Messrs. A. Leo Weil and B. M. Ambler for respondents.

March 22, 1909. Denied.

SUE KIRKPATRICK et al., etc., Petitioners, v. ST. LOUIS & SAN FRANCISCO RAILROAD CO. [No. 757.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 87 C. C. A. 35, 159 Fed. 855.

Mr. Willard L. Sturdevant for petitioners.

Mr. W. F. Evans for respondent.

April 5, 1909. Denied.

FANNIE FINKS et al., Petitioners, v. FRED FLEMING et al. [No. 744.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. F. M. Etheridge and J. M. McCormick for petitioners.

Messrs. Maurice E. Locke, J. W. Perry, M. M. Crane, and William J. McKie for respondents.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

FRANK YESBERA, Petitioner, v. HARDESTY MANUFACTURING COMPANY, etc. [No. 753.]

514] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 120.

Messrs. Thomas H. Tracey and Almon Hall for petitioner.

Mr. Melville Church for respondents.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

JOHN B. HECKENDORN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 763.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 89 C. C. A. 165, 162 Fed. 141.

Messrs. Everit Brown and H. J. Cookinham for petitioner.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

WOLF BROTHERS & COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HAMILTON-BROWN SHOE COMPANY, [No. 764.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 165 Fed. 413.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell and Simeon M. Johnson for petitioner.

Messrs. Joseph R. Edson and Paul Bakewell for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN & HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WALTER BAKER & COMPANY, LIMITED. [No. 771.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 248.

Mr. William Greenough, for petitioner.

Messrs. Eugene P. Carver and Horace L. Cheyney for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Petitioner, v. DANIEL GARRIGAN. [No. 772.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. [515]

See same case below, 89 C. C. A. 494, 163 Fed. 16.

Messrs. Alfred S. Austrian and John B. Daish for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GEORGE F. HARDING et al. [No. 773.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 658.

Messrs. Levy Mayer and John B. Daish for petitioner.

Mr. George F. Harding for respondents.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

EAGLE OIL COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. VACUUM OIL COMPANY. [No. 788.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 89 C. C. A. 463, 162 Fed. 671.

Mr. Eugene Maekey for petitioners.

Messrs. C. Schuyler Davis and Howard L. Osgood for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ROBERT KING. [No. 789.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 892.

Mr. John B. Daish for petitioner.

Mr. Lindorf O. Whitnel for respondent.

April 12, 1909. Denied.

BROWN-KETCHAM IRON WORKS, Petitioner, v. BANK OF COMMERCE & TRUST COMPANY et al. [No. 768.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 398.

Mr. Caruthers Ewing for petitioner.

Mr. J. W. Canada for respondents.

April 19, 1909. Denied.

516]*NORTH CAROLINA MINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. G. R. WESTFELDT et al. [No. 792.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 706.

Messrs. James H. Merrimon, Charles A. Moore, Joseph J. Hooker, and Thomas S. Rollins for petitioner.

Mr. Alfred S. Barnard for respondents.

April 19, 1909. Denied.

LA COMPAGNIE GENERALE TRANSATLANTIQUE, Petitioner, v. PATRICK MAGUIRE. [No. 798.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 34.

Mr. Joseph P. Nolan for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

April 19, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. BERNARD CITROEN. [No. 796.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

Messrs. W. Wickham Smith and John K. Maxwell for respondent.

April 19, 1909. Granted.

ISIDORE MEYERSON, Petitioner, v. HARRY HART, et al., etc. [No. 785.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 965.

Mr. George Ryall for petitioner.

Mr. Benjamin N. Cardozo for respondents.

April 26, 1909. Denied.

METROPOLITAN TRUST COMPANY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK et al. [No. 804.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 1021.

Messrs. James Byrne, Carl Taylor, L. L. Lewis, and R. B. Davis for petitioner.

Messrs. Henry W. Anderson, Arthur H. Van Brunt, Hill Carter, and John Pickrell for respondents.

April 26, 1909. Denied.

H. MUELLER MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOSEPH H. GLAUBER. [No. 809.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 169 Fed. 110.

Messrs. Charles E. Pickard, A. H. Adams, and J. L. Jackson for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles C. Linthicum and W. Clyde Jones for respondent.

April 26, 1909. Denied.

O. J. HILL et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGE W. WALKER, etc. [No. 812.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 241.

Messrs. George B. Webster and Clayton E. Emig for petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

April 26, 1909. Denied.

A. J. FENN, Petitioner, v. W. H. LOUISELLE, Use, etc. [No. 786.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 87 C. C. A. 670, 160 Fed. 458.

Messrs. H. A. Herbert, Benjamin Micou, and Richard P. Whiteley for petitioner.

Mr. Frederick T. Myers for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

CHARLES NICKELL, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 794.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 88 C. C. A. 562, 161 Fed. 702; on rehearing, 167 Fed. 741.

Messrs. Thomas O'Day and Martin L. Pipes for petitioner.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

May 3, 1909. *Denied.

[518

214 U. S.

WALTER S. EDDY et al., Executors, etc., Petitioners, v. CAROLINE M. EDDY. [No. 800.]
Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 590.

Messrs. Watts S. Humphrey and Benton Hanchett for petitioners.

Mr. Alfred Lucking for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

J. A. SCRIVEN COMPANY, Petitioner, v. M. M. NEWCOMER et al. [No. 801.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 621.

Messrs. Arthur v. Briesen and George W. Case, Jr., for petitioner.

Messrs. T. S. Webb and Lewis M. G. Baker for respondents.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

SNARE & TRIEST COMPANY, Petitioner, v. FANNIE FRIEDMAN, by Her Next Friend, Samuel Friedman. [No. 806.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 169 Fed. 1.

Mr. Hector M. Hitchings for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

WILLIAM N. CAMP, Petitioner, v. LAKE DRUMMOND CANAL & WATER COMPANY. [No. 808.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 163 Fed. 238.

Messrs. J. H. Corbitt and T. D. Savage for petitioner.

Mr. Theodore S. Garnett for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

519]*CLAUDE W. MASON, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 810.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 89 C. C. A. 63, 162 Fed. 23.

Mr. G. A. Hanson, for petitioner.

The Attorney General, the Solicitor General and Assistant Attorney General Fowler for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

53 L. ed.

POCAHONTAS COAL & COKE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOSEPH S. GILLESPIE. [No. 811.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 163 Fed. 992.

Messrs. Joseph S. Clark and A. W. Reynolds for petitioner.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and J. W. Chapman for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

W. S. HARLAN et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 813.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. William W. Flournoy and J. F. Stallings for petitioners.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Russell for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

ROBERT GALLAGHER et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 814.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. William W. Flournoy and J. F. Stallings for petitioners.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Russell for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

E. L. VICKERS et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 815.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to[520 the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. William W. Flournoy for petitioners.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for the respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

FREDERICK J. LISMAN et al., Petitioners, v. MILWAUKEE, LAKE SHORE, & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 816.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington, Delos McCurdy, and Charles K. Allen for petitioners.

Mr. Edward M. Hyzer for respondents.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 818.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Edmund F. Trabuc, J. C. Doolan, Attila Cox, Jr., and Blewett Lee for petitioner.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

ADOLPH KUFFLER, Petitioner, v. HINSDALE, SMITH, & COMPANY et al. [No. 832.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 1021.

Mr. Max J. Kohler for petitioner.

Mr. Benjamin Tuska for respondents.

May 3, 1909. Denied.

LUFKIN LAND & LUMBER Co., Petitioner, v. BEAUMONT TIMBER Co., LIMITED. [No. 821.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the 521] United States *Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. A. P. Pajo for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS et al., Petitioners, v. BRYANT & BOND Co. [No. 833.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. F. M. Etheridge, and J. M. McCormick for petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RAILWAY Co., Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 837.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Henry C. Cunningham, Alexander R. Lawton, T. M. Cunningham, Jr., and R. E. Steiner for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

WESTERN RAILWAY OF ALABAMA, Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 838.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Robert E. Steiner for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

SOUTH & NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD Co., Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 841.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth *Circuit. [522]

Messrs. Albert S. Brandeis, Gregory L. Smith, Henry L. Stone, and Geo. W. Jones for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

NASHVILLE, CHATTANOOGA, & ST. LOUIS RAILWAY, Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 842.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Albert S. Brandeis, Gregory L. Smith, Henry L. Stone, and Geo. W. Jones for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD Co., Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 843.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Albert S. Brandeis, Gregory L. Smith, Henry L. Stone, and Geo. W. Jones for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. RAILROAD COMMISSION OF ALABAMA et al. [No. 845.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Adrian H. Joline for petitioner.

Messrs. Alexander M. Garber and Samuel D. Weakley for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

CORNELL STEAMBOAT Co., Owner, etc., Petitioner, v. WILLIAM K. HAMMOND et al. [No. 849.]

523] *Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 693.

Messrs. J. Parker Kerlin and Amos Van Etten for petitioner.

Messrs. James Emerson Carpenter and Samuel Park for respondents.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

WEST INDIA STEAMSHIP Co., Petitioner, v. CLYDE COMMERCIAL STEAMSHIPS, LIMITED, Owner, etc. [No. 850.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Charles S. Haight for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and John M. Woolsey for respondent.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

JOHN C. LYNCH, Collector of Internal Revenue, Petitioner, v. UNION TRUST Co. OF SAN FRANCISCO et al., Trustees. [No. 851.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 164 Fed. 161.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner

Mr. H. T. Newcomb for respondents.

Mr. Barry Mohun, amicus curiae.

May 17, 1909. Denied.

TANG TUN et al., Petitioners, v. HARRY EDSELL, Chinese Inspector, etc. [No. 852.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. James A. Kerr for petitioners.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Granted.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. ALBERT ECKSTEIN. [No. 885.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to 524] *the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

Mr. Albert H. Washburn for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Granted.

A. H. GRIGSBY, Petitioner, v. R. L. RUSSELL et al., Administrators, etc. [No. 886.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. John A. Pitts for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Granted.

A. D. CLARKE et ux., Petitioners, v. T. W. HARRISON. [No. 853.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 164 Fed. 539.

Mr. Charles A. Clark for petitioners.

Mr. T. W. Harrison for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

COLORADO & SOUTHERN RAILWAY Co., Petitioner, v. J. J. SATTERFIELD. [No. 861.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Elmer E. Whitted for petitioner.

Messrs. Cone Johnson and J. M. Edwards for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

LEEDS & CATLIN Co., Petitioner, v. AMERICAN GRAPHOPHONE Co. [No. 865.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Louis Hicks for petitioner.

Messrs. Philip Mauro and C. A. L. Massie for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

*CITY OF OWOSSO, Petitioner, v. WARREN BROTHERS Co. [No. 868.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 309.

Messrs. Henry N. Paul, Jr., and Joseph C. Frailey for petitioner.

Messrs. W. K. Richardson and James M. Head for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

NEW YORK PRODUCE EXCHANGE BANK, Petitioner, v. ROBERT PATERSON HOUSTON et al., etc. [No. 872.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. James E. Kelly for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Chas. R. Hickox for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. RUSCH & COMPANY [No. 875] UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. TITUS BLATTER & COMPANY [No. 876]; and UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. W. B. QUAINANCE [No. 877].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 523.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

Mr. Albert H. Washburn for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

TWEEDIE TRADING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM S. WALSH et al. [No. 879]; and TWEEDIE TRADING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. STEAMSHIP HERM, etc. [No. 880].

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. George Hiram Mann for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Chas. R. Hickox for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

526]*W. FRANK KINNEY, Collector of Internal Revenue, Petitioner, v. SAMUEL MORRIS CONANT et al., Executors, etc. [No. 882.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 720.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

Messrs. Walter F. Angell and Frank H. Swan for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

CHARLES W. PINKNEY et al., etc., Petitioners, v. CHURCH COOPERAGE COMPANY et al. [No. 884.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Harrington Putnam for petitioners.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Charles R. Hickox for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

NORFOLK COLD STORAGE & ICE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 887.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 168 Fed. 1022.

Messrs. Floyd Hughes and J. L. Jeffries for petitioner.

Messrs. Theodore W. Reath, R. M. Hughes, and John H. Holt for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

STEAMSHIP MIRAMAR COMPANY, LIMITED, Petitioner, v. MUNSON STEAMSHIP LINE. [No. 889.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 166 Fed. 722.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Charles R. Hickox for petitioner.

Mr. Charles S. Haight for respondent.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

NEW YORK & PORTO RICO STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ARCHIBALD H. BULL et al., Owners, *etc. [No. 890.] [527

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 792.

Mr. Frederick M. Brown for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Charles R. Hickox for respondents.

May 24, 1909. Denied.

F. S. KRETSINGER, Trustee, Petitioner, v. JAMES H. BROWN, as Executor, etc., et al. [No. 864.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 165 Fed. 612.

Mr. Henry T. Rogers for petitioner.

Mr. Henry A. Dubbs for respondents.

June 1, 1909. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. BERLINGER, BROWN, & MEYER. [No. 896.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 167 Fed. 800.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph G. Kammerlohr for respondents.

June 1, 1909. Denied.

JOHNSON R. MORRIS, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 897.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below on first writ of error, 88 C. C. A. 532, 161 Fed. 672; second writ of error, 168 Fed. 682.

Messrs. Thomas T. Fauntleroy and Shepard Barclay for petitioner.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for respondent.

June 1, 1909. Denied.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al.,
Plaintiffs in Error, v. B. F. ALLEN. [No.
155.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas.

See same case below, 100 Tex. 525, 101
S. W. 792.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, W. L. Hall, D. D.
Duncan for plaintiffs in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

528] February 24, 1909. Dismissed *with costs, on motion of Mr. W. L. Hall, for the plaintiffs in error.

ALBERT H. RUSCH, Plaintiff in Error, v.
ESCANABA TIMBER LAND COMPANY. [No.
119.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

See same case below, 147 Mich. 619, 111
N. W. 345.

Messrs. O. H. Reed and E. C. Chapin for plaintiff in error.

Mr. C. C. Lancaster for defendant in error.

February 26, 1909. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

EDISON ELECTRIC COMPANY, Appellant, v.
CITY OF PASADENA et al. [No. 122.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

Mr. H. H. Trowbridge for appellant.

Messrs. C. J. Willett, William J. Hun-saker, and J. P. Wood for appellees.

March 16, 1909. Dismissed with costs, on authority of counsel for appellant.

W. A. HUFF, Individually and as Trustee, etc., et al., Appellants, v. WILLIAM L.
BIDWELL et al. [No. 126.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Augustus O. Bacon for appellants.

Messrs. Minter Wimberley, Clifford L. Anderson, N. E. Harris, Thomas B. Felder, Jr., and Olin J. Wimberley for appellees.

March 17, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

SANTA RITA MINING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JAMES N. UPTON. [No. 134.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. W. B. Childers for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

529] March 18, 1909. Dismissed *with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

53 L. ed.

GARFIELD MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, Plaintiff in Error, v. HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND et al., Commissioners of the District of Columbia. [No. 460.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. James H. Hayden for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendants in error.

March 22, 1909. Dismissed with costs on motion of Mr. James H. Hayden for the plaintiff in error.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK ON THE RELATION OF THE NEW YORK ELECTRIC
LINES Co., Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM B. ELLISON, Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity of the City of New York, et al. [No. 116.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 115 App. Div. 254, 101 N. Y. Supp.
55; in court of appeals, 188 N. Y. 523, 81
N. E. 447.

Messrs. W. B. Burnet and J. Aspinwall
Hodge for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. F. K. Pendleton and Theodore
Connolly for defendants in error.

April 5, 1909. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney, in behalf of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

MARIA CRUZ DE GODINES et al., Appellants,
v. FRANCIS H. DEXTER. [No. 646.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico.

Messrs. Willis Sweet and T. D. Mott, Jr., for appellants.

No appearance for appellee.

April 5, 1909. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Frederic D. McKenney, in behalf of counsel.

ORDER OF RAILROAD TELEGRAPHERS, Appellant, v. LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAIL-ROAD COMPANY. [No. 135.]

*Appeal from the Circuit Court of [530 the United States for the Western District of Kentucky.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 437.

Mr. Benjamin F. Washer for appellant.

Messrs. James P. Helm, Henry L. Stone, and Benjamin D. Warfield for appellee.

April 7, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Sixteenth Rule, on motion of Mr. T. Kennedy Helm for the appellee.

EMETERIO ALVAREZ, Potencia Mariano, et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. SEVERINA LERMA MARTINEZ DE ALMEDA. [No. 147.]
In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. John M. Thurston for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Marion Butler, Josiah M. Vale, and Lionel D. Hargis for defendant in error.

April 8, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

HUACHUCA WATER COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF TOMBSTONE. [No. 160.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Allen R. English for appellant.

Mr. H. L. Pickett for appellee.

April 14, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

LOUISVILLE & SOUTHERN INDIANA TRACTION COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. ZACH T. LEAF. [No. 186.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana.

Mr. Merrill Moores for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. George E. Sullivan and Horace L. B. Atkisson for defendant in error.

April 22, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 595.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of 531] New York.

Mr. Joseph G. Dudley for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

April 26, 1909. Dismissed on motion of counsel for plaintiff in error.

C. ELMER SMITH et al., Executors, etc., Appellants, v. KING OF ARIZONA MINING & MILLING COMPANY et al. [No. 195.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. J. F. Conroy for appellants.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives for appellees.

April 27, 1909. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

CANDIDO ACOSTA, Antonio Acosta, and Anselmo Acosta, Appellants, v. PEOPLE OF PORTO RICO. [No. 199.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill for appellants.

No appearance for appellees.

April 28, 1909. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. George H. Lamar in behalf of counsel for the appellants.

CENTURY MERCANTILE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN HOFMAN COMPANY. [No. 718.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of New York.

Mr. Herbert D. Bailey for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John A. Barhite for defendant in error.

April 29, 1909. Judgment reversed, upon confession of error and request of defendant in error, and cause remanded to be proceeded in according to law and justice.

JACINTHO MIGUEL, Plaintiff in Error, v. TERRITORY OF HAWAII. [No. 211.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii.

Mr. Jacintho Miguel in propria persona.

No appearance for defendant in error.

April 30, 1909. Dismissed with costs *pursuant to the Tenth Rule. [532]

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. W. H. TUCKER, Guardian, etc. [No. 347.]

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Second Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and W. L. Hall for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Theodore Mack for defendant in error.

May 3, 1909. Judgment reversed with costs, upon confession of error and request of defendant in error, and cause remanded to be proceeded in according to law and justice.

TOWN OF STEAMBOAT SPRINGS et al., Appellants, v. STEAMBOAT SPRINGS ELECTRIC Co. [No. 433.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

Mr. Edward P. Costigan for appellants.

Messrs. Tyson S. Dines, Elmer E. Whitted, and Peter J. Holme for appellee.

May 17, 1909. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for appellants.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF MARY HATCH
RIGGS, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner.
[No. —, Original.]
Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Mandamus.
March 1, 1909. Granted.

ROLLING MILL COMPANY OF AMERICA et al.,
Petitioners, v. CANTON ROLL & MACHINE
COMPANY et al. [No. 746.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Mr. Hector M. Hitchings for petitioners.
53 J. ed.

Messrs. A. Leo Weil and B. M. Amber for respondents.

March 22, 1909. Denied.

PERE ALFREDO LUIS BAGLIN, Superior General, etc., Appellant, v. CUSENIER COM-PANY. [No. 614.]

Petition and cross petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Philip Mauro and C. A. L. Massie for appellant.

Messrs. Roger Foster and A. L. Pincoffs for appellee.

April 19, 1909. Granted.

APPENDIX I.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

ORDER.

The Reporter having represented that, owing to the number of decisions at the present term, it would be impracticable to put the reports in one volume, it is therefore now here ordered that he publish an additional volume in this year, pursuant to § 681 of the Revised Statutes.

May 17, 1909.

APPENDIX II.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

ORDER.

It is now here ordered by the court that all the cases on the docket not decided, and all the other business of the term not disposed of, be, and the same are hereby, continued until the next term.

June 1, 1909.

APPENDIX III.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

ORDER.

It is now here ordered by the court that the Rules for Practice and Procedure under § 25 of the act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright, approved March 4, 1909, to go into effect July 1, 1909, this day adopted and established by the court, be, and the same are hereby, promulgated as such.

June 1, 1909.

Rules adopted by the Supreme Court of the United States for practice and procedure under section 25 of AN ACT TO AMEND AND CONSOLIDATE THE ACTS RESPECTING COPYRIGHT, approved March 4, 1909. To go into effect July 1, 1909.

1.

The existing rules of equity practice, so far as they may be applicable, shall be enforced in proceedings instituted under section twenty-five (25) of the act of March 4th, 1909, entitled, "An Act to Amend and Consolidate the Acts Respecting Copyright."

2.

A copy of the alleged infringement of copyright, if actually made, and a copy of the work alleged to be infringed, should accompany the petition, or its absence be explained; except in cases of alleged infringement by the public performance of dramatic and dramatico-musical compositions, the delivery of lectures, sermons, addresses, and so forth, the infringement of copyright upon sculptures and other similar works, and in any case where it is not feasible.

3.

Upon the institution of any action, suit, or proceeding, or at any time thereafter, and before the entry of final judgment or decree therein, the plaintiff or complainant, or his authorized agent or attorney, may file with the clerk of any court given jurisdiction under § 34 of the act of March 4, 1909, an affidavit stating upon the best of his knowledge, information, and belief, the number and location, as near as may be, of the alleged infringing copies, records, plates, molds, matrices, etc., or other means for making the copies alleged to infringe the copyright, and the value of the same, and with such affidavit shall file with the clerk a bond executed by at least two sureties and approved by the court, or a commissioner thereof.

4.

Such bond shall bind the sureties in a specified sum, to be fixed by the court, but not less than twice the reasonable value of such infringing copies, plates, records, molds, matrices, or other means for making such infringing copies, and be conditioned for the prompt prosecution of the action, suit, or proceedings; for the return of said articles to the defendant, if they or any of them are adjudged not to be infringements, or if the action abates, or is discontinued before they are returned to the defendant; and for the payment to the defendant of any damages which the court may award to him against the plaintiff or complainant. Upon the filing of said affidavit and bond, and the approval of said bond, the clerk shall issue a writ directed to the marshal of the district where the said infringing copies, plates, records, molds, matrices, etc., or other means of making such infringing copies shall be stated in said affidavit to be located, and generally to any marshal of the United States, directing the said marshal to forthwith seize and hold the same, subject to the order of the court issuing said writ, or of the court of the district in which the seizure shall be made.

5.

The marshal shall thereupon seize said articles or any smaller or larger part thereof he may then or thereafter find, using such force as may be reasonably necessary in the premises, and serve on the defendant a copy of the affidavit, writ, and bond by delivering the same to him personally, if he can be found within the district, or, if he cannot be found, to his agent, if any, or to the person from whose possession the articles are taken, or, if the owner, agent, or such person cannot be found within the district, by leaving said copy at the usual place of abode of such owner or agent, with a person of suitable age and discretion, or at the place where said articles are found, and shall make immediate return of such seizure, or attempted seizure, to the court. He shall also attach to said articles a tag or label stating the fact of such seizure, and warning all persons from in any manner interfering therewith.

6.

A marshal who has seized alleged infringing articles shall retain them in his possession, keeping them in a secure place, subject to the order of the court.

7.

Within three days after the articles are seized, and a copy of the affidavit, writ, and bond are served, as hereinbefore provided, the defendant shall serve upon the clerk a notice that he excepts to the amount of the penalty of the bond, or to the sureties of the plaintiff or complainant, or both, otherwise he shall be deemed to have waived all objection to the amount of the penalty of the bond and the sufficiency of the sureties thereon. If the court sustain the exceptions, it may order a new bond to be executed by the plaintiff or complainant, or, in default thereof, within a time to be named by the court, the property to be returned to the defendant.

8.

Within ten days after service of such notice, the attorney of the plaintiff or complainant shall serve upon the defendant or his attorney a notice of the justification of the sureties, and said sureties shall justify before the court or a judge thereof at the time therein stated.

9.

The defendant, if he does not except to the amount of the penalty of the bond or the sufficiency of the sureties of the plaintiff or complainant, may make application to the court for the return to him of the articles seized, upon filing an affidavit stating all material facts and circumstances tending to show that the articles seized are not infringing copies, records, plates, molds, matrices, or means for making the copies alleged to infringe the copyright.

10.

Thereupon the court, in its discretion, and after such hearing as it may direct, may order such return upon the filing by the defendant of a bond executed by at least two sureties, binding them in a specified sum, to be fixed in the discretion of the court, and conditioned for the delivery of said specified articles, to abide the order of the court. The plaintiff or complainant may require such sureties to justify within ten days of the filing of such bond.

11.

Upon the granting of such application and the justification of the sureties on the bond, the marshal shall immediately deliver the articles seized to the defendant.

12.

Any service required to be performed by any marshal may be performed by any deputy of such marshal.

13.

For services in cases arising under this section, the marshal shall be entitled to the same fees as are allowed for similar services in other cases.

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

3 1867 00062 0075

Ref 348.73 Un35
United States. Supreme Court.
Cases argued and decided in the Supreme Court of the

